SANGERFEST CAME TO A CLOSE SUNDAY

One of the Most Eventful and Successful Musical Meetings Held In Northern Minn.

Comes to a Close Last Sunday Afternoon With an Outing at "Squaw Point"

What was one of the most interesting meetings and the greatest musical event in the history of this city and possibly in any city in Northern Minnesota, came to a close last Sunday, when the much talked of and widely advertised Sangerfest came to a close. Never has such a large number of accomplished musicians ever gathered in our midst at one time and only those who were fortunate in being present at the concert and in hearing the resu[illegible] training for this even[illegible] choruses, soloists [illegible] can realize the [illegible] the programs.

It is only with [illegible] linquent work on [illegible] mittee in charge tha[illegible] [illegible]ninous task of arranging everything so satisfactorily could be accomplished, and as a result when the day of the festivities dawned there was nothing left undone to make the event a pleasant and notable one, and, in accordance, the city were dressed in gala attire for the event and furnished a most beautiful and brilliant spectacle.

While a larger attendance from the outside was expected, the spacious Auditorium, nevertheless, was fairly crowded at both the concerts and in attendance were people who had traveled hundreds of miles to take in the concert.

The choruses, and others who accompanied them, arrived on the 11:05 Great Northern train Friday morning and was met at the depot by the City Band and citizens and escorted down town in automobiles and carriages. In the afternoon preceeding the grand rehearsal the address of welcome on part of the city and local choir was given by Rev. Roseland, and Mayor Hamre. At five o'clock the grand parade took place and was participated in by all the choruses, soloists, band and citizens in carriages and automobiles, and was lead by Grand Marshall Backe. At 8 o'clock in the evening the opening concert was given in the Auditorium and was opened by an overture by the orchestra, lead by Prof. H. G. Maxwell of this city.

At 10 o'clock Saturday morning automobiles left the Auditorium with the visitors on a sight-seeing tour of the city. At four o'clock Saturday afternoon the annual convention of Red River Valley Singers association took place in the Commercial Club Rooms and the following are the officers elected to represent the association the coming year:

President—Syver Serumgaard, Devils Lake N. D.

Vice Pres.—Dr. Kjelland, Fargo N. D.

Secy—Ole Holm, Devils Lake, N. D.

Treasurer—H. P. Halvorson, Fargo, N. D.

Director—In—Chief—P. A. Rudd Fargo, N. D.

Assistant Director—Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, Thief River Falls, Minn.

The following resolutions were adopted by the guests at the convention Saturday.

AN APPRECIATION

Before leaving your beautiful city after having spent with you three days of unalloyed pleasure we feel it an imperative duty to express in this formal manner a sincere and hearty "thank you."

We want to thank you, Mr. Mayor, for the unconditional surrender of the city into our hands. Our fondest hope will ever be that we return it even better than we found it.

We want to thank you, citizens, for the cordial welcome you have extended to us and the courtesy shown us while guests among you.

We want to thank you, ladies, for the attention given us as well as our lady friends who came here to spend a holi[illegible] with us.

We want to thank you boys and girls, for the civility and respect paid to every one of our visitors.

We want to thank you, owners of automobiles and homes, placed at our disposal and the many acts of real hospitality shown us in every conceivable way.

We want to thank the Commercial club, the Antlers club, the Auditorium company and the light company, for turning over to our use everything in their possession and for looking after the smallest detail for our convenience.

And we want to thank you "Brage" who made this meeting possible. You and your wives and daughters and sisters and cousins who have worked early and late and brought to a complete arrangement everything conceivable for our comfort, entertainment and enjoyment.

We leave you with "three cheers and a tiger" for Thief River Falls and with an earnest wish that it will some day be our fortune to in some measure reciprocate.

UNITED SCANDINAVIAN SINGERS OF THE RED RIVER VALLEY.

Just preceeding the concert on Saturday evening large crowds gathered outside the Auditorium to witness the high dive of Prof. William, of Bemidiji, from the top of Auditorium to the life saving net below. Prof. William, who was announced to have defied the laws of gravitation on hundreds of occasions and dived from any height, nevertheless turned out to be a rag dummy and as a consequence there was no job for the undertaker and no funeral expenses to pay as was expected by the innocent on lookers.

Just after the concert on Saturday evening the banquet held away at the Mozark roller rink and was prepared and served by the Ladies of the United church and this lasted to the wee small hours of the morning. In addition to the swell "feed" speeches and toasts were delivered and music was rendered by the Mozark Orchestra.

On Sunday, as the closing number on the Sangerfest program, was held the outing at "Squaw Point", which lasted throughout the day, and the guests departed on the special train which came up from Crookston Sunday afternoon and brought them back to that place on their journey to their various points of destination.

Fargo is the place selected to hold the Grand Sangerfest which will comprise all the choirs in the American Association and two years hence the Sangerfest of the Red River Valley Singers Association will be held in Devils Lake, N. D.

The orchestra under the directorship of Prof. Maxwell of this city was, in addition to the best musical talent in the city, composed of some of the very best musicians in the state, and numbered in all about thirty members.

The following outside musicians took part in the orchestra:

Violin—Shefstad,	Crookston.
" —Hanson,	Grand Forks.
Viola —Flaaton,	Duluth.
Cello — "	"
Bass —Holten,	"
Tympani,———	"
Flute—Jacklin,	Warren.
Clarinets—Hertzgaard,	Fargo.

Railroads Must Report Accidents By Wire.

Washington, June 24.—Every common railway carrier will be required, after July 1, 1911, to report to the interstate commerce commission by telegraph, "any collision, derailment, or other accident," resulting in death of one or more persons.

By the terms of an order just issued by the commission, the report must be sent "immediately after the occurrence of the accident," by a responsible officer of the carrier."

Details of railway accidents have not in the past been promptly reported to the commission. In many cases they are obtained only by circuitous methods.

The commission being required by law to keep a record of such accidents, decided more drastic rules of reporting were necessary.

"Flower of the Ranch."

Picturesque and colorful are the three acts of "The Flower of the Ranch," the successful musical comedy which comes to the Auditorium Monday, July 11 for an engagement of one night.

The foothills of the Rockies in California is the locale of the play, and the characters are such as one might naturally expect to find among rough environment. There are Indians, Mexicans, cowpunchers, ranchmen, and little "Flower," an attractive specimen of budding womanhood beloved by everyone. Jack Farnum, the hero of the plausible and spirited story, is a manly young rancher, whose property an unprincipled sheriff seeks to secure with the aid of a Mexian bad man. Little "Flower", whose affection for Jack is undisguised, is instrumental in thwarting the designs of the plotters, of course. The comedy element in the play is constant and keen. Skivers, a smart and scrappy chore boy, with a penchant for timely rhyme and whose nimble feet execute divers eccentric dances, romps gaily through the three acts with Flower; while Timberline Ike and Little Mac, an Irish sergeant at the military post, contribute their share of fun. "The Flower of the Ranch" is not a "shoot up opera," for there is but one pistol shot during the action of the play, and that is "off-stage." It is good, clean, wholesome entertainment of decidedly novel character, and ought to duplicate in this city its great success of last season in the large cities of the The cast of principles this season is, with two exceptions, the same as last.

PLAYED A MEAN TRICK

The Crookston Ball Team Places Locals in a Bad Predicament.

Failed to Keep Their Appointment. Played a Game With Grafton Instead.

That the Crookston bunch of would-be ball tossers have as much regard for decency and respect as a "yaller" dog has for breaking into a prayer meeting was plainly shown when they failed to show up Sunday and keep their appointment to play with the local ball team, and, as a result, kept half the metropolis in suspense and waiting and placed the base ball boys in a bad predicament. The day was without a doubt the most favorable one for a game this season and it is doubtful if the ball park will ever again this season be graced with as large an attendance as this day had a prospect of having.

In order to get the best places a large crowd had gathered at the grounds in the early part of the afternoon, but as the visitors did not turn up, the money was refunded and the crowds turned "loose".

As a substitute for their Royal Highnesses the Crookston bunch sent up a team late in the afternoon which was supposed to be a crack bunch of amateurs, but as a matter of fact after the game had barely begun, plainly showed that they knew as much about the national game as Mother Eve knew about the Harem skirt or the aeroplane walk, and the locals scalped them to the tune of 20 to 5 without half trying to. They would have been making circles around the diamond yet had not manager Peterson begged of his men to stop the onslaught and let the visitors depart for home before midnight.

The reason assigned for the Crookston team's action on Sunday is that they played a game with the Grafton team at the former place, but as Manager Peterson says that he was not informed of this he has been the innocent victim of a practical joke, and it is one that will not be forgotten in a hurry.

The game in the evening, however, had a good attendance but the crowds left the field in the early part of the game, disgusted at the manner in which it was played.

Sweden has succeeded in demonstrating to the world the practicability of smelting iron ore by electricity. The question was only how to get it out in the quickest way and, most important of all, how to reduce the expense of getting it into pig iron. A contract was entered into last fall with the Trollhattan Electric Power company to take 3,000 horsepower for a period of three years. An experimental plant to smelt ore by means of electricity was installed and is said to be capable of turning out twenty tons of pig iron each twenty-four hours. Thus a saving of two-thirds has been effected, as compared with the cost under the old process. There is no doubt that by means of smelting ore by electricity Sweden has made a step forward which will soon attract the attention of all the mining centers of the world.

Some time ago the Swedish Augustana synod sent a petition to King Gustaf of Sweden asking him to stop the Mormon propaganda in that country. Three Mormon elders recently had an interview with the king and presented a resolution adopted at a mass meeting in Salt Lake City, Utah, in which the petition of the Augustana synod was denounced. The elders were cordially received by the king, but were informed that no action could be taken on the resolution further than to refer it to the proper officials of the Swedish government.

A Swedish Spitsbergen expedition—the twenty-third in order—departed last month from Stockholm aboard the steamer Viking, which, it is expected, will reach Spitsbergen in the beginning of July. The expedition, which consists of thirty-five persons, is under the leadership of B. Hogbom and can in a way be considered a direct sequence to a number of similar expeditions that have been made.

During the year of 1910 Sweden exported machinery amounting in value to over 33,000,000 crowns. Cream separators take the lead among machinery exported, being about one-third of all machinery exports. The second in order are motor machines, of which over 6,000,000 crowns' worth were exported.

Stockholm is having an interesting kennel show at present, which is attracting a good deal of attention. There are about 700 dogs on exhibition and over eighty prizes will be distributed.

From all parts of Sweden come discouraging reports regarding the crops. Drought is almost universal and it is feared that if general rains do not set in soon the crop will be cut in half.

Princess Maria departed from Stockholm during the first week in June for Malmo, from whence she continued her journey to Paris, via Trelleborg and Berlin.

During the past year the United Norwegian Lutheran church of America contributed $142,733.17 for its work in the home and foreign fields. The foreign missionary statistics recently compiled show that the church body has ten chief stations, five of which are on the island of Madagascar and the remainder in China. At the Norwegian Lutheran hospital in China 4,000 polyclinical patients have been treated. In 1910, 317 persons were baptized and 546 received instructions for baptism.

The old historic frigate Jylland, with which is connected many a stirring event in the history of the Danish navy, will in the near future be turned into a floating museum. Some time ago a German firm, which deals in old and dilapidated vessels, purchased the Jylland, but a number of patriotic Danes organized a company, raised some money and bought it back from the German firm, believing that such an historic old frigate should be returned again to Denmark. This deal went through and for some time the old frigate has been used as a freight transport in the Copenhagen harbor. Now it will be repaired and will become a museum for the Danish fish and export industry and as such will no doubt serve another important purpose.

A rather nervy affair took place in Kastager the other day in which two neighbors figure conspicuously. Both men are laboring men and one of them went to a neighboring town to be gone a few days. When he returned he found that his neighbor had not only appropriated his wife and children, but had also made away with all the household goods.

A large delegation of German socialists paid a visit to Copenhagen during the early part of this month. There were about 100 of them in all and they brought their cooking utensils and took turns at cooking. Most of them came from Kiel. Local Copenhagen socialists did not hold any demonstration in their honor.

Jens Ousen, who was a representative in the folkething from 1881 to 1906 from the Fredricia district, died at his home in Fredricia a few days ago, aged sixty-seven years. He leaves a considerable fortune and has for years donated freely to many institutions of charity in his home community.

FOR THE SUMMER CAPITOL

Congressman Nye and Minneapolis Committee Laying Plans.

Congressman Frank M. Nye, who returned to Minneapolis from Washington for a brief vacation, met the special "summer capitol" committee of the Commercial club, to talk over the prospects for establishing a presidential summer residence at Lake Minnetonka.

The details of the Minneapolis offer were explained to Mr. Nye by the members of the committee. Congressman Nye explained the situation at Washington, which precludes any action on the Minneapolis offer during the present extra session. The summer capitol matter will come up at the regular session which begins in December, so that there is plenty of time to prepare for hearings on Mr. Nye's resolution accepting the Minneapolis offer.

UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

Minnesota Law Giving Counties Ten Per Cent of License Money.

The 1909 law granting 10 per cent of all liquor license money collected by municipalities within their borders to the counties has been upheld by the state supreme court.

The decision was made in the case of Sibley county against the village of Gibbon. The county asked for $300, as 10 per cent of liquor license money collected by the village. The village contended that the money had been spent on schools and roads and had therefore defeated the county's right to the percentage.

The court held that the county's right to the tax could not be defeated.

ALLEGES VIOLATION OF LAW

Minneapolis Taxpayer Asks that County Board Be Removed.

Alfred Stringer of Minneapolis has filed a petition with Governor Eberhart asking for the removal from office of R. J. Upton, Frank W. Cook, C. W. Waddell, William Knight and C. M. E. Carlson, all county commissioners of Hennepin county, because they have conducted the affairs of the county "in a most unbusinesslike manner and that they fully and knowingly transacted business and expended money belonging to the taxpayers without authority of law."

FOLLOWS THE HIGHEST COURT

Minnesota Tribunal Uses the Word "Reasonable."

The state supreme court has applied the doctrine of "reasonableness" and "unreasonableness" to orders of the state railway and warehouse commission.

In upholding the order of the commission for a sidetrack from the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road at Mendota to a stone quarry and crushing plant near that place the court holds that the railways must obey all reasonable orders of the commission.

BREN IS AGAIN AT LIBERTY

Additional Bond Is Furnished for University Cashier.

J. D. Bren, deposed cashier of the state university, indicted on a charge of embezzling $2,616 from the institution, who was jailed for the third time pending a raising of his bail, was released on the presentation of $5,000 additional bail. This amount, added to the original sum of $10,000 offered by Bren's father and others, makes the total bail now $15,000.

Cantillon Fined $100.

"Joe" Cantillon, manager of the Minneapolis baseball team, and "Hub" Dawson, substitute catcher, pleaded guilty to charges of disorderly conduct before Judge Finehout in police court at St. Paul. A fine of $100 was imposed on each. The cases grew out of the attack on Napoleon Johnson, a colored rooter, at the Lexington baseball grounds May 31. Cantillon hit the negro on the head with a bat.

THREE BOYS DROWN IN RIVER

Tragedy at Sunday School Picnic Near Davenport, Ia.

Davenport, Ia., June 27.—Three boys, all less than fourteen years old, were drowned in the Mississippi river nine miles above Davenport, while attending the Sunday school picnic of the St. Paul's English Lutheran church.

The dead are: Roy McDonald and James and Raymond Wilson of Davenport.

None was able to swim. They waded into the river above their depth. Charles Curtis, sixteen years old, saved Raymond Arnold, a stepbrother of the Wilson boys, from a similar fate. Curtis brought Arnold to shore, but was too exhausted to return after the others.

Result of 30 Minutes' Use of Drag at Columbia, Mo.

Macadam road not consolidated being put in shape with a road drag. Note the drag has filled the ruts and moved the loose material towards the center of the driveway. The drag goes forward at an angle for this purpose. The road drag should be used upon gravel or macadam roads only when the road is wet and when it is desirable to fill up ruts.

THE SPLIT LOG DRAG

USE AND LIMITATIONS OF THIS DEVICE IN CARING FOR ROADS.

USE FOR CONVICT LABOR

Dragging Should Always Be Done Just After a Rain—Good Road Is One That Is Good and Usable 365 Days In Year.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

There is no road implement that will do more to make bad roads better than the split log drag, and none that is so inexpensive. A handy man can usually get up one at a cost of $3 or $4. Better ones can be bought of road machinery companies for $8 to $15. There is no patent on it, so there is no reason why they should not come into general use.

The problem of supplying prisoners with work that shall not compete unfairly with free labor is not yet solved. Here, however, is an article that can be readily made to advantage in the penitentiary and it would be well to have a few thousand turned out.

The writer desires in the outset to correct a misconception that seems quite general, and that is, that the split log drag is a solution of the good roads problem. It is nothing of the kind. It has its uses and its limitations. Unfortunately, the man who made it, and for which the country is under obligations, overshoots the mark in his slogan: "Good Roads Without Money." The drag is doing good work—it is a pity the inventor is not satisfied to put it and leave it where it belongs.

The drag is not only useful for earth roads, but serves an excellent purpose in keeping gravel roads in condition, and it may be used at times on macadam roads to advantage.

Dragging should always be done in or just following a rain. The surface should be quite wet. The drag should carry just enough weight so it will smooth the surface and fill the ruts without clogging the drag with an accumulation of mud before it. It should iron out and smooth the road without disturbing more than surface projections. Its main use is to fill the ruts and keep the center of the road to the proper crown so the water will readily find its way into the ditches.

The attempt to have the farmers voluntarily drag the road by their farms, or by co-operation have all the roads dragged, will never work out satisfactorily. Some will respond and do their duty, but the human hog must be reckoned with—the one who is supremely selfish, and takes pleasure in overturning the good work of another sometimes just to be mean—pure cussedness. The writer was told of an incident that illustrated this perverseness. A coarse grained middle aged man was heard to say: "T'other day I was coming back from town and I seen old man Jones out with a road drag in the rain—you'd a thought he owned the road. Say, you ought to a-seen that road when me and Jake druv over it. You wouldn't s'posed it had ever seen a drag. Jones was hot when he seen us coming. He tore around like a crazy man. We wouldn't row with an old man, so we give him the ha! ha! and went on."

It is no use to drag a road and then cut it up again. Let all such work as dragging be done and paid for and make it a heavy fine for any one to drive over a dragged road until it is dry enough so it will not cut up.

Gravel roads while new and compacting under the traffic show deep ruts along the wheel track and less ones made by the feet of the horses. When in this condition one or two round trips with the drag will fill the ruts and reform the surface and in doing so will move very little material. The forward movement of the drag should be at an angle so that when the material is pushed forward it is also carried to the center of the road.

The office of public roads will furnish bulletins upon the use of the road drag free upon application. Road officials and others would do well to send for them.

A good road is one that is good and usable 365 days in the year, a road whereon one may ride or drive with pleasure or have a full load without strain upon the horse, vehicle, or harness.

To do this the road must have a hard, smooth surface and offer the minimum of resistance. This requires the surface to be "metaled," as the English say, i. e., covered with gravel, broken stone or an equivalent.

An earth road may be an excellent one today and tomorrow a very bad one. It may be a delight in June and a fright in March. Such roads have the virtues of a balky horse—they are liable to fail when most wanted. With a stone or gravel road, leading from the farm, should a heavy rain occur in the busy season, when for a day or so it is too wet to go into the field, the errands to town may be done, several loads of grain or hogs taken to market, and the time well employed. With the average earth roads, when the fields are too wet to work, the roads are too muddy to travel. Hence, the writer holds to the opinion above expressed, that no earth road is entitled to be called a good road, because so much of the time it is positively bad.

The extravagant claims that have been made for the road drag are really holding back the building of good roads. Many have believed that all that was required to have good roads was to go up and down a streak of mud once or twice, say "Presto," and behold, a good highway. This is sheer nonsense. The loud acclaim of a "River to River Road," made good in an hour or so is a myth. This famous road was greatly improved by the dragging, but it is not a good road, and never will be until it is thoroughly drained, properly graded and has a hard, durable wearing surface placed upon it.

It is human nature to hunt for some easy, cheap and speedy way to do things, and usually no sooner has one discovered how to make some progress toward a solution, than he announces a complete revolutionary discovery that sets aside all experience and precedent, and gains something for nothing. The split log drag is directly in point.

The people may as well make up their minds now, as to find out later, that good roads cost money and lots of it, but they are worth many times their cost and they will pay for themselves over and over again every decade. A well drained and well built macadam road with a good binder may cost anywhere from $4,000 to $6,000 per mile, but such a road with moderate repairs will last for generations. Hence the future should bear part of the burden. There is only one sensible, businesslike way to build good roads, and that is, by state aid, where by the state, preferably from a long time low rate bond issue, pays part of the expense, and the township issues bonds, running from 20 to 30 years, for its part. In this way all the roads needed in a township—the main roads—can be improved at once, and the payments spread over the present and the coming generations.

By building all at once from ten to twenty per cent. can be saved in the cost of the work, and the community has the roads to use from the start. Of course interest must be paid on the bonds, but against this goes the use of the roads. If this is not worth more than the interest it is better not to build the roads. The road question is a big one and must be handled in a big way.

nity seems to be groping in the dark, not knowing just how to accomplish the desired end. In many localities we find that meetings are held, a subscription is started, and volunteers beat up and down the street, asking everyone to subscribe either money or labor. A bank will give $100, a merchant another $100, the man next door, who ought to do the same thing, will give $10. A public entertainment is gotten up, and after a campaign of a number of weeks, perhaps $2,000 is raised for improving a piece of road. In order to save expense some local party will undertake the work. He does not know much about road building, and the result is a botch job. The money is spent and a half-mile of road is made, and while it is poorly constructed, it is so much better than the previous conditions, that it is hailed with delight. No effort along these lines can amount to much, beyond the creating of an increased desire for better roads. Experience shows beyond any question that the way to do is to build as large a mileage as possible at the same time, and have it done under the supervision of a capable road engineer. If ten or twelve miles are built instead of one the cost of construction will be much less; it will pay to have improved machinery and the best facilities. Then the payment of the road should not be made by passing the hat, where some will do their duty and others will not, but on the contrary the amount should be covered by issuing long time bonds and spreading the burden over all the property of the township. If fortunately the state is operating under the state aid plan, whereby a portion of the expense is contributed from the state treasury, it simplifies the matter very much and lightens the burden.

The writer made a calculation covering the state of Illinois, and that calculation was verified by the late Dr. Frank H. Hall of Aurora, one of the best mathematicians in the country, and he found it correct. It showed that first-class hard roads could be built over all the main highways in the state of Illinois, under the state aid plan, the state paying one-half the expense from a general tax levy, and the balance locally by the township, and the combined expense spread over a period of ten years, would not exceed ten cents per acre per year on farm lands. What is true of Illinois will be found to work out very closely along these lines in nearly all states of the central West.

The amount of money wasted upon the highways of any state between Pittsburg and Denver, and from Minnesota to Florida, would more than pay the interest on the bonds necessary to build and maintain first-class permanent roads. We might state it in another way: That the economies that can be accomplished and the benefits that will accrue from improving the highways, will take off from the burden of the people many times more than the taxes to build the roads will impose. Why not convert this waste into a permanent asset? Why not have better conditions when we can do so so easily?

Road Before Dragging at Columbia, Mo.

This illustration shows a newly made macadam road going through the rutting period. This road apparently was not thoroughly rolled when built. Another illustration shows the same road with the surface ironed out with a road drag. This is a good example of the value of the road drag on a macadam roadway. This road is at Columbia, Mo.

Road After Being Dragged One Year—Helena, Ark.

The above road for many years was impassable a large part of the time. A few years ago it was graded as shown—not very well done, however. The surface has been dragged at short intervals for a year. This has kept the road comparatively smooth. While it cannot be called a good road, it is a good example of how a very bad road may be made better with grading and dragging. This road is in Arkansas.

ALMOST CAPTURED BIG PRIZE

McCurdy Was Within Ten Miles of Havana When the Lubricating Oil Gave Out.

Aboard the Paulding a seaman, having no glasses at all, shouted:

"There he is!"

There he was, two streaks of black against the sky. He had come over the slow boats, passed all the destroyers except the Paulding, and was sailing surely toward a waiting Havana, with only one destroyer—a mere ten minutes or so—between. McCurdy's two mechanicians aboard the Paulding began to grin. Make it? Of course he would! Everything was evidently working well; and ten minutes—only ten minutes—would see the man landed safely in Havana, with the big prize to his credit. McCurdy was coming strong. Every moment he was growing blacker and bigger against the sky.

The Cuban coast—the smoke of the city was within sight.

And then—

"My God!" somebody said, "he's fallen."

This was true. The man had fallen. There was no bird-like speck in the sky. The man had fallen. The Paulding was already turning, at 30 knots, to pick him up; and the Terry was steaming straight on for the same purpose. There had been an accident; the lubricating oil had slipped away and the engine was burning to pieces. There was nothing for it but to descend; and this McCurdy did deliberately, waiting patiently, as he stood on the seat of the airship for rescue. When a boat from the Terry picked him up—the Paulding was only a moment later—he said:

"Dashed hard luck! Why, I could see Havana!"

He was only ten miles off.

"Dashed Hard luck!" he repeated.

He hadn't wet his feet.—Norman Duncan, in Harper's Weekly.

WHY BATTLESHIP WAS SENT

Because of Misinterpreted Cipher Message the Maine Went to Havana.

Probably very few know that the Maine had been hurried to Havana because of a misinterpreted cipher message. Mr. John R. Caldwell, who had been in charge of the Havana bureau, and whom I relieved, told me that several days prior to my arrival he had made requisition upon the office for a revolver. There had come strenuous times in the Cuban capital, riots had been frequent, the lives of foreigners, particularly those of Americans, had been more than once placed in jeopardy, and the time had come when correspondents felt the need of firearms to protect their lives. The revolver sent to Mr. Caldwell was smuggled to him by a passenger on the steamship Olivette, to whom the weapon had been entrusted by an agent of the paper in Tampa. By some oversight no cartridges had been sent with it, and it being impossible to secure any in Havana, the correspondent cabled to New York. "Camera received, but no plates; send by next boat."

Through some strange error on the part of the one who received it, the cryptogram was construed to be a cipher and was translated to read that an attempt had been made on the life of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, American consul general in Havana. This misinformation went to Washington and reached there after the Havana cable had closed. Early the next day Mr. Caldwell received from the Herald the following cryptogram: "Send story and pictures ordered on food supplies; we want it for main sheet." By applying the cipher key, the first sentence was readily translated to read: "A United States warship has been ordered to Havana." The second evidently conveyed some hint which was beyond the limitation of the code, but the word "main" gave the clue. Meeting General Lee at breakfast that morning, Mr. Caldwell quietly informed him that the Maine was on her way to Havana. The general was incredulous. No warship, he assured the correspondent, would be sent to Havana unless he requested it.—Walter Scott Meriwether, in Harper's Weekly.

A Wish Gratified.

"Jiggs used to tell me that the dream of his life was to live some day in a big house on a hill."

"Poor fellow! And now he is in the state penitentiary."

"True, but that is a big house and it happens to be on a hill."

Fodder Corn as a Substitute for Hay.

Common field corn, sown on well prepared land, in drills from 3 feet to 3 feet 8 inches apart, and using 30 to 40 pounds of seed per acre, makes excellent fodder corn. It may be planted as late as June 20th to July 1st, under favorable moisture conditions, with a reasonable prospect of getting a full crop; though earlier seeding is preferred. Sown at this time of year, but little cultivation will be necessary except to conserve moisture, and the crop will be able to take care of itself during the busy season.

The yield of field cured corn fodder will vary from 3½ to 5 tons per acre, depending on the kind of land on which it is grown and the season at which planted. In case of a shortage of hay, it could well be substituted for that food stuff; and in fact, for some classes of live stock; it is more than an equivalent, pound for pound. A ton of timothy hay will contain approximately 56 pounds of digestible protein, 868 pounds of carbohydrates, and 29 pounds of fat. The amount of nutriment contained in the ton of corn fodder is slightly less than in the hay, but the more succulent nature of the fodder corn makes it especially adapted as food for dairy cows, sheep and growing colts. When compared on the basis of an acre of land, corn fodder has a decided advantage.

An acre of fodder corn yielding 4 tons per acre, will give 200 pounds of digestible protein, 3108 pounds of carbohydrates, and 96 pounds of fat, as compared with 112 pounds of digestible protein, 1736 pounds of carbohydrates and 56 pounds of fat from an acre of timothy yielding two tons. It is true that the growing of fodder corn is a somewhat more expensive process than the growing of an acre of hay; but the amount and kind of forrage obtained warrants any one with a large amount of live stock in growing at least a moderate acreage of fodder corn. This is especially true, this year, on any farms where there is likely to be a shortage of rough food.—Andrew Boss, Supt. University farm.

ORCHARD HEATING.

The question of heating orchards during frosty nights to prevent a destruction of the bloom has passed beyond the experimental stage, and this year every level headed orchardist who lives in a latitude that is likely to be visited by a spring frost when the trees are in bloom should make preparations at once to safeguard himself against frost damage. Where it can be procured at a price of from 4 to 6 cents per gallon crude petroleum will serve the purpose as well or better than any other material and has the advantage that, being in a covered pot, it is not rendered useless by a rain, as is quite often the case with wood or litter of several kinds. There are several good oil burners on the market, and those made without soldered joints are preferable. Experience has shown that about fifty burners should be used per acre and so set that the wind will blow the smoke and heat from them into the limbs of the trees. In a majority of cases the critical—coldest—time during a night in which frost occurs is between 3 and 6 a. m., and the burners should be held in readiness until the time mentioned. Frequently conditions prevailing in the early evening will indicate a frost later, but a change of wind may prevent it. Two or three thermometers of a good make should be stationed through the orchard so as to keep tab on the temperature. It is well to remember that both apple and peach blossoms in full bloom will stand from four to five degrees of frost without serious damage; hence if only two or three degrees of frost threaten it will not be necessary to make more than a smudge on the east side of the orchard just before sunup so as to prevent a too rapid thawing of the blossoms. Stumps, cordwood, brush and other litter have also been used with good results, fewer fires being required with materials making a larger blaze and giving more heat. In some of the orange growing sections of California orchards of from fifty to a hundred acres have been protected by driving through them in the early morning hours low wagons bearing fires so fed as to make dense smudges. Whatever method be followed in protecting the orchard from frost, preparations for heating or smudging should be made well in advance so that one will not be taken unawares. Instances are numerous where the money spent in orchard heating has been returned manifold in the crop return of a single season.

SHOULD LIVE WITH THE WORMS.

It is hard to have patience with the man who, though entirely dependent upon the kindness of nature for fertile soil, productive fruit tree, bush and vine, sunshine and rain, is so narrow and selfish that he will ruthlessly kill the finest and most useful of our song birds because, knowing a good thing when they see it, they take a bit of toll from him in the shape of ripe and luscious berries. Folks of this type ought to be herded by themselves in a territory bug and worm cursed because never visited by our feathered friends and compelled to subsist on what worms and insects leave. They would soon have enough of the business and would return to dwell with civilized folks, thankful for bird life and having a better conception of reciprocity, the square deal and the eternal fitness of things.

The damp cellar may not be primarily due to too much shade about the house, but there is no getting around the fact that the situation is aggravated by such shade. The germ destroying sunshine and fresh air ought to enter the cellar windows during a part of every day.

Not a little pleasure and real satisfaction can be got out of placing a shallow dish on the lawn and supplying it with fresh water every day or two. The birds will discover it very quickly and will come to the dish to drink and bathe, where their performances will prove very interesting to the members of the household.

There are all too many chaps who haven't time to "monkey or fuss" testing seed corn who stupidly spend hours and even days later in the season cultivating bare ground in fields which have half or a third of a stand because the seed used wasn't any good. And it is often these same fellows who blame the weather or the party in power or their bad luck because they don't get ahead in the world.

The present day practice of building dairy barns so that they will be provided with abundance of fresh air and sunlight is no longer viewed as a fad by men who think. These conditions mean health to the cows, which means increased milk yield, and this means more money in the bank; hence it resolves itself down to a practical dollars and cents proposition, a language that ought to be understood by the most dull of understanding.

Regrettable as the fact is, truth compels the statement that up to date the most skilled specialists in the medical world have not been able to discover a medicine that will kill the germs that cause cancer and tuberculosis. Other measures sometimes effect a cure in individual cases, but seldom medicine taken internally. Medicines claimed to have this power are on the market, but primarily for the purpose of separating sick folks of their money.

The old world has mighty little to offer boys who start out in life at ten years old sucking cigarettes, except quarters in insane asylums, penitentiaries or jobs holding down dry goods boxes, rubbing the sand off depot walls at train time or touring the country on brake beams. None of these occupations, by the way, yields a very handsome salary. It is well for the boy to look into the future far enough to make up his mind whether he wants to hang out with this kind of company. If he doesn't he would better cut the cigarettes out.

Figures gathered by investigators in the federal department of agriculture show that those engaged in the poultry business in the United States suffer a loss of $45,000,000, or 15 per cent of the annual value of the egg output, $300,000,000, through the careless handling of the product. This loss is traced to failure to provide adequate and clean nesting places, irregularity in gathering, keeping in warm instead of cool places and infrequency of marketing. It is safe to say, in addition, that the bulk of this loss is sustained by farm poultry raisers rather than those who make of poultry raising a primary business. The leak is one that should be stopped.

We heard the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hopping out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the rump strap or monkeyed with the tug or bridle a bit and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and, like others, we have sat for a good half hour, with the thermometer registering 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

Time was when cows needed their horns for self protection, but under modern domestic conditions they are useless and often dangerous appendages. The best and easiest method of dehorning is by the application of some caustic potash to the germ of the horns when the calf is a few days old. After the horn has got a good start the job must be done by saw or clippers. Many a dairyman hesitates to dehorn his cows because of the harmful effect he thinks it will have in reducing their milk flow. However, this is likely to be overestimated. A test made at the Kansas Agricultural college in a herd of twelve cows with a view to determining the shrinkage as a result of dehorning showed that in the five days prior to the operation it gave 1,142.5 pounds of milk, while in the five days following it gave 1,102 pounds, or a total shrinkage for the twelve cows of 40.5 pounds. This amounts to sixty-nine one-hundredths of a pound of milk per cow each day or about half a pint. On the fifth day after dehorning all except two of the cows were giving as much milk, and a few more than they did the day before their horns were removed.

of the grain harvested in this country is bound by harvesting machines and less than five per cent of it is bound by hand. What do you think of the ones who are so far behind the times as to be binding by hand?

Over 95 per cent of the business of this country is done by bank checks instead of the handling of money because it is the safest and most convenient way of doing business. There is no reason why ninety-nine per cent of the business should not be done in this way.

The few people who are not using the conveniences offered by a bank such as this, are placing themselves in the same class as the ones who are not up to date in other respects.

You should have a check account at this bank. Come in and let us explain how simple it is.

Most musical comedies flit gaily into view, have a butterfly life for a season or two and then vanish into darkness. A play with a longer life is the "Flower of the Ranch", for it was produced in New York two years ago, then played a whole summer at the Garrick, Chicago, and is now making a complete tour of the States and Canada. "The Flower of the Ranch" has the merit of possessing a well developed story, with characters drawn consistently and incidents free from exaggeration. The songs have a fascinating charm and all in all it is a play that really makes theatre-going worth while. At the Auditorium July 10th.

For Sale—160 acre fine farm, five miles north of Thief River Falls on the Eleven Towns. About 110 acres sown to crop. Also all farm machinery and horses, etc. A chance for a bona fide settler looking for a fine farm at a low price. Anyone looking for a chance will find it to their advantage to investigate the bargain. Salve O. Omle, Thief River Falls. 3t.-c.

Coming!

For pure, wholesome fun, for laughter that will not be followed by the slightest tinge of regret for having taken your mother, sister or sweetheart to see it, is "The Flower of the Ranch", the Howard musical success coming to the Auditorium July 10th. Its sparkling comedy, its overflowing mirth, its pretty costumes and its excellent cast have combined to make it the talked of play this season. The marvelous little "broilers" who do the wonderful dances with such skill that it brings the audience to their feet with the marvelous swiftness and dash, still work with the same enthusiasm that has made these girls a revelation to theatregoers who heretofore have been accustomed to the bored looking chorus girl. The musical numbers, "Just Say You Care," "Worried", "What's the Use of Dreaming?" "The Pajama and the Nightie" and the "Days of '49" receive encore after encore.

SWEDEN.

Dolan, the learned Swedish scientist, has produced a most wonderful light by the use of acetone gas. It is being adopted by various governments, and is being placed on coasts and islands, and especially at points where the weather is clear most of the time, as there is a delicate contrivance connected with the lamps that is sensitive to the light of the sun, and which will, when the sun's rays strike it, extinguish the lamp, and then when the sun sets the light will come on again. In foggy or dismal atmosphere the light is continuous. It is a very brilliant light, and is said to be the cheapest and most reliable light of the more powerful kinds. The matter of securing the very best possible light for dangerous points on coasts has occupied the attention of mechanics for years.

The Swedish government has now informed the Persian legation at Paris that it will grant the request of Persia for Swedish officers to reorganize the Persian gendarmes. For this purpose leave of absence will be granted to three officers, two captains or artillery men and a lieutenant, or one captain and two lieutenants. As soon as the contracts can be drawn up the government will make three appointments out of the list of fifty who have applied for the positions.

The Kolnische Zeitung states that the official German telegraph bureau corrupted the language of the toast proposed by King Gustaf in Rome. He used the expression, "the proclamation of Rome as the capital," but in the German telegram the words had been changed to "the proclamation of the kingdom of Italy." The report of King Victor Emmanuel's address left out a few words referring to "Sweden's heroic participation in the Thirty Years' war."

Professor H. W. Schofield of Harvard university has arrived at Stockholm for the purpose of arranging for an exchange of professors with Upsala university. Under this arrangement Upsala would send one or two of her best men to deliver lectures at Harvard and other leading American universities, whereas the American universities, in turn, will send representatives to the universities of Lund and Upsala.

The well known Swedish athletic trainer, Ernst Hjertberg, has decided to remain permanently in Sweden. He is now busy putting a number of men in training for the Olympian games. Hjertberg is very popular in Stockholm and is on to all the American features and tricks in athletics and his troupe will therefore make a formidable showing in the home city next summer.

"The Swedish Settlement on the Delaware; Their History and Relation to the English and the Dutch," is the name of a two volume history just completed by Professor Amandus Johnson, A. M. Ph. A great song festival will be held in connection with the Olympian games in Stockholm next summer, July 12 to 14, when the most famous male choruses and singing organizations of the country will gather. Great preparations are already under way and no doubt this will prove a great side feature of the big event at Stockholm next summer.

During the last year 51,000 men saw actual service in the Swedish army, or about one out of every hundred population. The United States standing army hardly exceeds 25,000 men, or about one man to nearly 4,000 population.

NORWAY.

According to Edwin Bjorkman, who recently wrote an extensive literary criticism entitled "The Ibsen Myth," the prevailing notion that Ibsen deliberately set out to confound the public understanding is absolutely baseless. He says: "Fond as Ibsen was of clothing his sallies against sham and humbug and shallow indifference in the guise of subtlest sarcasm, this inclination was always subordinate to a sincerity that could rest satisfied with no expression falling short of the greatest attainable clearness. Above all other motives or tendencies actuating him stood his unrelenting sense of duty as an artist. And the logical outgrowth of his attitude was a passionate craving for understanding as the highest reward that could be reaped by the artist. Success, praise, renown, these were to him little more than the obvious dues of his endeavor. In a sympathetic comprehension, making a complete fellowship of soul between artist and reader, he saw the one truly satisfactory compensation for the labors of creative genius. In the lack of it he saw supreme misfortune. Ibsen never purposely manufactured riddles. He never desired to be, or to be found, obscure. But to reach the heart of his message, it will not suffice that we spend our time brooding over his words or delving into his personal life. Instead, we must school ourselves in the comprehension of life—in the knowledge not only of its superficial aspects, but of its deeper and deepest truths. To know Ibsen better, we must know life itself better."

The new compulsory sick insurance law comes into operation in Norway on July 1, and it applies to all persons over thirteen years of age receiving wages amounting to less than $35 a year in the country and $380 in a town. These workers are grouped under the law in four classes, according to the rate of their remuneration. The first class is for those earning up to $83 a year, the second to the limit of $170, the third $250, and the fourth $380. Both the premiums and the allowance will be calculated on the basis of the average wages. Toward the premiums the members will pay 60 per cent, the state 20 per cent and the remainder will be borne equally by the employers and local authorities. The portion payable by the insured is to be deducted on each pay day. The members are entitled to free medical attendance, medicine and surgical appliances, and, in case of incapacity to work, a money allowance to the extent of 60 per cent of the average wages of their class for a period of twenty-six weeks, while wives, as well as children under fifteen, are also given free medical attendance.

Hon. L. S. Swenson of Minnesota, who has been appointed minister to Norway by President Taft, was at one time principal of Luther Academy at Albert Lea, Minn. Later he was the United States minister to Denmark for a number of years. At present he is minister to Switzerland. His parents were both born in Norway and were among the earliest emigrants who settled in Nicollet county, Minn., a few miles from St. Peter. He is the first American citizen who has been appointed to a diplomatic post in a country in which his parents were born. It was through the kind offices of Mr. Swenson that J. J. Hill, the founder of the Great Northern railroad, offered $50,000 to Luther college, Decorah, Ia.

DENMARK.

According to statistics marriages are getting fewer from time to time in Denmark. Just what constitutes the chief reason for the decrease of marriages is not known, but the desire on the part of both sexes to enter matrimony is plainly on the decrease. During the years of 1896 to 1900, the divorces were about 354 a year and during the five years following there were about 466 per year. From 1906 to 1910 the number of divorces rose to about 675 a year. Last year there were 748 divorces. These are rather alarming figures, but just what remedy to introduce is puzzling a good many people.

Says the Politiken: "Mr. Bentzen, a Norwegian architect in Berlin, managed his business so recklessly that he accumulated a debt amounting to at least $125,000, while his assets were hardly worth mentioning. Some of his transactions were decidedly crooked and when he saw the storm approaching he disappeared, taking with him about $13,000. He was very popular in the Norwegian and Danish colony in Berlin. It is also stated that some time ago he caused the financial ruin of A. Norman, a noted Norwegian artist, who was looked upon as a millionaire.

HONORS THE FIRST MINNESOTA

Fiftieth Anniversary of Regiment's Departure for War Celebrated at St. Paul.

The celebration at St. Paul of the fiftieth anniversary of the departure of the First Minnesota regiment was one of the greatest lessons in patriotism ever taught in Minnesota, an anniversary of a vanishing generation of fighters that went straight to the heart of every citizen. To the veteran thus honored it was more.

The veterans were appreciative of the honors shown them and at the Auditorium Samuel R. Lilly, former president of the First Minnesota Regiment association, said never before in the martial history of the United States had a military organization been so honored as the First Minnesota regiment in St. Paul.

From early morning until late at night the veterans were entertained at anniversary events and it perhaps was the most strenuous day some of them have witnessed in recent years.

There was a reunion of members of the First Minnesota at the old capitol and Mrs. James J. Hill presented the regiment with a counterpart of the regimental colors given the organization at the time of its departure fifty years ago. Colonel Josiah R. King, the first man voluntarily to enlist in the army after the firing on Fort Sumpter, was crowned with a laurel wreath. Following the bestowal of these honors the business session of the regimental association was held and new officers were elected.

In the afternoon the members of the First regiment participated in a parade which traversed the principal streets of the city, all gaily decorated for the occasion.

At the Auditorium informal greeting was extended the survivors of the famed regiment by Governor Eberhart and Mayor Keller and D. W. Lawler, former mayor, delivered the anniversary oration, lauding the great men of Minnesota who played prominent parts in the Civil war.

WOUNDED ROBBER CONFESSES

Sensations Expected In Northern Minnesota Scandal.

Superintendent Fielding, the St. Paul Pinkerton man who has had charge of the Dumas case, says Mike Davis, the alleged robber who escaped during the midnight battle at Puposky a week ago, has been found and will be under arrest within forty-eight hours.

On top of this comes the news that Billy Behan, the wounded robber in jail at Bemidji, has completed a confession of several typewritten pages, which he is said to have signed at the county jail in the presence of witnesses and in which he is alleged to have made a clean breast of everything, implicating others.

This confession will not be given out until after the arrest of Davis.

Other men were put through the "third degree" and three went on record with new evidence, according to the detectives. A man implicated in one of two robberies committed at Puposky prior to the attempt of a week ago was one of the three.

GOPHER DEITZ IS ACQUITTED

Peter Vorbenich Cleared of Charge of Attempting to Kill.

Peter Vorbenich, called the John Deitz of Northern Minnesota, tried at Hibbing on the charge of attempting to shoot deputy sheriffs, was acquitted. Vorbenich, it was alleged, refused to let logs float down the Water Hen river through his claim, and deputies went to arrest him. They alleged Vorbenich and his wife drove them off the claim and fired on them, and arrested the couple on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

Child Shoots Baby Brother.

Dale Watkins, four years of age, shot and instantly killed his two-year-old brother in the cabin of their father, William Watkins, a settler at Day's High Landing, Itasca county. The boy found the rifle standing in a corner of the cabin. The father was absent at the time and the children were alone with their mother. The coroner decided that it was merely a case of leaving dangerous weapons within reach of a child and did not fix any blame.

Workmen Hit by Switch Engine.

Ole Ringstad, aged fifty-seven, Nelson, Wis., is dead and John Williams aged fifty-five, Mineral Point, Wis., is in a critical condition at the St. Paul city hospital from injuries received when both were struck by a switch engine at St. Paul. Both men were bridge carpenters working on repairs on the high bridge.

Kills Child and Herself.

Distracted by the recent suicide of her husband Mrs. Jeremiah Marks turned on the gas in a room in her former home at Minneapolis and killed both herself and six year-old boy.

More than forty states will be represented at the annual convention of the state and national dairy and pure food commissioners in Duluth the week of Aug. 21. The chief matter up for consideration is future legislation in reference to butter and food standards. H. W. Wiley, chemist in the United States bureau of agriculture, and Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture probably will be present.

At the closing session of the United Norwegian Lutheran Church of America at St. Paul, a letter was read from James J. Hill, in which he offered to contribute $50,000 toward an endowment fund for St. Olaf college, provided $200,000 is raised from other sources. In case $300,000 for his cause could be raised from other sources he would donate $60,000. The offer will remain open for two years.

A thorough investigation of Indian affairs of the reservations of Minnesota, notably the situation at the White Earth agency, is authorized in a resolution introduced by Representative Stephens of Texas, chairman of the house committee on Indian affairs.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The bodies of two unidentified laborers, who are supposed to have been employed on the new Frederic-Duluth branch of the Soo line, were found in the brush twelve miles east of Bruno by a teamster. There were no marks of identification. The ashes of a fire were found near the bodies. It is evident the men were killed by blows on the head with a blunt instrument.

Leaving an incoherent note behind for the coroner, in which he explained that he had read the Bible and that he could not agree with its teachings and that many of the works on medical science which he had carefully perused showed the world rampant with disease, Ole Stederson, a prominent contractor of Lewiston, Winona county, shot and killed himself.

A two-year-old son of Michael Stannard, a farmer living near Hugo, was killed by a Northern Pacific passenger train. The child had wandered away from the house and got on the tracks. The engineer did not notice the infant until too near to stop. The body was cut in two.

Benjamin Kirsten, twenty-one years old, who was to have been married in a few days, was drowned in the Mississippi above Winona while in bathing with a party of friends, one of whom was his fiancee. Kirsten was an expert swimmer and ventured far out in the channel.

Probably temporarily unbalanced as the result of the heat Robert S. Thompson, forty-six years old, jumped from the fourth floor of the Minnesota Loan and Trust building at Minneapolis, sustaining injuries which proved fatal half an hour later.

James Adair, proprietor of a book store on Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis, was acquitted by a jury at his trial at Glenwood on a charge of arson in connection with the burning of a store in Westport, of which he was proprietor, on May 15, 1910.

Edward H. Fences, editor of the Taylor's Falls Journal, dropped dead while at work in his printing plant. Death is said to have been caused by heart failure. He was fifty years old and one of the prominent newspaper men of that section of the state.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

Fourteen secretaries of as many retail lumber dealers' associations, indicted by a special federal grand jury at Chicago for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, constituted a new kind of "trust," according to the United States attorneys who conducted the investigation. The retail lumber dealers, it was admitted at the close of the investigation, had no corporation, no capital stock and did not try to control prices and prevent competition among themselves. Instead they had what the attorneys say was a "trust of power" and sought to provide that all lumber should be sold to consumers only through retail dealers and not by wholesalers or manufacturers. The men, as secretaries of the retail associations, constitute the Lumber Secretaries' Bureau of Information, incorporated in Illinois in 1905, and represents thousands of retailers.

The United States circuit court of the Eighth district, sitting at St. Louis, filed an opinion that the purchase of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific did "not amount to a direct and substantial restraint of either interstate or international commerce." The recent decision of the United States supreme court in the Standard Oil case was cited among others by Judge Elmer B. Adams, who wrote the majority opinion. Supreme Court Justice Willis Van Devanter, while a circuit judge of the Eighth district, participated in the hearing, deliberation and conclusion in the case and concurred in the opinion. Judge William C. Hook filed a dissenting opinion.

The United States circuit court for the district of Delaware handed down a decision declaring that the alleged powder trust, which is dominated by the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours company, is a combination in restraint of interstate commerce in powder and other explosives, in violation of section 1 of the Sherman anti-trust law; that it attempts to monopolize and has monopolized a part of such commerce, in violation of section 2 of the same law, and decreeing that the combination shall be enjoined from continuing this violation and that it shall be dissolved.

Advances in the minimum charge for the transportation of freight in single packages and in small lots proposed by the railways in classification territory, to become effective July 1, were suspended by the interstate commerce commission until Oct. 28 next. The secret of winter eggs lies not in newfangled recipe or nostrum, to trap nests or swinging roosts, but to two very practical considerations—making the hens scratch for what they get and in feeding them such rations as will most readily supply the ingredients contained in the eggs which they are expected to lay—namely, bran oats, a little oilmeal, tankage, clover and alfalfa, with grit for grinding, lime for eggshells and enough corn to provide the yolks. For the service which she is expected to perform the hen needs a balanced ration, as does the dairy cow, and neither should be expected to do much on a ration fit for the steer in the feeding lot.

The putting of the lawn mower away when through using it and the rubbing of the hoe and wheel cultivators bright when through using them are largely matters of habit. It is well to remember that it is just about as easy to form the right habit along this line as to fall into the bad one of leaving the tools wherever one happens to get through using them.

There is good reason to believe that the codling worm injury to apples this year in those sections where the crop was wiped out by frost last year will be greatly reduced owing to the fact that there were mighty few apples left on which the eggs could be laid and in which the worms could find a harbor. It is another illustration of the old saw "It's an ill wind that blows no good."

Townspeople whose places are bordered with shade trees can do a real favor to the drivers perched on the tops of loads of hay or straw or other high loads by keeping the limbs which droop into the roadway trimmed up. It does not sweeten a fellow's temper to have a part of his cargo pulled off into the highway or to get a scratch or welt across the face from these overhanging limbs.

A new interest has been shown in irrigation in this country within the past few years, and in particular since the passage of the reclamation act by congress, yet irrigation as a practice of agriculture is as old as that of scratching the surface of the soil with a stick, the forerunner of the modern chilled steel plow. Mesopotamia, Egypt and sections of our own southwest show the remains of irrigation systems hoary with age that hundreds of years ago lapsed into ruin and disuse.

While the sweet potatoes grown in the north do not develop the sweetness and quality of the New Jersey or more southern product, one can still raise a pretty fair article. The soil in which they are planted should be rich, light and mellow and should so lie as to receive as much warmth as possible from the sun, a slope to the south, with shelter of some kind to the north being preferable. While the practice is often followed of planting them on ridges, this is not imperative if the soil is well drained and is kept thoroughly cultivated.

We watched a groceryman counting eggs into a shipping case the other day and called his attention to a number of apparently fresh white eggs that were badly smeared with [illegible] manure, due to [illegible] nesting places. His reply was: "Yes; there's really no excuse for it; Those eggs are just as fresh and good as any that have been brought in, but the folks were careless. When they reach the commission houses they will go in as 'dirts,' which means that about 3 cents per dozen will be knocked off the price."

A stirring of the surface soil every few days, and particularly after a rain, will put a blanket of mellow earth on the surface that will tend to keep the subsoil moist and loose in a condition the most favorable possible for the development of the growing plants. It is well to remember in this connection that the circulation of soil air is as essential to the growth of the root system as soil moisture and that both are secured by keeping the surface soil properly stirred. It matters little relatively how rich soil is if the surface is allowed to bake. This locks both moisture and fertility up, and the growing crop suffers as a result.

The Iowa experiment station has been gathering data recently relative to the damage done by the wheat head army worm in several counties of the state. Two broods of the worm hatch, the first feeding from late in May until well into July and the second from the middle of August until frost. Measures which have been tried to reduce the pest show that early cutting of badly infested fields is a help; also keeping the grasses cut on the roadsides and in the fence corners and early fall plowing. Most effective of all as a preventive measure was found to be the pasturing of infested fields during the early fall. The damage done by the worm is largely in the seed head, its habit being to eat the seeds and drop the chaff. In some fields examined as high as 40 per cent of the timothy seed heads were found damaged.

The damp cellar may not be primarily due to too much shade about the house, but there is no getting around the fact that the situation is aggravated by such shade. The germ destroying sunshine and fresh air ought to enter the cellar windows during a part of every day.

Not a little pleasure and real satisfaction can be got out of placing a shallow dish on the lawn and supplying it with fresh water every day or two. The birds will discover it very quickly and will come to the dish to drink and bathe, where their performances will prove very interesting to the members of the household.

There are all too many chaps who haven't time to "monkey or fuss" testing seed corn who stupidly spend hours and even days later in the season cultivating bare ground in fields which have half or a third of a stand because the seed used wasn't any good. And it is often these same fellows who blame the weather or the party in power or their bad luck because they don't get ahead in the world.

The present day practice of building dairy barns so that they will be provided with abundance of fresh air and sunshine is no longer viewed as a fad by men who think. These conditions mean health to the cows, which means increased milk yield, and this means more money in the bank; hence it resolves itself down to a practical dollars and cents proposition, a language that ought to be understood by the most dull of understanding.

Regrettable as the fact is, truth compels the statement that up to date the most skilled specialists in the medical world have not been able to discover a medicine that will kill the germs that cause cancer and tuberculosis. Other measures sometimes effect a cure in individual cases, but seldom medicine taken internally. Medicines claimed to have this power are on the market, but primarily for the purpose of separating sick folks of their money.

The old world has mighty little to offer boys who start out in life at ten years old sucking cigarettes, except quarters in insane asylums, penitentiaries or jobs holding down dry goods boxes, rubbing the sand off depot walls at train time or touring the country on brake beams. None of these occupations, by the way, yields a very handsome salary. It is well for the boy to look into the future far [illegible] make up his mind whether he wants to hang out with this kind of company [illegible] better cut the cigarettes out.

Figures gathered by investigators in the federal department of agriculture show that those engaged in the poultry business in the United States suffer a loss of $45,000,000, or 15 per cent of the annual value of the egg output, $300,000,000, through the careless handling of the product. This loss is traced to failure to provide adequate and clean nesting places, irregularity in gathering, keeping in warm instead of cool places and infrequency of marketing. It is safe to say, in addition, that the bulk of this loss is sustained by farm poultry raisers rather than those who make of poultry raising a primary business. The leak is one that should be stopped.

We heard the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hopping out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the rump strap or monkeyed with the tug or bridle a bit and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and, like others, we have sat for a good half hour, with the thermometer registering 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

Time was when cows needed their horns for self protection, but under modern domestic conditions they are useless and often dangerous appendages. The best and easiest method of dehorning is by the application of some caustic potash to the germ of the horns when the calf is a few days old. After the horn has got a good start the job must be done by saw or clippers. Many a dairyman hesitates to dehorn his cows because of the harmful effect he thinks it will have in reducing their milk flow. However, this is likely to be overestimated. A test made at the Kansas Agricultural college in a herd of twelve cows with a view to determining the shrinkage as a result of dehorning showed that in the five days prior to the operation it gave 1,142.5 pounds of milk, while in the five days following it gave 1,100 pounds, or a total shrinkage for the twelve cows of 40.8 pounds. This amounts to sixty-nine one-hundredth of a pound of milk per cow each day or about half a pint. On the fifth day after dehorning all except two of the cows were giving as much milk, and a few more than they did the day before their horns were removed.

The putting of the lawn mower away when through using it and the rubbing of the hoe and wheel cultivators bright when through using them are largely matters of habit. It is well to remember that it is just about as easy to form the right habit along this line as to fall into the bad one of leaving the tools wherever one happens to get through using them.

There is good reason to believe that the codling worm injury to apples this year in these sections where the crop was wiped out by frost last year will be greatly reduced owing to the fact that there were mighty few apples left on which the eggs could be laid and in which the worms could find a harbor. It is another illustration of the old saw "It's an ill wind that blows no good."

Townspeople whose places are bordered with shade trees can do a real favor to the drivers perched on the tops of loads of hay or straw or other high loads by keeping the limbs which droop into the roadway trimmed up. It does not sweeten a fellow's temper to have a part of his cargo pulled off into the highway or to get a scratch or welt across the face from these overhanging limbs.

A new interest has been shown in irrigation in this country within the past few years, and in particular since the passage of the reclamation act by congress, yet irrigation as a practice of agriculture is as old as that of scratching the surface of the soil with a stick, the forerunner of the modern chilled steel plow. Mesopotamia, Egypt and sections of our own southwest show the remains of irrigation systems hoary with age that hundreds of years ago lapsed into ruin and disuse.

While the sweet potatoes grown in the north do not develop the sweetness and quality of the New Jersey or more southern product, one can still raise a pretty fair article. The soil in which they are planted should be rich, light and mellow and should so lie as to receive as much warmth as possible from the sun, a slope to the south, with shelter of some kind to the north being preferable. While the practice is often followed of planting them on ridges, this is not imperative if the soil is well drained and is kept thoroughly cultivated.

We watched a groceryman counting eggs into a shipping case the other day and called his attention to a number of apparently fresh white eggs that were badly smeared with mud or manure [illegible] the hens having inadequate nesting [illegible]. His reply was: "Yes; there's really no excuse for it. Those eggs are just as fresh and good as any that have been brought in, but the folks were careless. When they reach the commission houses they will go in as 'dirts,' which means that about 3 cents per dozen will be knocked off the price."

A stirring of the surface soil every few days, and particularly after a rain, will put a blanket of mellow earth on the surface that will tend to keep the subsoil moist and loose in a condition the most favorable possible for the development of the growing plants. It is well to remember in this connection that the circulation of soil air is as essential to the growth of the root system as soil moisture and that both are secured by keeping the surface soil properly stirred. It matters little relatively how rich soil is if the surface is allowed to bake. This locks both moisture and fertility up, and the growing crop suffers as a result.

In a recent institute which the writer attended the question was raised by one farmer present whether if the Babcock test and weighing of the milk yield of cows were generally introduced there would not be an overproduction of butter. There seems to be very little likelihood of it, for if the test were universally applied close to a third of all the cows in the country would be put out of commission—the star boarders that are making 120 pounds of butter or less and are kept at a loss.

Fruit growers in some sections of the west where smudging has to be resorted to as a safeguard against spring frosts have provided themselves with alarms which are operated automatically by thermometers which set them going when the mercury reaches the danger line. Any one who has hiked out in a shiver on a frosty night every half hour between 10 p. m. and 3 a. m. to consult that old thermometer would quite likely not have to be argued into getting one of these newfangled alarms. They save sleep and nerve force.

A Penny Saved Is A Penny Earned

A DOLLAR SPENT AT HOME Is a Dollar That May Come Back to Your Purse

The State Agricultural college of Michigan, co-operating with some of the railroads of the state, has lately sent out a potato-poultry special. At all stops made short talks, practical and to the point, were given on these two important subjects. The value of the "gospel" spread by these specials can hardly be measured, the methods of instruction being such as to leave a lasting and definite impression on the minds of all listeners.

An Ayrshire cow, Netherall Brownie IX., owned by J. W. Clise of Seattle, Wash., has lately completed a year's test in which she surpassed the record previously held by any cow of this excellent breed. She gave 18,110 pounds of milk containing 820.91 pounds of butter fat, equivalent to 968 pounds of butter. While this does not establish a world's record for cows of any breed, it is a performance that Ayrshire breeders of the country are much pleased with.

Trees in a wood lot, like fruit, vegetable and flower, get ripe or arrive at a state of maturity if not in quite so exact and definite a manner. This maturity is indicated sometimes by decay, more often by slowness of growth, while it is usually safe to follow the rule of cutting the tree when it is not making as great a total growth in wood as the nearby trees would make in addition to their present rate of growth were it cut out. Putting it another way, a tree is ripe when its presence in a wood lot is doing more harm than good.

MOTHER SCHOLASTICA DEAD

Superior of the Benedictine Sisters of Duluth.

Rev. Mother Scholastica Kerst, superior of the Benedictine Sisters of Duluth, died in that city at the age of sixty-four years. She was born in Muerlingen, Germany, in 1847, and came to the United States in 1852, coming direct to St. Paul with her parents. At the age of fifteen she joined the Benedictine Sisters at Shakopee and in 1878 went to St. Benedict's convent at St. Joseph.

Mother Scholastica was influential in the establishment of hospitals in St. Cloud, Bismarck and Duluth, and at the request of Bishop McGolrick in 1892, when the Duluth diocese was established, came here to found a branch of the Benedictine society.

BONES FOUND IN THE RUINS

Feared Bachelor Settler Was Cremated in His Cabin.

The cabin of Otto Holt, a bachelor settle residing near Carlton, was destroyed by fire and the charred remains of a man supposed to have been Holt were found in the ruins. The barrel of a rifle, the stock burned off, lay near the body.

One theory is that Holt was murdered and the cabin fired to hide the crime.

The authorities of Carlton county are investigating. The discovery was made by fishermen and the logs of the house were still burning, indicating that the tragedy was of recent occurrence.

ST. PAUL SALOON HELD UP

Two Masked Men Rob Register, Bartender and Four Patrons.

Frank Nordstrom's saloon, in the heart of the East Side business district of St. Paul, was held up and robbed by two masked men. They secured $135 in cash from the register and $18 from Al Blagavelt, the bartender. Smaller amounts were taken from four other men.

Standing the bartender and the four other men along the wall one man held them at bay while the other went through their pockets and emptied the cash register. Then they disappeared.

IS THE WATER YOU DRINK AS PURE AS THIS?
Purity and cleanliness are the invariable rule at the Kiewel brewery. Success in brewing lies in keeping out impurities.
The water must be pure, and boiled, to make it germ proof. The yeast must be pure, the malt and hops must be pure. Even the air with which the materials come in contact must be pure and sterilized. Just as the secret of successful surgery lies in keeping germs away from the parts operated upon, so it is in modern brewing.
These are the days of germs. The water you are using may be contaminated, but you are always safe when you drink

In half a barrel of water and to this adding slowly, stirring the while, a limewater solution made by carefully slacking five pounds of fresh stone lime and diluting to about twenty-five gallons. If one wishes to hit the potato bugs in the same operation, and it is often wise to do so, paris green should be added at the rate of an ounce to every ten gallons. This solution should be put on under good pressure and kept thoroughly stirred.

It is a fact conceded by all who have ever looked into the interior of a dirty and foul smelling cream separator that while it is a labor saving device its use by any farmer or dairyman who will not take the time and pains to keep it clean should be strongly discouraged. If not kept so, it is one of the foulest things imaginable and a cause of germ laden cream and low quality butter.

SCORE WAS 5 TO 2

Locals Won a Fast Game From The Warren Aggregation Last Sunday.

Courtney, For the Locals, Scored The Only Home Run of the Day.

The local base ball aggregation won a fast game from the fast Warren bunch last Sunday afternoon by a score of 5 to 2.

The game was an exciting one from the start and altho a few incidental errors were made on both sides the contest was probably the best witnessed on the local diamond this year.

The twirlers for both teams; Mattson for Warren, and Asselind and Hess for the locals were apparently in excellent shape and held the batsmen down to comparatively few hits.

Courtney, for the locals, scored the only home-run of the day on a nice little bingle out in the left field.

The following is the summary of the game:

Wednesday afternoon of last week at the M. E. Church occurred the marriage of Miss Dora B. Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Clark, of Rollis, to Mr. Mark L. Stewart, Rev. L. B. Smith officiating.

The bride is a graduate of the local high school with the class of '11 and has a large circle of friends in this city by whom she is held in high esteem.

The happy couple will make their home at Middle River.

The News joins in with their many friends in extending congratulations.

Cost of Preventable Disease.

Edward F. McSweeney, chairman of the board of trustees of the Boston Consumptives' Hospital, presented startling figures on the waste and cost of disease, in an address delivered at the recent Denver convention of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. He explained that the total yearly revenue to the government from the Payne-Aldrich tariff law is 20 per cent less than the actual annual loss of wages and cost of sickness and death from tuberculosis in the United States. A greater number of persons are taken out of the productive industries in this country each year than there are wage earners in Massachusetts. The research by the Sage foundation has shown that the average family income in the United States is less than $800. On that basis, the total revenues of 562,500 families would be required to pay the nation's yearly tuberculosis bill.

He quoted statistics to show that the total loss to this country in two years from preventable disease would purchase all the wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, buckwheat, potatoes, hay and tobacco produced in the United States last year. One year's loss from preventable disease would pay the national debt. It would provide capitalization for all the national banks and leave enough over to pay for digging the Panama Canal. It is equal to the combined stock and bond issues of the railways of the United States.

It is apparent, in view of such figures, that preventable disease is an important factor in the cost of living. If the waste involved were avoided, not only would much suffering and many deaths be prevented, but there would be a greatly increased supply of food products for a demand that would be increased only moderately. It is a well known fact that tuberculosis, for example, takes most of its victims from the productive years of life. Tens of thousands who should be adding to the wealth of the country are a drain upon its resources because of illness that should be avoided. The campaign to stamp out preventable disease and death, therefore, is important, not only in the interest of victims and possible victims, but as an economic problem involving the healthy.

45,000 Acres To Be Opened.

Washington, June 23.—Forty-five thousand acres of land in Beltrami county near Lakes Cass and Winnibigoshish and townships 157 and 159, ranges respectively 28 and 29 north of Red Lake are to be opened to homestead settlement in the near future. According to information received today from the general land office by Representative Steenerson the proclamation for their opening will be issued in a few days. The land will be sold at $1.25 an acre. They are part of the Indian lands ceded by the Nelson act of 1890.

SPENDS A QUIET 4TH

Quietude Reigns Supreme in the City on Independence Day.

Many Local People With the Bal Team and Band Celebrate Elsewhere.

The Glorious Fourth of July passed off very peacefully and safely in this city, and barring the usual decorations in the business portion of town and the young boys' part in firing off the giant cracker no attempt at a celebration was made. A big portion of the populice spent the day elsewhere, some going to Crookston, others to Red Lake Falls and towns along the Soo Line while the band and the ball team, with a number of fans, went over to Warren.

Owing to the change in rates on the 1st of July the special train to Warroad failed to materialize as had been previously advertised.

"The Flower of the Ranch"

Presented by a company of some forty people, "The Flower of the Ranch" a musical comedy, all the scenes of which have been laid in the rugged West, will be the attraction at the Auditorium, July 10th. The work enjoyed an extended run in New York two years ago, playing at two different theatres, a sufficient guarantee of its worth. Joseph E. Howard, whose music contributed so materially to the success of "The Prince of Tonight" "The Time, The Place and The Girl," "The Goddess of Liberty", "The Honeymoon Trail", and half a dozen plays of recent vogue, is the author of and composer of "The Flower of the Ranch", and it is declared to be his best work. Of the twenty musical numbers, at least a dozen are participated in by the big chorus, and as Joseph E. Howard staged the production, it is to be presumed that the young women have much to do and of a decidedly diverting character. Howard knows how to get striking stage pictures, and his dancing numbers are a delight.

Among the principal members of the company, which is the same as the original cast, with exceptions, is Miss Betty Caldwell, the comedienne; Miss Mabel de Nordendorf, the soprano; Jess Harris, the comedian, Tom Arnold, as Jack Farnum; James Babour the sheriff, and a sprightly chorus that sing and dance, too.

"The Squaw Man."

Although born in Lexington, Mo. in 1852, just when the Civil War was waxing hot, Edwin Milton Royle, the author of "The Squaw Man" which comes to the Auditorium on Wednesday night, July 12th, is looked upon essentially as a Salt Lake City Man. His father and mother moved to Salt Lake City in the early '70's and the potential playwright's boyhood was spent in and about that city. He was educated at the Collegiate Institute, Salt Lake; took a complete course at Princeton, and a post-graduate course at Edinburgh University. He began to study law at Columbia college in order that he might follow in his father's footsteps, but the allurements of the stage followed and were too many for him, so at the age of 20 he joined Edwin Booth's company. Later he became a member of Alexander Salvini's company, and there he met Miss Selina Fetter, a young woman of Louisville, just beginning to gain recognition as an actress, and who is now Mrs. Royle.

Fourteen years ago the Home Dramatic Company made a production of Mr. Royle's first play, "Friends" and both the author and his wife took principal parts in the performance. The play became a success almost at once, and is even now a popular vehicle in the stock houses throughout the country. He also wrote "Mexico", though this was not quite so successful. Then the temptations of vaudeville assailed Mr. Royle and Mrs. Royle, and they played in these theatres for two years with a number of sketches written by Mr. Royle himself. Three years or so ago "My Wife's Husband" was presented in New York and was pronounced a success. Nat C. Goodwin secured the rights to it, but owing to a breach of contract, litigation was involved and the play was thrown into the courts. Then came "The Squaw Man" and at present Mr. Royle has other plays in course of construction.

Kill That Fly.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo of Rocheser says:

"Fifty per cent of the diseases and troubles of to-day are brought about by lack of knowledge, and half of the remainder by lack of sanitation"

No reason can exist for failure to screen your home against flies, except lack of knowledge.

If you knew that screens are as good as many doctors' visits, would you get the screens?

Of course you would.

The whole trouble, as Dr. Mayo says is lack of knowledge.

As for lack of sanitation, it means about the same thing in this case.

There can be no sanitation where there are flies. With every fly capable of carrying an average of 1,250,000 germs, flies and sanitation can't jibe.

Remember what Dr. Mayo says about the frightful price we are paying for our lack of knowledge, and—

KILL THAT FLY.

"The Flower of the Ranch", Joseph E. Howard's greatest musical offering, will be the attraction at the Auditorium, July 10th. This delightful musical comedy, with forty artists, enjoyed most encouraging stays in New York and Chicago, the criterion of the theatrical success or failure. The play is mannerly and beautifully dressed, handsomely set, richly costumed and admirably staged by Joseph E. Howard. In fact, it is a play all should see.

PROPOSES LINE TO ERIE

Editor Lattimore, of the Erie Eleven Towns, Believes Electric Road Will Be Built.

Plan is to Run Line From this City and Probably Extend to Fargo.

Editor John T. Lattimore, of the "Eleven Towns," published at Erie, Pennington County, spent last night in the city attending to some business in connection with a contest case.

Editor Lattimore says it is some job to publish a paper 25 miles from a railroad, but that he is given splendid support by the farmers, and all are looking forward to a great future for that section of the country. The one drawback is the lack of transportation facilities, and while the Soo has general surveys made to give them service, nothing definite has been done. Mr. Lattimore says considerable figuring has been done, looking towards the construction of an electric road running from their country to Thief River Falls and thence possibly to Fargo.

He says the farmers will put up the cash for constructing the roadbed and laying the rails, and that after this much is done the road can easily be bonded to secure the equipment and the power can be secured at Thief River Falls. If this is done, a big farmer's elevator will be part of the plan.

Mr. Lattimore says the crops are magnificient there this year and that many new and desirable settlers are coming in, as land is still being sold at from 12 to $15 per acre, because of the distance from market.—Crookston Times.

Enjoys A Good Trade.

The Niclai cigar shop has just recently been moved from the old First State Bank building on 2nd street to the building next South of the Northern Hotel on LaBree avenue.

The change to the present building was made necessary by numerous additions to the shop in order to take care of the heavy increase in business, and the factory is now located in sufficiently large quarters.

Mr. Niclai employs a large force of men and has just recently added another member to the force who is an A No. 1 cigar maker and has up to just recently been employed in the city shops.

Mr. Niclai's new brand, the LaLunda, bids fair to become one of the best smokes produced in the state and the sale of these cigars has been overwhelming. At present six of the force are working on this brand and yet is hardly able to supply the demand.

This is conceded to be one of the largest, if not the largest, hard working factories in the Northwest and will be enlarged from time to time as the increasing business will merit.

SWEDISH MISSION IN HOLY LAND

Though but Recently Begun Evangelical Work Is in Prosperous Condition—Many Norwegian-Americans Spending the Summer in the Fatherland—Danish Sugar Trust Pays Dividend of Twenty-one Per Cent.

SWEDEN.

When Bishop von Scheele was in Palestine in 1898, as a traveling companion of Emperor William, he felt sorry that "the most evangelical of all Protestant nations, the Swedish people," had no share in the evangelization of the Holy Land. On his return he laid the matter before King Oscar, who, in May, 1900, accepted the protectorship of the "Swedish Jerusalem Society." The object was to win over the native population of Palestine to Christianity by means of educational and charitable institutions. Work began in 1903, with a primary day school at Jerusalem, whose teacher was a German deaconess until 1910, when the daughter of a Swedish pastor took her place. In 1904 a medical mission was established at Bethlehem in connection with the English and German missions there. Dr. G. von Ribbing is the resident physician and he has his hands full in a country whose climate superinduces chronic diseases and numerous passing ailments. Dr. Ribbing has erected a much sought for polyclinic there and a small hospital. King Gustaf is the protector of the new society, which has set out to solicit a fund of $140,000.

The International Woman's Suffrage congress, which was in session in Stockholm recently, passed a resolution last week to the effect that the Woman's Suffrage union will work in conjunction with Socialist organizations and other female organizations, but will not directly affiliate itself with any particular party in any country, but will aim to work for women's suffrage the world over. The American delegates to the International Woman's Suffrage congress in Stockholm were entertained the other day at the residence of Professor Ernst Beckman. Mrs. Beckman is a daughter of Mrs. Baker of Massachusetts, who many years ago wrote a charming book entitled, "Pictures of Swedish Life."

The Swedish Tourist association is making preparations for establishing a new tourist route in the extreme northern end of the country. This will certainly make a most interesting trip for tourists who have never been farther north than Jemtland, which is about as far as the average tourist goes when in the northern section of the country. The route will include the lake chains of Big and Little Lulea rivers and the terminal will be at Gellivara and Murjek, on the trunk line railway from Stockholm. The length of the new tourist route will be about 260 English miles and Stora Sjo will be one of the main attractions of the new route.

Says the Lutheran (Philadelphia): "Norwegians, Swedes, Germans, English, is the order in Minnesota, with Lutherans outstripping all Protestants combined. The chief Swedish institution is Gustavus Adolphus college, two hours south of the Twin Cities, at St. Peter. Two large stone buildings and four smaller ones crown the big bluff overlooking the Minnesota valley. Some of the more prominent alumni are Governor Eberhart of Minnesota, Superintendent C. G. Schultz and Dr. Mattson. Dr. J. P. Uhler has been in the faculty since 1882 and, though not a Swede, is known as the 'grand old man' of the institution."

Sweden, according to a Paris newspaper, supplied half the pulp paper of last year's production, and in seventy years, we are told, the Swedish forests will have disappeared. This leads this same French paper to state that paper can be made from bamboo, the burze brush and the sugar cane, also that there is an abundance of papyrus, which lends itself to paper making, in the French Congo and Sudan.

The Swedish crown prince and crown princess, who represented King Gustaf during the recent coronation festivities in London, during their stay there were the guests of the crown princess' father and mother, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. A dinner was given in their honor by Count and Countess Wrangle. Count Wrangle is Sweden's ambassador to London.

The number of emigrants that left Sweden for foreign countries from Jan. 1 to May 8 were 6,780. This shows a falling off in the number of people leaving the country, for during the same period last year there were over 9,500 who left the country.

NORWAY.

There are a large number of Norwegian-Americans at home in good old Norway for a visit this summer. They come from all parts of the United States, but principally from the Dakotas, Minnesota and the Western states. There are especially a large number of Dakotans and Minnesotans there this season. Dakota, especially North Dakota, has the largest percentage of Norwegians of any state in the Union and naturally a large number of the home returning visitors are from that state. A great many of the visitors have been gone in America for twenty and thirty years or more and it is natural that they find a great many changes even in and around their homes in the country districts. The home visits of Norwegian-Americans always results in a score for America, for in nearly every instance a Norwegian-American seldom visits his mother land without bringing some one with him when he returns.

Norwegians need not fear that the claims of the Danes that Gagner Rolf was a Dane has any effect on the people of France. The French will not let agitation interfere with their one thousand year's celebration at Rouen and they proceed on the old theory that Gagner Rolf was a Norwegian, born near Aalesund, Norway. A big granite monument has been shipped from Norway as a token of friendship and good feeling, to be erected in Rouen and that city in turn has sent a monument of Gagner Rolf, to be erected at his birthplace, in Aalesund. The time originally fixed for the big celebration was postponed on account of the killing of the French minister of war in a balloon wreck and at the present time it is not known just exactly when the festivities at Rouen will open.

The United Norwegian church has just completed its twenty-second annual meeting in St. Paul, Minn. The following are the new officers: President, Rev. T. H. Dahl; vice president, Rev. N. J. Ellestad; secretary, Rev. J. C. Roseland; treasurer, Erik Waldeland. There were thirty-three new congregations admitted. Most of these are in Canada. Eighteen graduates of the seminary at St. Anthony were ordained. Within the space of one year almost $100,000 has been raised towards the "Ministerial Annuity Fund." This synod is very active in its mission work, having raised for the home and mission fund during the past year the sum of $142,733.17.

There is a good deal of opposition in Norway to the public school system, that is the educational methods that have been in vogue for many years and which even obtain at the present time. It is claimed by a good many persons that so called book knowledge unfits the children for practical life. So much interest is taken in this question that a great many of the Norwegian papers are printing extensive articles on the subject.

A labor union male chorus from Stockholm visited Christiania about two weeks ago and gave a concert in the Meyer Street Mission House, which was filled to its utmost capacity. This is the first time in many years that a Swedish male chorus has visited the Norwegian capital. The chorus is unusually well received in Norway and has been giving concerts in Bergen, Trondhjem and other cities of the country.

The estate of the late Prince Hans has just been cleared up and it is learned on good authority that he did not leave more than about 70,000 crowns. On the other hand he has left a valuable collection of rare paintings, which are said to be worth a whole fortune in themselves. The old prince was very fond of beautiful paintings and spent almost all the money he had to what appealed to his tastes in this line.

Captain Durage, Who Fought Under Eight Flags, Chokes to Death.

Captain Jules Durage, a civil, mechanical and mining engineer, a soldier of fortune who fought under eight flags, including the Stars and Stripes, and who had been several times wounded and had escaped many perils by land and sea, died from the effects of a chew of tobacco that he got in his throat and could not dislodge, near Pour Pore siding, sixty miles from Duluth, at the age of seventy-three.

He died fully dressed and on the greensward as befitted a man of his adventurous character and experience.

The captain, who also had the title of major, was an Indian fighter in the Black Hills in the early seventies and in 1880 was a well known military figure in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

DOG GUARDS MASTER'S BODY

Canine Has to Be Killed Before Corpse Can Be Touched.

The traditional faith of the dog for its master was never better exemplified than at a lumber camp at Brevator, this state, when a dog guarded the dead body of its master so zealously that nobody dared to approach the body until the animal had been shot.

Maurice Trentell and his dog had occupied the camp and the man lay dead on the floor when a chance passer looked in. The dog was on guard and the man went away for assistance. With others he returned and no amount of strategy or coaxing could get the animal to leave the side of its dead master.

DUMAS HELD TO GRAND JURY

Mayor of Cass Lake Bound Over on Charges of Arson and Robbery. Yeggman State Witness.

Following a preliminary examination at Bemidji Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, held on charges of attempted arson and robbery in connection with an alleged plot to burn the postoffice building at Puposky, eighteen miles north of Bemidji, on June 17, was bound over by Court Commissioner H. A. Simons to await the action of the grand jury.

His bail bond was fixed at $10,000, which was furnished by Fred Dumas of Minneapolis, father of the defendant.

The grand jury does not meet until the second Tuesday in September.

The state's star witness was Martin Behan, caught at Puposky while in the act of robbing the store, as the result of a trap laid by Pinkerton detectives. Behan was wounded at the time and his condition is still serious. He had to be assisted to the witness stand. He made the flat statement that Dr. Dumas and R. E. Smyth, owner of the Puposky building, had planned with him and Mike Davis to rob and burn the store, for which Behan and Davis were to receive $300.

Assistant Attorney General Alexander Janes, who conducted the case for the state, said he never had seen a witness tell a more convincing story than did Behan.

On the other hand Judge Spooner, chief counsel for the defendant, put Behan through a grilling cross-examination and caused him to make weak assertions and answer so hesitatingly some of his testimony that the defendant's attorney improved the opportunity to insinuate the possibility that Behan has been coached in his confession.

Only five witnesses were examined. Behan was the first and he was followed by John Larson, owner of the saloon where it is alleged the robbery plans were made. C. E. Battles, a Bemidji hardware man, told of selling Dr. Dumas a revolver. Carl Swedberg, clerk in the Puposky store, identified Behan as one of the men who came to the store on the afternoon of the robbery and William Munhall closed the testimony by telling of a conversation over the telephone with Dr. Dumas in which Dumas asked as to the whereabouts of Behan.

BEHAN RELEASED ON BAIL

Reward for Turning State's Evidence Against Dr. Dumas.

Martin Behan, captured in the battle of Puposky on the morning of June 17, has been released from the county jail at Bemidji on a bond signed by his wife and J. H. Meyer.

The arraignment of Behan was arranged by Fire Marshal Charles E. Keller. The bail bonds were passed upon by Thayer Bailey, who appeared for the state, and were accepted by Court Commissioner Simons, before whom the proceedings were held.

Behan, who is in the last stages of consumption, will be taken to Wisconsin by his wife and sister.

It is generally understood that his release at this time is in a measure a reward for having turned state's evidence, which implicated Dr. Dumas at the preliminary hearing of the mayor of Cass Lake when he was bound over to await the action of the grand jury under bonds of $10,000.

Carlton is alleged to have corroborated the confession of his wife.

According to the alleged confession the couple quarreled with the aged man, killed him and after his body had lain near a chicken coop until it was frozen they dragged it into the woods and attempted to burn it.

That shade is most refreshing and grateful and ought to be provided in every hen yard and pasture can be demonstrated to the satisfaction of any doubter if he will go into yard or pasture and stand in the boiling sun for fifteen or twenty minutes when the thermometer is hugging the 100 mark. This experience will doubtless open his eyes and develop in him a greater sympathy for the dumb brutes in his keeping.

A property owner in a little town not far away repaired a rather dilapidated store cornice the other day and in so doing destroyed the nests, eggs and some young of a number of pairs of purple martins. The cornice needed fixing, no doubt, but in so doing the nests of some of the most useful birds known to man were broken up. It would have been better all around if the job could have been postponed until the young birds had left the nests.

A bunch of boys will work like majors circling bases, pitching and fielding on a game of baseball when the thermometer is 95 in the shade, yet whine to beat anything if asked to put one-half the energy into hoeing in the garden or fetching wood or water. However, it should be said in behalf of the boy that in this line which he draws between work and play he is not materially different from a majority of the masculine persuasion who are old enough to vote.

FOR ROAD BUILDERS

SUGGESTIONS TO HELP THE INEXPERIENCED IN HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION.

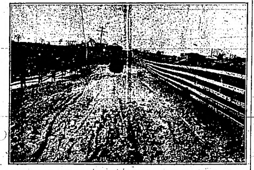
FIRST STEP IS DRAINAGE.

Get Water Off and Away From Road as Quickly as Possible—Weeds and Sod Make Trouble—Proper Use of Gravel.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

It is not overstating the fact to say that three-fourths of the men charged with the responsibility of building and repairing the roads the country over, know very little about the subject; they have not had the engineering experience or even the practical experience necessary; they have simply followed their predecessors and they do what the follow before them did.

In the movement for better highways the first step is a more intelligent expenditure of the time, and money appropriated for the betterment of the roads, to the end that the community shall get the most and the best results for its contribution. It is common practice to do either the wrong thing, or if perchance the right thing is done, to do it at the wrong time of the year, and the result is very often an expenditure of one dollar to get thirty cents worth of benefit. As an instance we might cite that Illinois is spending five million of dollars a year upon the highways, and those in position to know, assert that more than half of it is wasted by ill-timed and misdirected effort.



Before Improvement—Johnson City, Tenn.

What is true of Illinois is true throughout the central west.

In order to make suggestions that will be of value one must assume some typical conditions and indicate what it is best to do to improve the roads under them.

In road improvement the first and most important step is drainage. Without proper drainage every effort will fail. Water is the only natural enemy of roads, and water is a coward and will run away if given a chance, hence get the water off the road and away from the road as quickly as possible. This may be done either by surface or sub-surface drainage, by side ditches with ample fall and proper outlet to carry the water away from the highway, or by tile. If the latter is done nothing less than four inch tile ought to be used and it should be very carefully laid, and should be put on each side of the road, particularly where the drainage is most needed. Be sure that the outlet is unobstructed if side ditches are used, especially on a hill slope, and have them as wide as practicable at the bottom.

After Improvement—Johnson City, Tenn.

This beautiful road shows the same highway as the other illustration taken less than a half mile away after the same has been improved, such roads mean better schools, more social life, contentment, more profit and higher farm values. The increase in the value of farm lands along this road is said to be at least three times as much as the tax to build the road.

These illustrations were furnished by the U. S. Office of Public Roads.

Suppose the bed of the ditch is twenty-four inches wide down a hill slope. Construct so that the bottom of the ditch next to the hill side will be an inch or so lower than the side next to the road, so the flow will tend to the hill side instead of to the road.

Wherever it is necessary to carry water across a roadway, it is best to use iron or concrete pipe and carry it across at an angle. Strong tile will do if it is placed a sufficient distance below the surface so it will not be broken by the traffic. The outlet of this crossing should be considerably farther down hill than the intake.

Where culverts are necessary have them of ample size, and it is equally important to give the culvert sufficient fall. A twelve inch culvert, twenty-four feet long with a fall of four inches, is better than one twice the size with a fall of two inches. The rapid flow through the culvert with a greater fall will keep the culvert clean. In one where the flow is sluggish, desposits will form and soon will choke the flow. Be sure to leave ample outlet so the water can move freely after passing through the culvert.

In grading to make a fill do not allow any weeds or sod to get into the roadway. These will decay and make all kinds of trouble. It is much better to keep them out in the first instance.

If, in making the fill, the material must be moved six hundred feet or less, it will be advantageous to do this with scrapers—wheel type preferred. But if the material must be moved more than that it will be cheaper to put it upon wagons. Any filling of this nature should be made early in the spring, preferably as soon as the frost is out of the ground, so it will have ample time to compact and settle by the summer rains and the traffic. By proper handling during the summer season, a fill several feet deep can be put in shape for the road. A fill of this kind should be dragged with a split log drag or its equipment after rains in order to keep the fills smooth and rounded so the water will run off quickly. The main thing is to prevent this fill from becoming water soaked. If this is done it will be thoroughly dried out and in good condition before the winter sets in, and it can be kept comparatively dry, if the tiles are kept open at the side and water is kept off the surface. In order to do this the ruts must be filled as soon as made.

When a grade is once established the surface thereafter should never be disturbed except the top two or three inches in order to smooth it out with a road drag or harrow.

We will assume that the fill has been made preparatory to putting gravel or crushed stone upon the highway, and thus have a permanent improvement.

The following suggestions will be of benefit to the inexperienced road builder, who has simply farm tools to use.

It is not designed to suggest to the experienced builder, having improved road machinery to use.

Where roads are graveled, it has been very common for the farmers to haul the gravel and dump it down in a winrow, and leave it to be spread and compacted by traffic. Every driver avoids this winrow until soft weather compels him to drive over it. Hence the road made in this manner requires a long time and a great deal of subsequent attention before a fairly good gravel road is the result.

Before putting down the gravel shoulders should be made the width that the gravel is to be spread, which may be anything from nine feet or more. After the gravel is dumped in between the shoulders, take an old fashioned field harrow and go back and forth over this winrow, and with the aid of a little hand work here and there, have it spread over the surface smoothly, and three or four inches higher at the middle than at the sides. This harrowing is very important as it gets the particles, compressing the material closer together And, to a large extent takes the place of a roller. If a roller can be had this also should be used, and used immediately after a rain. But a good road can be had without a roller, if it is taken care of and looked after during the first year, and the best implement to do this is with a split log drag, using it the same as on an earth road. Ruts will form along the wagon track and where the horses go, but a dragging of the surface will fill these and in a short time a compact, smooth roadway will result. A better road can be built in one year if this plan is followed than can be built in three years by the old plan, and the road will be smoother and will serve a better purpose.

Do not forget that the most important part of road building is drainage, and that five or six inches of gravel on a well drained road will give better results than twice this material upon a road that is imperfectly drained.

When the writer was attending the great International Meeting of Road Engineers in Paris, 1908, one of the delegates asked an eminent French engineer how soon after the road was built he commenced to make repairs. His answer was: "The next day." If any place "a stitch in time saves nine," it certainly will do so on the highway. The splendid roads of Europe are looked after by an attendant who goes over them every week, and as soon as a break appears, the necessary repair is made. In this country the practice has been to build an expensive road or pave a street at a high cost, and do nothing with it until it becomes impassable.

When any township has well graded and thoroughly drained its highways the question of good roads is half solved, but only half. A smooth hard wearing surface must be put up on the same, especially upon the main highways. Where the state aid plan is followed the expense is not a burden to anyone and the benefits are many and shared in by all.

We sometimes hear the statement made by those who are trying to find objections to the building of hard roads, that an earth road is much pleasanter to drive upon and easier for the horses, and therefore the advantages of a good road are in some degree off-set by the fact that an earth road at certain seasons is the better of the two.

The writer has always advocated, that where it is practical, it would be well to leave a smooth earth road alongside of the stone or gravel road, so that the drivers might choose between the two. When the weather is fine and the earth road is smooth, the drivers will usually take that in preference to the hard road. This saves wearing the hard road, and thus it serves a double purpose. Let a heavy rain descend and everybody takes the hard road. The difference is the improved highway is good 365 days in the year, and the other road is good and bad by turns. Having them side by side, which can easily be done without additional expense, the people have the choice.

There is another feature of the permanent road that should not be lost sight of. In the busy season while the crops are being planted, sometimes a heavy rain will fall, so that the fields are too wet to work. With good roads the farmer can make a trip to town, do the necessary errands, haul off a load of grain or hogs and keep his farm hands employed. If the roads are unimproved, he can neither work the farm nor travel the highways.

Every road overseer, and in fact every farmer, should send to the state engineer of his state, and to the office of Public Roads at Washington, and have his name put upon the mailing list, so that the bulletins and circulars, of which scores are published every year, upon road building and maintenance, road drainage, and suggestions that grow out of the experience of road building can be followed up and adopted by them. If this were done it would stop an enormous amount of money that every year is wasted upon the highways by ill times and misdirected effort.

Old World Castle on the Hudson.

Washington Heights is to have a castle like those of the old world. Plans are being prepared for Commendatore Celestino Piva, a wealthy importer of raw silk and a member of Givernaud Brothers. It is to be erected on the high bluff overlooking the Hudson river and the Palisades, just back of the historical Arrowhead inn.

The property comprises more than twenty lots, being part of the former McCormick tract.

The castle is to be surrounded by Italian gardens, and the slope of the bluff is to be terraced and winding roads built to reach the castle from the boulevard. The building itself will be a three-story affair, with two look-out turrets at either end and a large pergola at the north end. Italian Renaissance will be the architecture of every detail of the exterior and interior.—New York Tribune.

Not Perfect.

A horse dealer was showing a horse to a prospective buyer. After running him back and forward for a few minutes, he stopped and said to the buyer: "What do you think of his coat? Isn't he a dandy?"

The buyer, noticing that the horse had the heaves, replied: "Yes, I like his coat, all right, but I don't like his pants."—Tit Bits.

Our Varying Moods.

"Yes, environment does influence us."

"How now?"

"You never see a man coming out of church with his hat perched on the side of his head."

The putting of the lawn mower away when through using it and the rubbing of the hoe and wheel cultivators bright when through using them are largely matters of habit. It is well to remember that it is just about as easy to form the right habit along this line as to fall into the bad one of leaving the tools wherever one happens to get through using them.

There is good reason to believe that the codling worm injury to apples this year in those sections where the crop was wiped out by frost last year will be greatly reduced owing to the fact that there were mighty few apples left on which the eggs could be laid and in which the worms could find a harbor. It is another illustration of the old saw "It's an ill wind that blows no good."

Townspeople whose places are bordered with shade trees can do a real favor to the drivers perched on the tops of loads of hay or straw or other high loads by keeping the limbs which droop into the roadway trimmed up. It does not sweeten a fellow's temper to have a part of his cargo pulled off into the highway or to get a scratch or welt across the face from these overhanging limbs.

A new interest has been shown in irrigation in this country within the past few years, and in particular since the passage of the reclamation act by congress, yet irrigation as a practice of agriculture is as old as that of scratching the surface of the soil with a stick, the forerunner of the modern chilled steel plow. Mesopotamia, Egypt and sections of our own southwest show the remains of irrigation systems hoary with age that hundreds of years ago lapsed into ruin and disuse.

While the sweet potatoes grown in the north do not develop the sweetness and quality of the New Jersey or more southern product, one can still raise a pretty fair article. The soil in which they are planted should be rich, light and mellow and should so lie as to receive as much warmth as possible from the sun, a slope to the south, with shelter of some kind to the north being preferable. While the practice is often followed of planting them on ridges, this is not imperative if the soil is well drained and is kept thoroughly cultivated.

We watched a groceryman counting eggs into a shipping case the other day and called his attention to a number of apparently fresh white eggs that were badly smeared with mud or manure, due to the hens having inadequate nesting places. His reply was: "Yes; there's really no excuse for it. Those eggs are just as fresh and good as any that have been brought in, but the folks were careless. When they reach the commission houses they will go in as 'dirts,' which means that about 3 cents per dozen will be knocked off the price."

A stirring of the surface soil every few days, and particularly after a rain, will put a blanket of mellow earth on the surface that will tend to keep the subsoil moist and loose in a condition the most favorable possible for the development of the growing plants. It is well to remember in this connection that the circulation of soil air is as essential to the growth of the

The other day at Fort Worth, the market was topped by a car of hogs which were fattened largely on rice, and the fact was one that roused much interest on the part of both hog raisers and buyers. In the rice country along the coast, cracked rice and what is known as rice polish, a by-product of rice milling, have long been a drug on the market, and, while their food value as a hog ration has not been completely demonstrated, it has been proved that when fed in connection with corn they make an economical fattening ration.

In spite of the efforts of the agricultural department at Washington to arouse interest among farmers in the production and use of denatured alcohol, practically nothing has been attained along the line desired. Dr. Wiley, who has charge of the denatured alcohol experimental work, says that a still costing $2,500 would convert into alcohol the products of a territory six miles square and that the cost of production per gallon would be much cheaper in a plant of this size than in one considerably smaller. In Germany and France the smaller individual stills have been in profitable use for the past 250 years.

The other day in passing through eastern Washington the writer noticed what seemed to be a sort of dust storm on the landscape at some distance, the cause of the disturbance not being in evidence. As the train advanced and a view was had from a different angle a "dry" farmer, harrowing with a six horse outfit, proved to be the kicker up of the big cloud of dust. To the farmer used to pastures and roadsides clad in blue grass and tilled soil held firmly down by surface moisture the dry farming condition referred to would be strange and distasteful perhaps, but to offset the drawbacks of dust and summer drought are ideal ripening and harvesting conditions—no hail, no smut, no rust, no floods.

FOR POTATO BLIGHT.

If the growing season for the potatoes should be damp and muggy and blight should develop, the vines should be sprayed with the Bordeaux solution made by dissolving four pounds of bluestone (copper sulphate)

Drowns In River.

Henry Wilson, the son of C. M. Wilson of this city was drowned in the Red Lake River about one mile south of the city last Monday. Just when the accident happened is not known but it is thot that the accident happened some time Monday, as he left home some time Monday presumably for the purpose of going down to the river to take a bath. Getting uneasy at his prolonged absence a search was made on Tuesday and the clothes found lying on the bank about one mile south of this city, and the body later recovered out of the river.

SHORT MORE THAN $21,000

County Attorney Talks of Minnesota University Funds.

That J. D. Bren, former treasurer of the state university, is short in his accounts more than $21,000, mostly accounted for, was the statement of James Robertson, county attorney of Hennepin county, following the testimony of John Brady, an expert accountant, before a subcommittee of the grand jury.

The committee is making an exhaustive inquiry into the status of the university finances. Aside from probing into the alleged embezzlement of funds by Bren the grand jury wants to know how the regents have handled the funds for years back.

RISKS LIFE AND FALLS DEAD

Former Minnesota Public Examiner Stops Runaway.

While a cheering crowd stood around him in front of the Willard hotel at St. Paul after he had stopped a runaway horse that dashed past the corner of St. Peter and Seventh street, Anton Schaefer, former public examiner, noted athlete, prominent in national guard, fraternal, political and banking circles and member of the executive committee of the United Commercial Travelers, fell dead. It was a tragic termination of an incident in which he had risked personal harm to stop the horse, coming out unscratched, but succumbing to the heat and excitement.

INQUIRY IS MADE BROADER

Governor Orders Probe of School at Red Wing.

The proceedings against Superintendent F. A. Whittier of the state training school for boys at Red Wing took a new angle when a section of the code was recollected under which the governor can order the state board of control to investigate any penal, reformatory or charitable institution and report its condition. Acting under this section of the statutes the governor promptly addressed a letter to the board asking it to investigate the Red Wing school and particularly the system of discipline used there.

TWO IRON RANGE MEN KILLED

Sit Too Close to Track and Train Hits Them.

Two men were killed by a southbound extra on the Duluth and Iron Range railroad near Athens. One is said to be Jacob Rantella of Embarrass. The other man was unidentified. The men were sitting too close to the track and disregarded the warnings of the engine's whistle and bell. Rantella leaves a family.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Suffering a fatal stroke of apoplexy, Julius Kempe, sixty-five years old, a pioneer of Winona county, rode several blocks through the principal streets of St. Charles, his limp body leaning to one side of the carriage and his arm dangling over one of the wheels. Those on the street at the time were not aware Kempe was dead until one of the man's friends halted the horse.

Michael Bernard Shields, a pioneer Minnesotan, is dead at his home in Mendota, aged sixty. Born in Illinois in 1851, Michael Shields was brought to Minnesota by his parents in 1854. He has lived in Mendota and vicinity ever since. He is survived by fourteen children.

Charles A. Staples, twice mayor of Stillwater, died in the hospital for the insane at Rochester. He was sixty-one years of age and was the son of the late Isaac Staples, a millionaire lumberman of Stillwater.

Mrs. Bertha Ojertsen, ninety-six years old, is dead at Minneapolis.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The famous Cunningham Alaskan coal land claims, through which it has been alleged that the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate had planned to extend their vast interests in Alaska and to control one of the most valuable coal fields in the world, were finally disallowed by the department of the interior. Secretary of the Interior Walter Fisher, having approved the department's decision, as handed down by Fred Dennett, commissioner of the land office, the last door is believed to have been closed to the Cunningham claimants.

A sweeping investigation of the express companies of the United States, affected by the interstate commerce laws, was ordered by the interstate commerce commission on its own motion. Evidently in anticipation of this action by the commission practically all of the express companies filed new tariffs which are believed to be material reductions in rates.

Shadowed for weeks by detectives instructed to get anything possible against him was the alleged experience of which Clarence S. Funk of Chicago, star witness in the present Lorimer investigation, complained to the senate committee inquiring into the Lorimer election.

An important part in the decision of Commissioner Dennett canceling the Cunningham claims, which may result in canceling a number of other Alaskan coal land claims now pending, is the interpretation of the Alaskan coal land act of 1904.

Expeditious action on the pending treaties with Honduras and Nicaragua providing for customs guarantees for foreign loans by those governments was urged by President Taft in a message to the senate.

President Taft has announced the appointment of Philander Claxton, professor of education at the University of Tennessee, as commissioner of education, succeeding Elmer E. Brown, resigned.

When the government's fiscal year of 1911 closed the federal treasury held a cash surplus of at least $33,000,000 and showed an excess of all receipts over all disbursements for the first time since 1907.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Following a preliminary examination at Bemidji, Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, held on charges of attempted arson and robbery in connection with an alleged plot to burn the postoffice building at Puposky on June 17, was bound over by Court Commissioner H. A. Simons to await the action of the grand jury. The state's star witness was Martin Behan, caught at Puposky while in the act of robbing the store, as the result of a trap laid by Pinkerton detectives.

One of the most daring and desperate train robberies that has taken place in the East occurred on the Philadelphia and Erie railroad at an isolated spot five miles from Erie, Pa. As a result four men were injured by the bandits, two of them with bullets; the mail and express cars were stripped of valuables and the lives of many passengers were endangered.

Extensive frauds against the government through the undervaluation of importations of laces from Syria have been disclosed in proceedings before the board of United States general appraisers. The undervaluations are declared to have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the treasury department within the past ten years.

Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva and 189 other officers and members of the Christian Catholic church in Zion City, Ill., have been indicted charged with election frauds at the Zion City elections, April 5 and 18, involving, in part, control of the church founded by the late John Alexander Dowie.

G. Luther Bickford, former state treasurer and long prominent in politics in North Dakota, was convicted by a jury in district court at Washburn, N. D., of embezzlement of state funds. The jury was out nine hours. The minimum sentence is one year.

Charles Westfall of Ida Grove, Ia., after a quarrel with his wife, shot and killed the woman, fired at their three-year-old adopted daughter and then sent a bullet through his brain. Both Westfall and his wife [illegible] dead when found.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Edward Hines, the millionaire lumberman of Chicago, before the senate Lorimer committee, gave interesting details of his rise from poverty to wealth and told at length of his connection with the senatorial scandal, how he became interested in it and what he had done to bring about Lorimer's election. He first took hold of the matter, he said, at the instance of Senator Penrose, and later at the request of Senator Aldrich and of President Taft himself.

Officers, agents and members of the various paper board manufacturing corporations and copartnerships included in the membership of the Eastern Box Board club were indicted by the federal grand jury at New York for conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Imported furs to the value of $150,000 were seized by New York customs officials, who raided the establishment of Charles Weinschecker & Co. The firm is charged with defrauding the government of duties by alleged undervaluations.

One of the bitterest strikes in the history of the recent labor troubles in Chicago was settled when the Otis Elevator company and the machinists came to an agreement after two months of labor warfare.

A musical Comedy that can play a season of fourty-four weeks in the largest cities, including New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and put in an entire summer at Chicago, must possess some merit, yet this is the record of "The Flower of the Ranch" coming to the Auditorium, Monday July 10th. As the title might suggest, the play is of the West, and is said to tell a stirring story of the latter day land of romance. The characters include Indians, cowboys, Mexicans, ranchmen and types usually found in the section of the country selected by the author as the locale of the play. The books, lyrics and music are all by Joseph E. Howard, whose contributions to the stage have been well worth while. The company numbers some forty people.

There is said to be a razzle-dazzle, zippity go bang about "The Flower of the Ranch", Jos. Howard's musical comedy novelty, coming to the Auditorium, Monday, July 10th, that makes it worth while. The curtain rises on an empty stage, and bing! a herd of cowboys in "chaps", sombreros and red handkerchiefs breeze in like a Kansas cyclone, dust flying; and the action is on. Action is Mr. Howard's hobby in musical plays, and he has plenty of it in "The Flower of the Ranch". There is a good plot unusual in musical comedy, but the play hits the high places when it comes to popular catchy melodies, for which Mr. Howard is well known, and by the end of the first act the whistlers get busy.

A tuneful musical comedy is "The Flower of the Ranch", one of the best from the Howard pen, coming to the Auditorium, July 10th. This is one of the newest ideas for a typical musical play as there is ample opportunity to interpolate songs and dancing numbers for which Howard is noted. Of the song hits, "Worried", sung by Miss Rose Fields, as "Flower", and Jess Harris as "Skivers", makes a big hit. The singing and acting in "Wishes", by the comedy-quartette receives encore after encore, while the feature number is in the second act. "The Days of '49" number, when the entire chorus comes on the stage with dress suit cases and by a most ingenious arrangement forms a stage coach, wheels, horses and all. This latest Western idea gives to the public "something different" from the usual settings in musical plays.

The Northern Pacific, through G. H. MacRea, general passenger agent, has already notified traveling men who have inquired, that there will be no change in the 2,000-mile books, but that a new plan for sale of 1,000 books is under consideration.

BUILDING OF GOOD ROADS PROBLEM FOR FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

WOULD HARDLY FEEL TAX

General Welfare Clause of Constitution Gives Congress Power to Build Roads—Federal Aid Would Give Mighty Impetus to Road Building.

BY HOWARD H. GROSS.

About once a year the post office department sends out word to the various postmasters throughout the country where the roads are bad, threatening to suspend rural mail delivery unless the roads are put in acceptable condition. This is right and proper. It is an outrage to expect the mail carrier to wade through a sea of mud to carry the mail to the farm home. It ought not to be necessary for him to do so. At times the roads get so bad that the mail wagon must be abandoned, and the trip is then made on horseback, carrying only the letters. Sometimes the delivery has to be abandoned for days at a time on account of road conditions.

Why the roads should be so bad the country over, when nearly everybody wants good roads is a strange anomaly, and this unfortunate situation will probably continue until the people approach the good roads problem from the right angle.

It is a tremendous undertaking to gravel and macadamize the principal highways of the country—it means the building of 400,000 or 500,000 miles of roads, and would cost between a billion and a half to two billion dollars, or from $15 to $20 for every man, woman and child in the land. This seems like a colossal outlay and it is, but the money could not all be spent at once. It would take probably twenty years to do it, so it would be at the rate of perhaps one dollar per year per capita. The department of agriculture estimates that the actual saving to the people by good roads would be at lease $3.50 per person per year. If this estimate is anywhere nearly correct, and it probably is approximately so, then the saving to the people alone by good roads would pay for them in five years' time.

There is no fact better demonstrated in economics than that the building of good roads adds to property values many times the cost and brings social, educational and economic benefits that make the building of roads the best paying investment that any community or state can make.

The question is, how ought this matter to be handled? In the writer's opinion the first duty is to the federal government. It is high time for it to get busy on this problem. The money Uncle Sam raises is by indirect taxation and this tax the people scarcely feel and there is very little complaint about it. It hurts us more to pay one dollar as a tax through the tax collector's office than it does to pay five times the amount by indirect taxation. Under the general welfare clause of the constitution, congress has the power to build roads. It also has specific authority to do so for those roads used for rural delivery, and these comprise nearly all the main highways of the country.

Suppose, then, we estimate an expenditure of $1,500,000,000 to be made upon highways, jointly by the nation, the state and the township or county, letting the federal government contribute one-third the amount, and prorating the money between the states on a joint basis of population and road mileage. This would give a state like Illinois between $26,000,000 and $27,000,000. The funds to be provided for from time to time by long-time, low interest bonds. The tax per capita to carry these bonds at three per cent., when all are issued, would be about 15 cents per year—three car fares! Then let the state pay one-third from a general tax levy, or, better still, by a bond issue, and one-third paid locally by the township. It is common practice for the state to contribute to road building under what is popularly known as the state aid plan—the townships have been doing the little that has been done and doing it without help for many years. The new feature of the proposition is the federal contribution, for which there is ample authority and for which there is a precedent and a paramount need.

Within the last few years there has been a great hue and cry throughout the land for waterway improvement; conventions have been held and the demand made that the federal government contribute $500,000,000 to that end, at the rate of $50,000,000 a year for ten years. The point the writer desires to make is that where it is possible for one ton of freight or produce to be carried by water, there would be thousands of tons moved by wagon over the public highways, and that if the amount of money demanded for waterway improvement were applied to highways, it would be hundreds of times more beneficial, and the benefits would reach all of the people.

The government is using about 900,000 miles of public roads for rural mail delivery and these are post roads within the meaning of the Constitution. Congress has express power to build and maintain post roads, and if it can build and maintain them it certainly could help to do it.

The question may be asked whether a bond issue of $500,000,000 for aid in road building would be at all hazardous. By referring to the statement of the treasury department, one will find that the present bond issue amounts to about $11 per capita, and the annual interest charge is 29 cents. The issue of $500,000,000 of bonds would carry the bond issue up to approximately $16 per capita and the interest charge to 44 cents. At that rate it would be the smallest bonded indebtedness per capita of any of the leading countries of the world. As against the $16, Great Britain has a debt of $88 per capita, German $49, Italy $92, and France $144. It is perfectly safe to say that if the government would issue and expend $500,000,000 of bonds in aiding the construction of permanent highways, the people would never know that an additional tax had been imposed and would never feel the payment. This step would give a mighty impetus to road building, and in ten or fifteen years probably 400,000 miles of good roads could be built, and this would revolutionize transportation and would add immeasurably to the pleasure of country life, and would add several times the amount to the property value of the nation, and give us better schools, higher social life and a higher standard of civilization.

There is a widespread demand for a parcels post, and as congress usually responds to popular demand, and always does if the clamor is loud and long enough. So it is quite probable the parcel post will be tried out.

Let the government help build good roads—the highways over which the children must go to school, the doctor to reach the suffering and over which must pass every bushel of grain and every bale of cotton raised—the road which reaches every field, every farm home and every market town. The people everywhere demand good roads. Roads are universal; waterways are sectional. Good roads mean a saving in transportation far greater than can be accomplished in any other way. Good roads mean better schools, more social life and a higher standard of living; they mean progress and civilization.

GRADES AND GOOD ROADS

Highways Traveled by Heavily Loaded Vehicles Should Be Kept Down to Three Per Cent.

A one per cent. grade on a road means a rise of one foot for each hundred feet of distance traveled up the hill. A ten per cent. grade means ten feet rise in each hundred feet so traveled. A one per cent. grade, then, means that in traveling up hill one mile an ascent is made of 52.8 feet, while a ten per cent grade means a rise in altitude of 528 feet in a mile. Accurate tests have shown that a horse which can pull 1,000 pounds on a level road can pull only 810 pounds on a rise of one foot in fifty, and on a rise of one foot in ten he can pull only 250 pounds. These facts show that the greatest load than can be hauled over a road is the load which can be taken up the steepest hill on that road, or through the deepest mud hole. It is therefore advised that all highways traveled by heavily loaded vehicles should be kept within a three or four per cent. grade if practicable. To do this may require a change of location to get around hills, always keeping in mind that the lower the grade the larger the load may be hauled and the cost of haulage kept at the lowest point.

Birds a Help to the Farmer.

The demand for the protection of wild birds was once based solely on humane and esthetic grounds; now the demand is coming to be based in addition on economic grounds, which will commend it to a larger number of men and insure it a more careful hearing in the court of public opinion. Bird slaughter not long ago was decried because the native songsters were being killed at the behest of millinery fashion.

Now another note is sounded. The increase of insect pests and consequent reduction of the harvests has corresponded with the decrease of the birds. In addition to filling their craws with insects numerous wild birds feed on weed seeds, and weeds are a handicap in agriculture.

In several states increasing safeguards are being thrown around birds because of their worth as aids to agriculture.

Russia's Fight on Tuberculosis.

The first "white flower day," which was observed in Russia on May 3, was a "success beyond the hopes of the most sanguine," says the Russische Correspondenz. Throughout the nation on that day men, women and children offered for sale tiny white flowers. The proceeds of the sales were handed over to the League for the Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis. Money in large quantities was collected, the smallest and poorest hamlets contributing their share. It is not to be wondered at, because Russia is really the land of the dread malady. The trying climate and unspeakable sanitary conditions make it a fruitful ground for the development of the disease, and statistics show that in late years there has been a steady increase in its ravages. The manner in which the people responded on the first "white flower day" shows that they appreciate the conditions.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Minnesota's school fund will be increased nearly $500,000 as the result of the May and June land sales, according to State Auditor Iverson, who returned from Northern Minnesota after holding sales in Roseau county, where 5,480 acres were sold at an average price per acre of $7.50. More than 17,000 acres of state land have already been sold in that county, and approximately 68,000 acres of state lands have been disposed of during the June and May sales at an average price of about $7.50.

Five new laws of general importance passed by the last legislature went into effect July 1. They are: Prohibiting the sale of "malt" outside of licensed drinking places or drug stores; creating a state department of weights and measures; prohibiting the sale of oleomargarine colored to imitate butter; prohibiting the marriage of first cousins; requiring rubber tires and casings to bear the name of the maker and date of manufacture.

General C. McC. Reeve, for twenty-eight years connected with the national guard of Minnesota, will retire as colonel of the First regiment, Minnesota national guard. General Reeve, who distinguished himself in the war in the Philippines and received the rank of brigadier general immediately after the capture of Manila, will resign his post Aug. 7, the sixty-fourth anniversary of his birth.

Fifty orthodox Jewish families will leave Chicago next fall and form the first American agricultural colony of Jews. The plan was unfolded by B. A. Nelson at a meeting in the Chicago Hebrew institute. Mr. Nelson has arranged a plan for a communal colony in the timber lands of Northern Minnesota. It will start with fifty families, each of which will buy forty acres of the land.

James A. Manahan, the Minneapolis attorney, has been retained by the Publishers' association of New York to represent them in the contest over the proposed increase in postal rates for magazines, recommended by Postmaster General Hitchcock. Mr. Manahan is in New York and will spend the next three or four months in the East, largely in New York and Washington.

Forty-five thousand acres of land in Beltrami county, near Lakes Cass and Winnibigoshish, are to be opened to homestead settlement in the near future. According to information received from the general land office by Representative Steenerson the proclamation for their opening will be issued in a few days. The lands will be sold at $1.25 an acre.

Miss Ada Comstock, daughter of ex-Congressman S. C. Comstock of Moorhead, has been officially notified of her election as trustee of Smith college, Northampton, Mass. Miss Comstock has been dean of women in the Minnesota university for a number of years.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While attempting to pass a long line of moving vans, Robert Peterson, twenty-four years old, of Minneapolis, was hurled from his carriage, which was struck by a street car, and trampled by the heavy work horses. He died at St. Barnabas hospital shortly after his arrival there in an ambulance.

Robert Schmidt, a Perham well digger, was instantly killed by the caving in of a well which he was digging at George Kapler's summer resort near that place. His body was recovered inside of an hour, but life was extinct, his neck having been broken. He was forty-seven years old.

George H. Miller, seventy-five years old, one of the first hardware dealers in Minneapolis and a resident of that city for thirty years, fell from the street car viaduct in Hopkins and died shortly after he was taken to his home at Baker station, a short distance from Hopkins.

Three Italians, members of an extra gang, traveling on a handcar from Kelly Lake to Hibbing, collided with an ore train and two will die. The other escaped with minor injuries.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Suffering a fatal stroke of apoplexy, Julius Kempe, sixty-five years old, a pioneer of Winona county, rode several blocks through the principal streets of St. Charles, his limp body leaning to one side of the carriage and his arm dangling over one of the wheels. Those on the street at the time were not aware Kempe was dead until one of the man's friends halted the horse.

Michael Bernard Shields, a pioneer Minnesotan, is dead at his home in Mendota, aged sixty. Born in Illinois in 1851, Michael Shields was brought to Minnesota by his parents in 1854. He has lived in Mendota and vicinity ever since. He is survived by fourteen children.

Charles A. Staples, twice mayor of Stillwater, died in the hospital for the insane at Rochester. He was sixty-one years of age and was the son of the late Isaac Staples, a millionaire lumberman of Stillwater.

Mrs. Bertha Gjertsen, ninety-six years old, is dead at Minneapolis.

SHORT MORE THAN $21,000

County Attorney Talks of Minnesota University Funds.

That J. D. Bren, former treasurer of the state university, is short in his accounts more than $21,000, mostly accounted for, was the statement of James Robertson, county attorney of Hennepin county, following the testimony of John Brady, an expert accountant, before a subcommittee of the grand jury.

The committee is making an exhaustive inquiry into the status of the university finances. Aside from probing into the alleged embezzlement of funds by Bren the grand jury wants to know how the regents have handled the funds for years back.

RISKS LIFE AND FALLS DEAD

Former Minnesota Public Examiner Stops Runaway.

While a cheering crowd stood around him in front of the Willard hotel at St. Paul after he had stopped a runaway horse that dashed past the corner of St. Peter and Seventh street, Anton Schaefer, former public examiner, noted athlete, prominent in national guard, fraternal, political and banking circles and member of the executive committee of the United Commercial Travelers, fell dead. It was a tragic termination of an incident in which he had risked personal harm to stop the horse, coming out unscratched, but succumbing to the heat and excitement.

Governor Orders Probe of School at Red Wing.

The proceedings against Superintendent F. A. Whittier of the state training school for boys at Red Wing took a new angle when a section of the code was recollected under which the governor can order the state board of control to investigate any penal, reformatory or charitable institution and report its condition. Acting under this section of the statutes the governor promptly addressed a letter to the board asking it to investigate the Red Wing school and particularly the system of discipline used there.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The famous Cunningham Alaskan coal land claims, through which it has been alleged that the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate had planned to extend their vast interests in Alaska and to control one of the most valuable coal fields in the world, were finally disallowed by the department of the interior. Secretary of the Interior Walter Fisher, having approved the department's decision, as handed down by Fred Dennett, commissioner of the land office, the last door is believed to have been closed to the Cunningham claimants.

A sweeping investigation of the express companies of the United States, affected by the interstate commerce laws, was ordered by the interstate commerce commission on its own motion. Evidently in anticipation of this action by the commission practically all of the express companies filed new tariffs which are believed to be material reductions in rates.

Shadowed for weeks by detectives instructed to get anything possible against him was the alleged experience of which Clarence S. Funk of Chicago, star witness in the present Lorimer investigation, complained to the senate committee inquiring into the Lorimer election.

An important part in the decision of Commissioner Dennett canceling the Cunningham claims, which may result in canceling a number of other Alaskan coal land claims now pending, is the interpretation of the Alaskan coal land act of 1904.

Expeditious action on the pending treaties with Honduras and Nicaragua providing for customs guarantees for foreign loans by those governments, was urged by President Taft in a message to the senate.

President Taft has announced the appointment of Philander Claxton, professor of education at the University of Tennessee, as commissioner of education, succeeding Elmer E. Brown, resigned.

When the government's fiscal year of 1911 closed the federal treasury held a cash surplus of at least $33,000,000 and showed an excess of all receipts over all disbursements for the first time since 1907.

Following a preliminary examination at Bemidji, Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, held on charges of attempted arson and robbery in connection with an alleged plot to burn the postoffice building at Puposky on June 17, was bound over by Court Commissioner H. A. Simons to await the action of the grand jury. The state's star witness was Martin Behan, caught at Puposky while in the act of robbing the store, as the result of a trap laid by Pinkerton detectives.

One of the most daring and desperate train robberies that has taken place in the East occurred on the Philadelphia and Erie railroad at an isolated spot five miles from Erie, Pa. As a result four men were injured by the bandits, two of them with bullets; the mail and express cars were stripped of valuables and the lives of many passengers were endangered.

Extensive frauds against the government through the undervaluation of importations of laces from Syria have been disclosed in proceedings before the board of United States general appraisers. The undervaluations are declared to have caused the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the treasury department within the past ten years.

Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva and 189 other officers and members of the Christian Catholic church in Zion City, Ill., have been indicted charged with election frauds at the Zion City elections, April 5 and 18, involving, in part, control of the church founded by the late John Alexander Dowie.

G. Luther Bickford, former state treasurer and long prominent in politics in North Dakota, was convicted by a jury in district court at Washburn, N. D., of embezzlement of state funds. The jury was out nine hours. The minimum sentence is one year.

Charles Westfall of Ida Grove, Ia., after a quarrel with his wife, shot and killed the woman, fired at their three-year-old adopted daughter and then sent a bullet through his brain. Both Westfall and his wife were dead when found.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Edward Hines, the millionaire lumberman of Chicago, before the senate Lorimer committee, gave interesting details of his rise from poverty to wealth and told at length of his connection with the senatorial scandal, how he became interested in it and what he had done to bring about Lorimer's election. He first took hold of the matter, he said, at the instance of Senator Penrose, and later at the request of Senator Aldrich and of President Taft himself.

Officers, agents and members of the various paper board manufacturing corporations and copartnerships included in the membership of the Eastern Box Board club were indicted by the federal grand jury at New York for conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Imported furs to the value of $150,000 were seized by New York customs officials, who raided the establishment of Charles Weinschecker & Co. The firm is charged with defrauding the government of duties by alleged undervaluations.

One of the bitterest strikes in the history of the recent labor troubles in Chicago was settled when the Otis Elevator company and the machinists came to an agreement after two months of labor warfare.

RAISING THE MONEY

BOND ISSUE IS BEST WAY TO PAY FOR GOOD ROADS.

EFFORTS OFTEN MISDIRECTED

Good Roads Fever Carries Community Off Its Feet Frequently and Work Is Started Along Impractical Lines—Tax Levy Plan Wrong.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

In forwarding any great movement, as the building of good roads, enthusiasm is essential, but unless this is coupled with a knowledge of the subject, it is a question whether it sometimes does not do more harm than good. The writer believes that a movement for better highways is often retarded by over-zealous friends who are attempting to do something they do not understand. The proposition to build good roads throughout the land is a very big one, and exceedingly important. It is a question that must be handled in a big way. If anyone had suggested fifty years ago the building of a railway to the Pacific slope, he would have been declared at least visionary. This has been accomplished and today there are a half dozen such railways, and the four months' journey across the desert is now compassed in less than three days. While the building of good wagon roads throughout the country is an immeasurably big job, yet there are back of it boundless resources; there is far more to encourage us than the builders of these first great continental roads had to encourage them. Let us go forward with a stout heart and high purpose and with a clear head, and all will come out right.

Macadam Road Near Charlotte, N. C.

Here is a view of a North Carolina road built by convict labor. Note provision has been made for an earth road along side of the macadam roadway. Thus the traveler has the choice. When the earth road is in good condition it will be used, at other times travel will be upon the hard road. This is an excellent plan in every way.

In a good roads campaign one of the most important things is to unlearn some things that are not so, to get a view of the proposition from the right angle, and not to work along impractical lines. The good roads fever usually breaks out in some community with a hurrah, to build a mile or two of hard roads, and there is a squabble to determine which particular road shall have the improvement. Selfishness crops out and must be reckoned with. When the particular road has been determined upon, then comes the question of raising funds. Those who are disappointed will give nothing; others will contribute various amounts; the banker, merchant and grain dealer are called upon and subscribe different sums; others will contribute labor; an entertainment will be held in the town hall, the proceeds to be devoted to the building of the road. The local paper will be filled with letters, interviews and editorials; everybody is patting himself on the back and talking of the wonderful progress that is being made.

Road Before Dragging at Maitland, Mo.

This road presents the worst possible conditions. It is inhuman to attempt travel under such conditions.

This is all very well so far as it goes, and perhaps the moral effect is good—it stirs up the community, but it does not do very much in the way of road building. Usually a half mile or so is the limit and may reach from the town to the cemetery. Well, that does some good, and will give a departing citizen a smoother road in death than he had in life.

The means employed in such a campaign are wholly inadequate to the end sought. It reminds one of the old woman who proposed to keep the tide back with her broom.

There are also other unsatisfactory, expensive and wrong ways to take up this question. The most common one is for the township to levy an annual tax for hard roads that will produce perhaps $1,000 or $2,000 and expend it upon a gravel or macadam stretch of road, which is to be extended from year to year at a rate that will give the township a fair amount of hard roads, say, in twenty or thirty years. By the time the last mile is built under this plan, the first one is worn out, the rule being that the road once built receives no attention, and that the money raised is spent upon building more roads. The roads are usually built without much, if any, attention being paid to drainage, and the results are not always satisfactory, in fact, they are seldom what they should be. Those charged with the duty of spending the money nineteen times in twenty know little, if anything, of how the road should be built, and when it is finished it is usually about half as good as it ought to be and has cost nearly twice as much as it should, for let it be said again and again that the greater part of the taxes raised for highways is frittered away by misdirected effort. An eminent engineer, who has had extended experience, says at least sixty per cent of the funds raised for highways is wasted. Certainly the waste is at least one-half. This being the case, it follows that one of the first things to do is to stop this awful waste and see that a dollar's worth of road results from every dollar expended, instead of forty to fifty cents worth. It ought to be clear that it is very important that roads should be constructed under expert supervision, and that a capable road engineer is needed. Of course it is not practical to have this and build the roads piece meal, a short stretch at a time, hence the township will find it wise, instead of an annual tax levy, to issue bonds to the full constitutional limit and build, say, fifteen to twenty miles of road at once and pay for them by the bond issue, paying off the bonds in installments. This is vastly better and cheaper than to build short stretches by an annual tax levy. Of course interest will have to be paid upon the bonds, but on the other hand the people will have good roads to use, and if the use of the roads is not worth more than the interest on the bonds required to build them, then road building is not worth while. The world's experience is that good roads are always worth several times what they cost to any community.

There are many advantages to this plan. By building many miles at once it is practical to have good engineering supervision and proper specifications, and the result will be a well drained, a better and a more durable road and one that will not cost nearly as much to maintain as one poorly constructed. Again, on so large a job contractors will figure lower than upon a small job and the best machinery and methods can be employed to advantage, so it is fair to say that twenty miles of road built under a single contract will cost from 15 to 20 per cent. less than if built a mile or so at a time. Again, the roads are all new at the same time and will be far more satisfactory to the people, and the benefits will be simultaneous to the whole community.

Suppose the state in which a given township is situated aids in building permanent roads, under the plan that is followed in more than one-half the states. This will make the roads built a much lighter burden.

Let us see how the matter of taxation will affect the owner of a typical farm by the two plans of road building, that is, a little each year by an annual tax levy, and the other by a bond issue, supplemented by state aid, or in other words, by comparing the old way with the new. In order to give exact figures and have a concrete example, it will be necessary to take a typical farm in some portion of the central west, and apply the two plans to that farm. As the figures are at hand, the writer, selects an average farm in the corn belt of Illinois. There is no reason why this farm should be taken in preference to a farm in any other state, except that more complete data is at hand, hence it will be used. The same plan will apply with slight variations to other farms in other states, the owners of which, by getting the assessed valuation of their township and state, can figure out and ascertain each for himself just what the effect will be upon his farm.

The assessed valuation of an average 160 acre farm in the corn belt of Illinois is about $3,000. Suppose the township, of which this is a part, has an assessed valuation of, say, $600,000 and is out of debt. By the old plan, suppose there is an annual tax levy for ten years of 60 cents on one hundred dollars. This will produce $3,600 per year, and in ten years will total $36,000. This money spent under average local conditions means that about half of it will be wasted, and the farm in question will have to pay each year sixty cents on thirty hundred dollars or $18.00 per year. The net result of this expenditure will be the paying out of $36,000 during ten years, and probably will produce not much over $18,000 worth of roads at what they ought to cost.

Suppose the new plan is adopted, by issuing bonds to the full constitutional limit of 5 per cent., paying the same off in installments spread over twenty years, and letting the next generation, who will use the roads, help to pay for them. The bond limit on the township in question is $30,000, of which exactly $150.00 rests upon the farm in question, to be paid off one-twentieth each year, or $7.50 on account of principal each year for twenty years. Interest of course will be paid annually, but will decrease as the bonds are paid off. The first year's interest will be 5 per cent on $150.00, or $7.50. Add $7.50 on account of principal, and the first year's payment on this farm for good roads is $15.00.

The tenth year one-half of the bonds will be paid off, and the interest will drop to $3.75, so that that year the tax will be $11.25. The last year's payment will be $7.50 on account of principal and 38 cents on account of interest, making a total of $7.88.

Thirty thousand dollars of bond issue will build far more and far better roads on a general contract, than $36,000 spent in ten years on a patch work plan, and the cost to the tax payer will be considerably less as well.

Now, let us suppose that Illinois had, as it surely needs, an up-to-date state aid law, whereby one-half the amount required for building permanent roads should be paid from a state tax levy. If this condition obtained, then the township in question could after raising $30,000, draw $30,000 more from the state, and expend $60,000 upon highways in their township. In Illinois less than one-third the property of the state is represented by farms, so the state tax will be spread over an immeasurably greater amount of property. A tax of ten cents on one hundred dollars for the state, will produce nearly $2,500,000 a year, and the state aid tax upon the farm in question will be $3.00 per year in order to raise the second $30,000. This state tax would add $3.00 to the tax bill of the farm in question, so the maximum amount per year, if $60,000 were expended upon the roads of the township would be $18.00 per year—less than 12 cents per acre per year, and take it for a series of years, anyone who can figure at all, will see that the cost to that community, spread over a series of years, will be even less under the bond contract plan, and that they can get, by the new plan, about three times as much road as they would upon the old. In handling road building in this big way, it will give an early and practical solution of the good roads problem, vastly better and more effective than to pass the hat, get up an entertainment and wear oneself out to raise the money to build a little bit of road.

Uses of Paper Metal.

At the great coronation pageant, which will be next June, when George is crowned King George IV. of England, there is to be something entirely different from anything that has ever happened before.

Instead of real armor the armor that is to be worn will be made of "paper metal." There will be exact copies of all the old sets of armor used and the paper metal will be so fixed that the armor made from it will give the appearance of the original.

And it is said that in the future the "metal" will be used for almost all outdoor decorations, because it is much cheaper than plaster paris and also is waterproof.

It can be made to represent all the different metals and is so strong that one can jump on it without making any impression on it.

Planning the House.

"Well," said Gifford Barrington cheerfully, "I've got the plans for my new house on the lake shore all finished."

"Finished to suit you?"

"N-no. But the architect is satisfied, and that's the best I can expect."

"Ha, ha! How about Mrs. Barrington?"

"It's all right with her, too. In fact, she got that fixed before we started. You see, she laid out the cupboards and wardrobes, and all the architect had to do was to build a house around them."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Purity and cleanliness are the invariable rule at the Kiewel brewery. Success in brewing lies in keeping out impurities.

The water must be pure, and boiled, to make it germ proof. The yeast must be pure, the malt and hops must be pure. Even the air with which the materials come in contact must be pure and sterilized. These are the days of germs. The water you are using may be contaminated, but you are always safe when you drink

NO GRAFT IN CITY AFFAIRS

Report of Public Examiner Shows Several Irregularities But No Evidence of Graft.

City Shown to Be in First Class Condition as Regards Finances.

According to the report of assistant public examiner J. O. Cederberg, filed in the county auditor's office last Friday, several irregularities in paying bills by the council were found but no traces of dishonesty. This is expected to settle for a time at least, the charges of dishonesty and graft which have been made against the city administration by the so called Investigating Committee.

In concluding his report Mr. Cederberg says: "In conclusion I want to state that every opportunity was given me to make a thorough investigation of the city's books and although there are quite a few irregularities to report, I did not find a single instance of dishonesty and I believe the city's interests have been well taken care of." This report which covers the period from January 1, 1909, to June 1, 1911, takes up in detail the charges preferred by the investigation committee; The charge that some of the money paid to Mark Fitzpatrick, architect of the Auditorium was illegal, is upheld by the report on account of the fact that different members of the council were interested in the work. Former city attorney G. Halvorson's claim for $150 as manager of the Auditorium is declared legal, but his claims for time while employed in serving the city in traveling and in the bond cases and other instances are declared illegal. The charge that the bills of the Langseth Mercantile Co. were illegal as Mayor T. Hamre was interested in the company, is disallowed by the report following the statement of the mayor that he is not interested in the company. The report notes that Charles Alexander, one of the petitioners for an investigation, voted to allow several of their bills while a member of the council.

The report also states that the books and account of the city were well kept and the bills with one exception were passed upon by the council before being paid by the city warrants. It also states that the city clerk and treasurer were properly bonded but notes that the First National Bank which was appointed depository for the city funds failed to qualify by giving bonds. The report gives the liabilities of the city as $109,500, and the assets as $213,328.31.

Crop Coming Good.

If no unforeseen accident happens to the crops between now and harvest, present indications are that Pennington county will harvest a bumper crop this year. Reports from all sections of the county state that the grain is well headed and far developed for this time of the year. The corn is coming along rapidly owing to the recent hot weather and should prove a good crop this year. Hay is reported to be unusually abundant; on some farms two and one half tons being harvested to the acre. Haying is now in full swing. Rye is filling out nicely and should be ready to harvest by the middle of the month. Potatoes seem to be the only crop that is suffering, reports from some sections of the county indicate that the hot weather has been a little too much for them. The ground has been well watered by the recent rains although if the hot weather continues still more can be used.

Plenty of Land Left.

The local United States land office has prepared its report on vacant lands in the district, this report being prepared annually on the first of July for the benefit of the department at Washington. There are still 1,000,170 acres of land in this district on which filings have not yet been made. The largest tracts are found in Beltrami county where there are 750,946 acres.

Clearwater county, 5,305.
Marshall county, 41,788.
Pennington county, 27,200
Roseau county, 173,474.

There are other scattered tracts throughout the district which go to make up a total of 1,000,170. This is a good chance for homesteaders who wish to file on valuable farming land. The most casual inspection of the tilled fields throughout the valley at this time, cannot fail to impress the homeseeker with an idea of the value of farming land in this district and the advantages to be gained by homesteading.

That this is already realized by many, is proved by the amount of wild land being broken this year. On a twenty mile run in any direction from the city the spectator is impressed with the number of meadows freshly broken this season as well as the number broken earlier in the season which have been seeded to flax. Prospects were never better than now and one need not be an optimist to predict an increase in homestead filings when the fact becomes known that there is still plenty of land to be had—Crookston Press.

Must Pay for Paper.

Taking a paper out of the post office makes the recipient liable for the bill. O. D. Austin, a Butler (Mo.) publisher sent his paper to Charles Burge. The latter paid for it twice and then refused to pay for it again. He said he had ordered it stopped. But the court of appeals holds that mere acceptance of the paper created a liability. It adds:

"The preparation and publication of a newspaper involves much mental and physical labor as well as an outlay of money. One who accepts the paper by continuously taking it from the post office receives a benefit and pleasure arising from such labor and expenditure as fully as if he had appropriated any other product of another's labor, and by such act he must be held liable for the subscription price."

Church Dedication at Viking.

A three days religious meeting closed Sunday, July 2, with the dedication of the Zion church of Hauges Synode. Rev. J. J. Rendahl of Fergus Falls, Minn., chairman of North Minnesota District of Hauges Synode delivered the dedication sermon. The assisting pastors were M. L. Dahle, Eagle Bend, Minn., J. K. Lerohl, Dalton, Minn., B. Olson, Winsor, Minn., A. E. Skogerbo, Greenbush, Minn., E. A. Mostue, Sunbeam, Minn, and I. L. Lasseson, pastor of the congregation. The weather was favorable and the church was taxed to its outmost capacity by a listening audience.

The church is a fine structure, tastefully finished inside and the only church in town. The congregation is very glad to have such a beautiful House of Worship in its midst.

AEROPLANE AT COUNTY FAIR

Officers of Association Arrange for Six Flights at Pennington County Fair.

Elaborate Plans Being Made for Entertainment of Visitors Here August 2-3-4.

Persons who attend the annual Pennington county fair to be held in Thief River Falls August 2-3-4, will have an opportunity of seeing, for the first time in this section of the state, an aeroplane in flight. The officers of the fair association last week made arrangements with the Webster Amusement Co. of Fargo to furnish a flying machine and aeronaut for the three days of the fair. The contract calls for six flights, two every day. The aeroplane will also be on exhibition at the fairgrounds for closer inspection.

The aeroplane is to be the leading feature of the many attractions and amusements the officers of the fair association have planned for the entertainment of the visitors to Pennington county's first county fair. The auditorium has been leased for the three nights of the fair and vaudeville and other amusement features will be presented. There will also be horse racing by local horses and the usual sports and amusements at the fair grounds.

Although this is the tenth annual fair held in Thief River Falls, it is the first annual Pennington county fair and it is planned to make it in a way the celebration of the forming of a new county. On this account special attractions are being secured, and every effort is being made to make the fair especially noteworthy. A large number of farmers and people from outside towns are expected to be in attendance and there is every indication at present that the fair will prove a big success.

As is usual a large premium list has been prepared by the officers of the association which will give the farmers a chance to exhibit their stock, grain, farm products etc. Between $600 and $800 have been paid out in past years. The probabilities are that the sum will range in that neighborhood this year. The list includes horses, cattle, pigs, poultry, dairy produce, fruits, preserves, cake, pickles, fancy work, plants in pots and cut flowers, art exhibition and educational exhibit. The premium list prepared by the association is being sent out to the farmers or may be obtained of the secretary W. H. Akre. The program of sports and amusements has not yet been fully completed but will be announced next week.

WORKING ON EXTENSION

150 Teams and Men Said to be Working on Line to International Falls.

Expected That Line Will be Completed to Thief River Falls Next Spring.

From information received in the city, believed to be authentic, work is being pushed on the Minnesota, Dakota and Western Railway from International Falls to Thief River. The line has already been constructed 20 miles from International Falls west to Loman and according to the the report it is expected that the line will be constructed to the edge of the timber country 60 or more miles further this summer. Then next spring, if the present plans are carried out, the line will be built the remaining 60 miles or so to this city.

One hundred and fifty teams and men are said to be working on the railroad now in the vicinity of Loman. If by fall the road is built to the edge of the timber, as is expected, the men will be put at work during the winter cutting wood for ties etc. for the remaining line to this city.

The completion of this line which now looks like reality, will give Thief River Falls an opening to the east and will also open up a new territory which will be tributary to this city. It will give Thief River Falls the railroad needed to develope it further and make it the coming city of northwestern Minnesota.

It is understood that the Minnesota-Dakota and Western Railroad is attached to the Soo.

SPEAKS ON TEMPERANCE

P. J. Youngdahl Addresses Mass Meeting at Auditorium Sunday Evening.

Officers of Anti-Saloon League Hold Annual Field Day for Thief River.

P. J. Youngdahl, state superintendent of the anti saloon league addressed an audience of between 300 and 400 at the mass meeting at the Auditorium Sunday evening. This meeting was the culminating point of the league's field day in Thief River Falls and followed addresses by Mr. Youngdal, W. I. Norton and C. Walden in different churches of the city in the morning. Services were also held in surrounding towns during the day.

The meeting at the Auditorium was opened by a brief prayer by Rev. C. E. Boyden following which E. L. Quist introduced the speaker of the evening. Mr. Youngdal first characterized the liquor problem as the greatest now facing the American people and then speaking from the text "Choose ye this day whom ye shall serve," he declared that every person must line up on either one or the other side of this issue. Lack of time, he said, prevented him from speaking of local conditions, but he spoke of the spread of the temperance movement throughout the country and declared that Minnesota was the next state it would strike. Here county option was the issue upon which the fight would be made, and Mr. Youngdahl declared that this was by no means a dead issue as many politicians seemed to think. He said the last legislature was not as bad as it was painted, and stated that the reason it did so much jangling and fighting was because it preferred to do nothing, rather than do what was wrong. He approved the stand of our local representatives in the legislature on county option. Mr. Youngdahl closed his remarks by making a strong plea for the destruction of the liquor traffic which he declared was wrecking so many lives and urged county option as the means of defeating it here.

Mr. Youngdahl is an earnest and eloquent speaker and the audience's appreciation of his stand was shown by frequent rounds of applause which interrupted his remarks several times.

Picketts Trim Locals.

In a rather uninteresting game of ball Sunday, that is, uninteresting at least to the local fans, the Grand Forks Picketts had little trouble in defeating the local ball team at Grand Forks by the cork-center score of 16 to 3.

Bue and Sanders pitched for the locals but they both looked alike to the Grand Forks sluggers who collected 16 hits of their delivery and scored in every inning but one. Three of the Picketts took turns at pitching and 5 dinky singles were all that they passed out to our deserving lads. Frequent errors marred the play on both sides.

St. Hilaire Wins Two.

While the Grand Forks bunch was treating our team rudely away from home, the St. Hilaire aggregation came up Sunday and walked away with two games from the Tigers and Picketts. The afternoon game went extra innings, but St. Hilaire came to life in the eleventh and ran in 5 scores winning 11 to 6. In the evening game the Picketts tried to get revenge but lost out, 8 to 7, in a game which was called in the seventh inning on account of darkness.

REDS WANT TIMBER CUT

Indians of Red Lake Reservation Petition for Permission to Market Pine.

Special Agent of Indian Department Investigating Conditions at Red Lake Agency.

The Indians of the Red Lake Reservation at a council held Friday and Saturday of last week at the Red Lake Agency passed resolutions requesting the government to allow them to put their pine on the market. Although it is unknown what action the government will take in this matter, it is probable that a portion of the timber at least will be marketed in the near future.

M. Burns, a special agent of the Indian department was present at the council last week and will investigate the conditions at the agency and report to the government whether or not it is advisable to cut the pine.

As is known there is considerable pine standing on the reservation at present, the amount being estimated at between three and four hundred million feet. Some of this is dead and down, a great deal has been more or less injured and a great deal of it is fully matured and of course constantly depreciating in value. It is understood to be the intention of the department to market the dead and down timber very soon. Whether all of the pine will be thrown on the market, as the Indians desire in their petition, is of course uncertain.

But sooner or later the pine on the Red Lake Reservation will be sold to the highest bidder, and when it is the strong probabilities are that a large portion if not will be cut in the local saw mill.

Should Select Best Samples.

As the fall and winter season of 1911 is going to be the greatest year for shows and expositions wherein the best grain and farm products in the northwest will be exhibited, farmers should be on the lookout for good sheaves of prize winning grains as the harvest time approaches.

Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Montana, Washington, Idaho and Oregon will be represented at many of these shows particularly at the big Northwest Land Show which is to be held in St. Paul in December. It is necessary therefore that those in charge of these exhibits get into touch with the farmers having fine, well matured grains. The Northwestern Development League which has headquarters in St. Paul, will be glad to put farmers in touch with those in each state having charge of the exhibits. Before it is too late the grain grower should select his exposition samples as they will be needed.

In selecting these samples the best filled and best developed heads with straw bright, clean and free from rust should be secured. After selecting the grain should be kept where it will not be injured or get dirty. Stored in a dark place it will keep its original color. Tie the bundles at the base, in the middle and at the top just below the heads. Use a soft cord or any wide band cloth so as not to break the straw. Strip the leaves from each straw with a stick sharpened like a knife blade. Bundles should be from four to six inches in diameter.

For Sale—160 acre fine farm, five miles north of Thief River Falls on the Eleven Towns. About 110 acres sown to crop. Also all farm machinery and horses, etc. A chance for a bona fide settler looking for a fine farm at a low price. Anyone looking for a chance will find it to their advantage to investigate the bargain. Salve O. Omlie, Thief River Falls. [illegible]

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While nearly 100 persons watched two boys trying to save him William Caminsky, twenty-nine years old, a clothing dealer in St. Paul, was drowned in front of Spring Park Villa, Bald Eagle lake. Mr. Caminsky had gone bathing and after swimming out about fifty feet from shore, where the water is about fifteen feet deep, seemed unable to get any further and in his struggles became entangled in the weeds.

One man was killed and four injured, one probably fatally, when a Great Northern ore train backed into a hand car about four miles southwest of Hibbing. The dead man is Frank Grossi, aged twenty-five. Zeto Esranzenco, aged twenty-five, is not expected to live. The men were Great Northern section hands.

Peter Karass, aged twenty-five years, a Greek laborer on the Great Northern railroad section at Cass Lake, was drowned in Pike bay while bathing. He waded out too far, struck a drop-off and couldn't swim. A dozen companions watching him either could not swim or were afraid to attempt his rescue.

Guy Gordon of Montevideo was drowned in Big Stone lake at Ortonville. He dived from a boat in ten feet of water and rose to the surface once and was either taken with cramps or caught in the weeds. A large number of spectators were on shore, but were helpless to aid.

Dr. Ben Porter of Albert Lea sustained three broken ribs and serious internal injuries and three of five children who were with him were hurt when the auto which Dr. Porter was driving struck a team of horses near Glenville, killing one of the animals and overturning the machine.

Baldwin P. Martin, a business man of Rochester, was killed by lightning. He arose early to drive into the country and his horses were also killed. He was fifty years of age. He was a member of the board of education and a Woodman and Odd Fellow.

Albert Fetsch, thirty-two years old, was drowned in Lake Josephine, eight miles north of St. Paul, while giving swimming lessons to a companion. He was a nephew of the late Adam Fetsch, one of the pioneer residents of St. Paul.

Frank Shusterfich, aged fifty and married, was instantly killed at the Pearce mine at Chisholm. He was employed as a skip tender and the skip was accidentally dropped on him.

Mons Monson, a farmer aged thirty-two, residing six miles from Kenyon, was instantly killed by a Great Western train. He was walking home down the tracks and was run down.

Lewis, the sixteen-year-old son of Simon Clark of Duluth, was drowned in Superior bay while canoeing with a companion.

A fall from a load of hay near Red Wing caused the death of Roscoe Center. His skull was fractured.

Mrs. William S. Judd, one of the pioneers of the state and a resident of Minneapolis for more than forty-five years, is dead in the Mill City. Mrs. Judd was a member of the Minnesota Territorial Pioneers' association. She was born in Addison, Vt., in 1830. She came to Minnesota in 1857, making her home in Faribault. In 1865 she removed to Minneapolis where she since has resided.

Julius H. St. Clair, northwest manager of the Jones & Laughlan Steel company, died in his office at Duluth of heart trouble. Mr. St. Clair was standing at a desk talking to his bookkeeper. Suddenly he fell backward to the floor, gasped a few times and died. Mr. St. Clair was fifty seven years old and had lived in Duluth five years.

Mrs. P. B. Winston, who is said to have been the first white child born in Minneapolis, is dead at Portland, Me. At her bedside were her two children, Mrs. Charles S. Pillsbury and P. B. Winston, Jr., who had been called to her a week ago.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

FREIGHT RATES GIVEN BOOST

Advance May Mean an Increase in Cost of Supplies to the Consumers of the State.

Following the decision of Federal Judge Sanborn Minnesota has started paying an increase in freight rates that probably will be felt by people in every section of the state. New tariffs issued and effective July 1 have boosted the rates in some instances as high as 50 per cent, while advances of 33 1-3 per cent are common. In but few instances are the old rates left unchanged.

The 2-cent passenger rate and the class freight rates were put in effect in 1906. New commodity freight rates were published, but enjoined before being put into effect. The Sanborn decision knocked out the 2-cent passenger rate and the class freight rate and held confiscatory the proposed commodity rate, which had never been put in effect. Accordingly the only increase in rates effective now are those applying to passenger and class freight.

Through the application of these advances in rates, sugar, canned goods, meats, butter, eggs and most of the foodstuffs shipped as merchandise will cost the merchants more and in some instances may result in advances in cost to the consumer.

CARLTON AND WIFE ARE FREE

Acquitted of Alleged Murder of Latter's Aged Father.

Lloyd Carlton of Bemidji, accused of the murder of Peter O. Neste of Farris, his father-in-law, was acquitted by a jury at Park Rapids after it had been out but twenty minutes. Mrs. Carlton, jointly accused with her husband, was dismissed previously for lack of evidence.

Judge McClennahan had instructed the jury that they could bring in a verdict of murder in either of the three degrees or for manslaughter. The instructions placed emphasis upon the right of self-defense, which had been entered by Carlton as a special plea.

The defense tried to show that Neste was a man of violent temper and that the alleged crime was committed in self-defense during one of these violent spells.

The state submitted rebuttal evidence going to show that the old man was seventy-two; that his hands were crippled with rheumatism; that for two months before his death he lived principally upon milk on account of stomach troubles and that he was in a very feeble condition.

CHAMP CLARK THEIR CHOICE

Said Minnesota Democrats Favor Him for President.

That Democratic sentiment in Minnesota is turning toward Champ Clark as the presidential nominee of the party in 1912 is the assertion of Representative Hammond of Minnesota, who has just returned to Washington after several weeks spent in his home state, much of which was devoted, he says, to sounding out the voters on candidates and national issues.

Reciprocity, held up as the bugbear of the farmers of the Northwest, Mr. Hammond says, is not worrying the farmers in Southern Minnesota as much as he had been led to believe. He declares sentiment against the proposed treaty is strong but that farmers, even along the Canadian line, are not afraid of the effect of the pact.

SIX MEN HURT IN WRECK

Injuries of One Victim Believed to Be Fatal.

Six Greek workmen were hurt, one perhaps fatally, as the result of a collision on the Burlington road near Curry, a few miles south of St. Paul.

Boni Bobible suffered the loss of both legs above the knees and probably will die. All the injured were brought to St. Paul on a special train made up at Curry for the purpose. The men are all members of a section crew and were riding on a flat car.

There were a number of steel rails on the same car. In going down a steep incline the brakes on the engine refused to work and the short train ran 200 yards under great headway, gaining speed at every moment. At the bottom of the hill it crashed into a lot of cars causing the steel rails to shift.

COUPLE PERISH IN LAKE

Engaged Pair Drown When Their Boat Upsets.

E. J. Lillibridge and Miss Eugenie Stapleton of Cloquet were drowned while boating on Chub lake, eight miles from Cloquet, where they had gone with a party of young people for a picnic supper. They went on the lake and failing to return their friends began a search, finding their boat upturned in the middle of the lake.

IS THE WATER YOU DRINK AS PURE AS THIS?

Purity and cleanliness are the invariable rule at the Kiewel brewery. Success in brewing lies in keeping out impurities.

The water must be pure, and boiled, to make it germ proof. The yeast must be pure, the malt and hops must be pure. Even the air with which the materials come in contact must be pure and sterilized. Just as the secret of successful surgery lies in keeping germs away from the parts operated upon, so it is in modern brewing.

These are the days of germs. The water you are using may be contaminated, but you are always safe when you drink

Strength Does Not Make a Cigar Fragrant

It only makes the smoker dopey. The General Arthur is the fragrant, mild 10c. cigar.

To one who has made the rail trip acros. the Utah deserts it seems impossible that men from the more humid eastern states would have the hardihood to locate there and undertake dry farming, and yet this is exactly what is being done. As a result the big sheepmen who have herded their flocks on the mountains in the summer months and in the winter on the deserts, where they subsist on sagebrush and cactus, contend that this movement of settlers to the desert means the ultimate extinction of the grazing business as it has been known in years past.

Among the diseases which are known to be caused by microbes are tuberculosis, pneumonia, diphtheria, typhoid fever, lockjaw, blood poisoning, malaria, sleeping sickness, bubonic plague, cholera, dysentery and cerebro-spinal meningitis. Other diseases not yet proved to be caused by germs, but believed by scientific men to be, are scarlet fever, measles, yellow fever, rabies and infantile paralysis. Of all these maladies several have been deprived of their former terror by the serum treatment, chief among them being diphtheria, for which the antitoxin treatment is now given with most gratifying results.

To effectively dispose of an unsightly patch of nettles scythe them off close to the ground when they have attained their full growth, but before they have matured seed. Then take a spade and remove the soil and roots to the depth of a foot or more, being careful to break them as little as possible and to remove every piece of root, which, if left in the ground, will sprout and send up a new shoot. After all the roots have been removed they should be dried and burned with the tops.

If there is any one that is entitled to a day off on a picnic in the woods it is the good wife who stews over the kitchen stove in the farm home. It should be made a family affair to be fully enjoyed, and the man of the house and the boys and girls should go along and help make the outing a success. If such outings had no other justification they would be worth while simply in the relieving of the tedium and monotony of the work of every day. If more farmers and their wives had more days off there would be fewer of them dying of paralysis in the sixties or occupying quarters in insane hospitals.

The writer's family has during the past two weeks greatly enjoyed the companionship of a couple of little grosbeaks that were rudely shaken from their nest on a swaying elm limb by a boisterous northwest wind. For awhile the little fellows were kept in the house nights and put out during the day, when the parent birds fed them. In way of proof that the grosbeak is a real help to the gardener we noticed that the chief bill of fare which was served these half grown birds was the soft potato bugs, or larvae, many dozens of which were stuffed into the red mouths of the hungry little ones in the course of a day. As a substitute for the potato bugs we have found that small pieces of earth worms and bits of bread soaked in milk were eaten greedily and seemed to agree with the birds.

Within the past few weeks agricultural journals in this country have been giving the recipe for the cure of prevention of contagious abortion discovered by M. Geuln, a French agricultural engineer and president of the Agricultural Society of Gourgoin, France. Briefly it consists of an injection of a 2 per cent solution of carbolic acid every fifteenth day into all cows from the fifth to the seventh month of their periods of gestation. The amount used is twenty cubic centimeters, and the injection is made in the neck just above the dewlap. He reports that 75 per cent of the cows in his own herd aborted before he began using this remedy, but that he did not have a single case after he adopted it. Dairymen and stockmen who have tried it report equal success by giving the same amount of carbolic acid in the feed of cows during the period mentioned.

A poultryman who has tried it recommends a pinch of powdered sulphur put into the throats of chicks as a cure for gapes.

There is often as wide a gap between the pedigree and actual character and performance of a farm animal as there is between the profession of faith and everyday life of many folk whose names are on the kirk roll.

Many of the intestinal ills from which poultry as well as farm animals sometimes suffer could be largely prevented if the vessels from which they drink were frequently scalded out. The hot water kills the germs, and it is the germs that cause the trouble.

If the small boy ever learns to swim he must go swimmin' with his father or with other boys in the neighborhood. Many a mother, naturally anxious for her boy, seems to hold the idea that this can be done by absent treatment—sort o' thinkin' water and swimmin' motions.

A good many popular superstitions or beliefs are hard to dislodge. One of these is that a cow will die if she loses her cud. A cow often quits chewing her cud when sick and will resume the chewing of it when she gets better. If she dies it is not because she has lost her cud, but loses it because sick and dies of the malady.

The slugs that feed on the leaves of roses, cherry and pear trees may be dispatched by dusting the bushes or trees with fine road dust, applied when the dew is on. If beyond reach the same result can be had by spraying trees with a solution made by mixing one pound of arsenate of lead in twenty gallons of water. The solution should be stirred frequently while it is being applied with the sprayer.

Owing to getting hold of a wrong recipe for making the bordeaux mixture a farmer we heard of the other day applied a solution to some of his trees that was about ten times too strong. Not only did it take the leaves off the trees, but it ate holes in the bottom of the tin can in which it was mixed. It would be strange indeed if those who applied the spray to the trees didn't have holes eaten in their clothes and hands.

We have it from an experienced mason who has put up a number of the Iowa or clay hollow block silos re-enforced with cement and steel that no blocks should be used for this purpose unless glazed. Made of the ordinary unglazed block the walls will absorb moisture from the ensilage, and alternate thawing and freezing will cause the blocks to go to pieces. The point mentioned is one that the prospective silo builder would do well to keep in mind, as the first cost of such a silo is considerable.

A determined woman whom we read of the other day who is engaged in the poultry business was up against a pretty stiff mite proposition and hit upon the idea of burning the pests up in their places of concealment in the cracks and crannies of the henhouse by the use of a gasoline torch. She got along famously until the blaze from the torch set fire to the structure, when the mites were dispatched in a jiffy. This treatment did the business, but was a bit expensive. She will try another method next time.

A question of importance to the one having a first crop of alfalfa to harvest is the proper time to cut it. While the general rule is to cut when the blossoms are from one-tenth to one third out, a surer guide has been found to be the little shoots which come up from the crown of the plant and from which the second crop develops. The crop should be cut when these are from one to two inches long. A heavier tonnage may be got from the first cutting by waiting a little longer, but there will be a delay in the growth of the second crop as a result that will more than offset the gain.

One of the most abject specimens of humanity that one could well run across is the chap who is fooling around doing nothing while waiting for some rich relative to die. We read of just such a fellow the other day who had been holding down a job of this kind for the greater part of twenty years, but at last accounts the one through whose death he was to benefit was still eating three square meals a day and enjoying good health. In the interval mentioned the waiter has lost gumption, initiative and about every other quality that make business success possible or life enjoyable. This prospective inheritance has been a curse to him all through the years and will be to his dying day.

A STRAWBERRY INQUIRY.

A lady reader of these notes living at Rochelle, Ill., writes asking what is the best time to set out a strawberry bed; also if she can renovate an old bed so that it will be worth while. In the section in which our correspondent lives we believe a new bed would give best results if the plants were set out the latter part of April, or about the time when potatoes are planted. To have the most satisfactory bed the plants should be large and thrifty, and the ground in which they are planted should be enriched with well rotted manure and made fine and mellow. If the variety of berry set is a vigorous grower the plants should be put in rows three feet apart and about two feet apart in the row. To have berries that are a delight, a dozen or eighteen of which will fill a quart measure, one should get pedigreed plants from some responsible grower. Such plants will cost a trifle more than the common, runty plants, but the returns at picking time will more than justify the additional expense. The bed should be kept thoroughly tilled during the growing season and free from weeds, and blossoms that develop should be snipped off. When the ground is firmly frozen after winter sets in the bed should be covered with a coat of about three inches of clean straw, which can be raked from the crown of the row at the proper time in the spring and allowed to furnish a covering for the earth between. In answer to the inquiry about the old bed we would say that we believe it can be renovated so that it will give good results. In doing this one should first cut all growth on the bed close with a scythe, including plants and weeds. If this dries sufficiently it should be burned on the bed with any other litter that may be lying close on the ground. Any rubbish that does not burn should be raked off.

One should next take a single horse plow or hand cultivator and break up and thoroughly stir the soil between the original berry rows, leaving unplowed strips of not more than six inches wide. If quite a bit of loosed soil is rattled in on this strip it will do no harm. The bed, what there is left of it, will look decidedly sick after this operation, but following a rain the plants will begin to show up from the undisturbed roots, and runners will develop, from which entirely new plants will set. The success of such renovation of an old bed will depend largely upon the amount of moisture it received during July and August, but an artificial supply will answer the same purpose. Such a bed will bear a good supply of berries next year, but not as large a quantity as would a bed in its second year. As a sort of compromise we would suggest that our friend renovate a half of this bed, unless it is very small, and on the other half set new plants next spring. This will insure some berries next season and a good supply the season following.

MILKING STRAIN SHORTHORNS.

Farmers who have made an effort to develop a milking strain of Shorthorns will be interested in some experiments which have been carried on by the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with the Minnesota experiment station along the line of developing a type of Shorthorns which will produce not only valuable beef animals, but cows which will give a good account of themselves in the dairy. Reports published relative to these experiments show that in three herds owned by private individuals an annual milk production of from 3,000 to 6,000 pounds was secured, yielding from 125 to 250 pounds of butter fat. In one herd owned and directly under the supervision of the experiment station the records show yields running from 4,000 to 8,000 pounds of milk, containing from 125 to 325 pounds of butter fat. Time was when there were in existence a number of herds of milking Shorthorns that possessed a decidedly dairy bent, but the big fat stock shows with standards of judging which put Shorthorns in the beef and not in the dairy classes and which call for mountains of fat on the back of all exhibition animals has played hob with the moderate dairy tendency a few Shorthorns possessed.

ADVANTAGE OF A DUST MULCH.

A friend who lives in Stanley county, in the southwestern part of South Dakota, was telling us the other day of an interesting experiment that one of his neighbors made last year along the line of harrowing a field of wheat after it was up to conserve moisture. He divided an eighteen acre field into two equal tracts. One of these he did not touch after the grain showed above the ground. The other piece he harrowed three times, adjusting the lever so as to put the teeth at quite an angle. The last time through the wheat stood fourteen inches high. At harvest time the plot that had not been dragged yielded nine bushels per acre. The other plot that had been given a dust mulch by dragging yielded eighteen bushels. This easy method of conserving moisture is an especially live problem with every farmer in the semiarid sections, where the rainfall ranges from twelve to eighteen inches per annum, yet the principle is one that the farmer in the humid sections might well put into practice in dry seasons. There is little question that the benefit to be derived from such dragging and a breaking of the soil crust would be correspondingly great.

Mr. Youngdahl's opinion of the recent legislature is not in accord with that of the majority of the country press. And they put county option to sleep at that.

While some citizens might question the need for the investigation of the city's affairs it is satisfying to know that the public examiner could find no traces of dishonesty. While it is practically impossible to run a municipality strictly according to law, we trust the city council will hereafter try to lessen the irregularities of which quite a number were found in the investigation.

PENNINGTON COUNTY FAIR.

The officers of the fair association are making a praiseworthy effort to have the first fair held in Pennington county a notable event.

In making the fair Pennington county's own, the members of the committee in charge have decided upon a change of Policy which is planned to make the fair more attractive and to lessen the disagreeable features of past fairs. In this connection the committee have made a contract at considerable extent to bring an aeroplane into this section of the state for the first time. In place of the usual tent shows, the auditorium has been leased for the three nights of the fair, and straight vaudeville will be present. Horse racing by professional track men which has proved more or less unsatisfactory in the past will be done away with and local horses and drivers whom everybody will know will alone be permitted on the track. The premium list is more comprehensive than ever and gives every person an opportunity to enter something. It is a known fact that more premiums have been offered in the past than have been awarded. The premiums are there and it is up to the people of Pennington county to enter exhibits and take them down.

The people of Thief River Falls and Pennington county should co-operate with the officers of the fair association in making the county's first fair an unqualified success.

Rodgers—Doland.

On Saturday afternoon, July 1st, at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Doland, on the east side, occurred the marriage of Miss Maysel Doland to Mr. Harry Rodgers. The marriage ceremony was performed in the presence of immediate friends and relatives, and was performed by Rev. I. B. Smith. The bride has since girlhood made her home in this city while the bridegroom is employed as baggage man at the Soo Depot. The happy couple will make their home in this city.

No More "Silent" Partners.

In order to have legal standing in the state courts after July 15, each firm, co-partnership and corporation must file with the clerk of the district court of every county in which it does business the names of all "silent" and "active" partners.

The attention of business men all over the state has been called to Chapter 271, house file No. 365, laws of 1911, which provides for this. The act was approved April 19 and will go into effect July 15.

Selling Liquor on Trains.

Allen Rolton and Corme Kimble of Roosevelt, paid a fine of $25 and costs before Judge Bishop yesterday for selling liquor to an Indian woman, a Mrs. Pender of Roosevelt on a Great Northern train. The woman was taken off the train here Tuesday in an intoxicated condition and placed under arrest. Later she was released and upon information received from her the two men were placed under arrest by Chief of Police Lang. This prosecution was made in accordance with a law passed by the last legislature which makes it a criminal offense to sell liquor on the trains and gives the conductor police powers.

With mosquito netting and wire screens as cheap as they are, there is no good reason why either country or town folks should sleep with windows down or spend the hour before getting up pawing the pesky pests.

It is the same with quack grass and Canada thistles as with bad habits—a whole lot easier to be careless and let them get a foothold than to root them out afterward. The secret of eradication is the same with all—vigilance, persistence and perseverance.

That piece of ground which failed to give a stand of corn because of cutworms or which was too wet in the spring may be made to do duty yet by putting it to millet or buckwheat. Either will yield a paying crop and, besides this, will keep the weeds in subjection.

If the herd bull has not been or cannot be broken to do some of the work on the farm he should be given the run of a good sized paddock and another bovine of the same gender or two or three big stumps to tousle around to give him needed exercise. If he has this exercise his offspring will be stronger and he will also be better natured.

There seems to be considerable rivalry among Texas cotton growers as to who shall be first in getting a bale of the new season's cotton on the market. This season a bale was marketed at Houston on June 12, which is said to beat the best previous record by eleven days. This bale weighed 493 pounds and brought $1,015, or approximately $2.05 per pound.

The latest arguments put forward in favor of the skunk is that he is one of the best of rat catchers and a voracious consumer of cutworms, army worms, tobacco worms, white grubs and May beetles, as well as grasshoppers and crickets. Investigations which have been made as to the economic value of the skunk class it as an animal entitled to man's protection.

It is estimated that a circular barn can be built at from 30 to 40 per cent less than the common rectangular barn of like capacity. More than this, the circular barn is stronger and can be more conveniently arranged on the interior. About the only drawback with the circular structure is that not one man in ten knows how to put one up nor relishes the job even if he does know how.

Town Booming Helps

V.—Where Is Your Talent?

Remember the case of the man who took his talent, wrapped it in a napkin and buried it?

Not only did his master punish him for his folly, but his conduct has become a byword.

The world has progressed since his time. Modern conditions have developed a kind of man who is even more useless than the one who buried his talent. HE IS THE MAN

WHO SENDS HIS MONEY OUT OF TOWN TO BUY FROM MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

The man who buried his talent at least had the talent to show for it. If we all spent our money out of town in a short time we would have nothing to show for it except BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

The man who patronizes home industries benefits the people he deals with and benefits himself. His conduct is like that of the good and faithful servant who so used the talents intrusted to him that they greatly increased. He is a good and faithful citizen who is worthy of the success he is sure to win.

The next time you see an attractive advertisement of a mail order house go to your local merchant and try to buy the article of him. IF HE HASN'T IT ASK HIM WHY. If he has it ask him why he never told you about it in your local paper.

That will be a boost for us. But we'll stand for it. And we'll boost back; remember that.

Do your share of the boosting and you'll get your share of the prosperity.

LET US BOOST!

Figures gathered by investigators in the federal department of agriculture show that those engaged in the poultry business in the United States suffer a loss of $45,000,000, or 15 per cent of the annual value of the egg output, $300,000,000, through the careless handling of the product. This loss is traced to failure to provide adequate and clean nesting places, irregularity in gathering, keeping in warm instead of cool places and infrequency of marketing. It is safe to say, in addition, that the bulk of this loss is sustained by farm poultry raisers rather than those who make of poultry raising a primary business. The leak is one that should be stopped.

We heard the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hopping out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the rump strap or monkeyed with the tug or bridle a bit and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and, like others, we have sat for a good half hour, with the thermometer registering 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

Time was when cows needed their horns for self protection, but under modern domestic conditions they are useless and often dangerous appendages. The best and easiest method of dehorning is by the application of some caustic potash to the germ of the horns when the calf is a few days old. After the horn has got a good start the job must be done by saw or clippers. Many a dairyman hesitates to dehorn his cows because of the harmful effect he thinks it will have in reducing their milk flow. However, this is likely to be overestimated. A test made at the Kansas Agricultural college in a herd of twelve cows with a view to determining the shrinkage as a result of dehorning showed that in the five days prior to the operation it gave 1,142.5 pounds of milk, while in the five days following it gave 1,100 pounds, or a total shrinkage for the twelve cows of 40.8 pounds. This amounts to sixty-nine one-hundredths of a pound of milk per cow each day or about half a pint. On the fifth day after dehorning all except two of the cows were giving as much milk, and a few more than they did the day before their horns were removed.

A York state miser had no faith in banks and so put $47,000 which he had hoarded during many years in what he thought a safe nook in his house. But the structure caught fire the other day, and the savings of many years went up in smoke. Nothwithstanding the fact that instances like the above are of almost daily occurrence there are a whole lot of folks who still believe that an old trunk, a tin can or a stove is a better place of safety than a bank.

A question that naturally comes to the Ohio or Illinois farmer who goes to the southwest is whether listing as a method of planting corn is preferable to plowing and planting by the check row method. This matter has been given a pretty thorough test at several experiment stations in states where listing is practiced, and if there is any difference at all in the yield of corn secured by the two methods it is slightly in favor of the latter method.

There are a good many sections this year in which the only farmers who will harvest a crop of corn worth speaking of will be those who persist in frequent cultivation even after the time when the field is usually laid by. If the drought persists the cultivation should be continued with single horse cultivators or, what gives just as satisfactory results, an old mower wheel hauled between the rows of corn just as it lies on the ground. This levels and pulverizes the soil and gives the desired dust mulch.

NO LIGHT, NO POWER.

Low Water In River Causes Power Plant to Shut Down Tuesday and Wednesday.

Bond Issue of $18,000 for Auxilliary Steam Plant Will Probably Be Voted Upon.

Owing to low water in the river, said to be due to a log-jam near the mouth of the river, the power plant was forced to close down Tuesday night and all day Wednesday. Just how long this condition will continue depends upon the size of the jam at which a large force of men are now working to dislodge.

The council held a special meeting Tuesday and decided to close the plant during the night owing to the low stage of the water. The lights went off at midnight, but Wednesday morning, the water was so low that it was necessary to shut down altogether. Besides proving an inconvenience to the people of the city who depend upon electric lights, the lack of power proved a serious handicap to the factories and other establishments which use electric power.

At the regular meeting of the council held Tuesday of last week the matter of submitting a bond issue of $18,000 to the people for the purpose of installing an auxilliary steam plant to furnish electricity whenever the water power failed, came up. Though no definite action was taken at that time it is certain that the matter will go through the council soon and be submitted to the people at a special election as soon as possible.

But if this is done the steam plant cannot be installed until next fall and at present the city is up against a serious proposition. The lack of power and light may only last a day or so, and it may last several weeks. Decisive steps will probably be taken at once to break the jam and raise the water in the river.

Jumped the Country.

Frank Peterson who was found guilty of bastardy at the recent term of court and sentenced to pay $900, left for parts unknown Saturday night and has not been heard from yet. He was given 5 days to make the payment which were up Monday. Peterson was under a bond of $500 which was given at the time he was bound over to the grand jury, although there is a question if the bondsmen can be held after the sentence has been passed. It is believed he went to Canada.

WASTE IN HIGHWAYS

HALF THE MONEY SPENT IN PUBLIC ROADS IS THROWN AWAY.

'GOOD ROADS,' UNIVERSAL CRY

Everybody Wants Something Done, but Nearly Every Community Is Groping in the Dark—Time to Face About and Try for Better Results.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

No one who is familiar with the way road work has been handled for the last twenty years will dispute that half of the time and money expended upon our public roads by the hit and miss methods employed has been wasted. Most observers will say the waste is even greater. The country over, the outlay approximates $80,000,000. We have gone on from generation to generation pursuing this absurd plan, or rather lack of plan. It is a most unbusinesslike and reprehensible proceeding. No business enterprise could last a year with such a fearful waste. A calculation made with great care by one of the best authorities in the state, contends the direct waste on Illinois roads by doing the wrong thing, or if perchance doing the right thing, then doing it at the wrong time, causes a loss of $10,000 per day!

Cedar Grove School House, Near Knoxville, Tenn.

In no department of administration have we more signally failed than in dealing with the question of the highways. It is time to face about and make an effort to get better results. Is it any wonder people are "sore" when it comes to paying road taxes? They have been at it for generations and with here and there an exception, the roads are no better than they were to begin with.

The question now is what specific things shall be done in order to get better results. The first step in the writer's opinion is to wipe out the labor system of "working out" the tax by the annual picnic or talkfest, that usually takes place in the early fall when everybody turns out to "improve" the road. There is no definite plan; the practice is to plow and scrape, and fill the center of the road with sod, weeds, brush and earth, making what before was a passable road one that is impassable. The lateness of the season prevents a proper settlement before the heavy fall rains and the winter sets in. The weeds, sod and brush are sure to make trouble for a year or more. Many a time the writer has observed a bunch of men and teams do a hundred dollars' worth of damage to work out a fifty-dollar road tax. The stories told, the stunts of wrestling, jumping and other athletic diversions, make it a holiday enjoyed by every one.

Country School House on Bad Road, Near Conklin, Tenn.

It would be hard to find a greater contrast than the two pictures in this article show. They are only a few miles apart. In one there is an air of shiftlessness, while in the other there is evidence of thrift, progress and refinement. Can any one doubt which is the better school or which community gets the most out of life.

There is but one thing to do: Collect all the road taxes in cash and pay to have the work done under the best supervision obtainable.

This working out the road tax dates back before the war, when there was very little money in circulation, and it was next to impossible for the people to pay the tax in any other way. It is different now. The labor system has outlived its usefulness and should go.

Road building, even if a dirt road, requires considerable engineering experience the farmer does not and is not expected to have. It is no reflection upon him to say he is not a successful road builder—any more than it would be to question his ability in carpentry. To have the best supervision the township or road district is too small a unit. The mileage is too limited to make it practical to have an experienced road builder in charge. Hence the present thought is that the county should be the road district, or perhaps there might be two districts in large counties. The road supervisor should be a capable, experienced engineer employed by the year, or the season. Let him get the necessary tools, men and teams and do the work when it ought to be done. When grading is necessary, the earlier in the spring it is done the better. The surface ought not to be disturbed after the first of July.

The first and most important step is road drainage. No drain, no road. It is exceedingly important to have one in charge who knows his business. As road drainage will be treated at length in another article, the writer will not elaborate upon it at this time. The drains can be laid at any season when the frost is out of the ground. Culverts can be built, the roads dragged, weeds cut, etc. This will give work from early spring until fall.

With the county as a unit, plan a five-year campaign of grading and draining, beginning with the main roads and extending the work in the order of importance. In a county of ten to fifteen townships, one good engineer with three or four gangs of men with machinery, each having a good foreman, in three or four years will make such a showing, that people will wonder they ever tolerated the old hit and miss methods.

If the method suggested was adopted and followed, it would at least double the results for the taxes now paid. By having regular employment, both the men and horses would become proficient and do more in a day than the "greenhorn" would do in two days, and the work will be far better done as well.

The above outline is for the treatment of earth roads. When the time comes, and come it will, when the main roads will have to have a hard, smooth wearing surface of stone, gravel or brick, all of the work previously done as above set forth, will be valuable as a preparation for the permanent road.

The inauguration of such a plan will appeal to the people; they will see they are getting something for the money paid. Their attitude will change from one of hostility to friendly co-operation, and this is of much importance. The writer once saw an enterprising farmer who had a road drag. He took it out in a rain storm and dragged a mile of road, going twice over it until it was in his language as smooth as a ribbon. No sooner had he turned in under cover than he saw a neighbor with two teams coming down over the road, undoing all he had done. The comment made would not look well in print. If the party in question had any appreciation of the fitness of things, he would have driven along the side of the road, and left the dragged surface so it would shed water and dry smooth. A five-dollar fine with costs would have been a good lesson.

The sentiment is everywhere for better highways. "Good Roads" is the universal cry—everybody wants something done, but nearly every community seems to be groping in the dark, not knowing just how to accomplish the desired end. In many localities we find that meetings are held, a subscription is started, and volunteers beat up and down the street, asking everyone to subscribe either money or labor. A bank will give $100, a merchant another $100, the man next door, who ought to do the same thing, will give $10. A public entertainment is gotten up, and after a campaign of a number of weeks, perhaps $2,000 is raised for improving a piece of road. In order to save expense some local party will undertake the work. He does not know much about road building, and the result is a botch job. The money is spent and a half-mile of road is made, and while it is poorly constructed, it is so much better than the previous conditions, that it is hailed with delight. No effort along these lines can amount to much, beyond the creating of an increased desire for better roads. Experience shows beyond any question that the way to do is to build as large a mileage as possible at the same time, and have it done under the supervision of a capable road engineer. If ten or twelve miles are built instead of one the cost of construction will be much less; it will pay to have improved machinery and the best facilities. Then the payment of the road should not be made by passing the hat, where some will do their duty and others will not, but on the contrary the amount should be covered by issuing long time bonds and spreading the burden over all the property of the township. If fortunately the state is operating under the state aid plan, whereby a portion of the expense is contributed from the state treasury, it simplifies the matter very much and lightens the burden.

The writer made a calculation covering the state of Illinois, and that calculation was verified by the late Dr. Frank H. Hall of Aurora, one of the best mathematicians in the country, and he found it correct. It showed that first-class hard roads could be built over all the main highways in the state of Illinois, under the state aid plan, the state paying one-half the expense from a general tax levy, and the balance locally by the township, and the combined expense spread over a period of ten years, would not exceed ten cents per acre per year on farm lands. What is true of Illinois will be found to work out very closely along these lines in nearly all states of the central West.

The amount of money wasted upon the highways of any state between Pittsburg and Denver, and from Minnesota to Florida, would more than pay the interest on the bonds necessary to build and maintain first-class permanent roads. We might state it in another way: That the economies that can be accomplished and the benefits that will accrue from improving the highways, will take off from the burden of the people many times more than the taxes to build the roads will impose. Why not convert this waste into a permanent asset? Why not have better conditions when we can do so so easily?

Because of Misinterpreted Cipher Message the Maine Went to Havana.

Probably very few know that the Maine had been hurried to Havana because of a misinterpreted cipher message. Mr. John R. Caldwell, who had been in charge of the Havana bureau, and whom I relieved, told me that several days prior to my arrival he had made requisition upon the office for a revolver. There had come strenuous times in the Cuban capital, riots had been frequent, the lives of foreigners, particularly those of Americans, had been more than once placed in jeopardy, and the time had come when correspondents felt the need of firearms to protect their lives. The revolver sent to Mr. Caldwell was smuggled to him by a passenger on the steamship Olivette, to whom the weapon had been entrusted by an agent of the paper in Tampa. By some oversight no cartridges had been sent with it, and it being impossible to secure any in Havana, the correspondent cabled to New York. "Camera received, but no plates; send by next boat."

Through some strange error on the part of the one who received it, the cryptogram was construed to be a cipher and was translated to read that an attempt had been made on the life of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, American consul general in Havana. This misinformation went to Washington and reached there after the Havana cable had closed. Early the next day Mr. Caldwell received from the Herald the following cryptogram: "Send story and pictures ordered on food-supplies; we want it for main sheet." By applying the cipher key, the first sentence was readily translated to read: "A United States warship has been ordered to Havana." The second evidently conveyed some hint which was beyond the limitation of the code, but the word "main" gave the clue. Meeting General Lee at breakfast that morning, Mr. Caldwell quietly informed him that the Maine was on her way to Havana. The general was incredulous. No warship, he assured the correspondent, would be sent to Havana unless he requested it.—Walter Scott Meriwether, in Harper's Weekly.

A Wish Gratified.

"Jiggs used to tell me that the dream of his life was to live some day in a big house on a hill."

"Poor fellow! And now he is in the state penitentiary."

"True, but that is a big house and it happens to be on a hill."

China with her 400,000,000 people has 6,000 miles of railroads. The United States with less than a fifth as large a population has 220,000 miles. The figures are striking and are fairly indicative of the progress as well as the influence of the two nations.

The dairyman who is in the business for the money to be got out of it and not primarily for the purpose of swelling the cow census does not let his cows fight flies in a short pasture without shade during the heat of the summer days. Rather he puts them in a darkened stable, feeds them ensilage or other green feed and puts them in pasture at night.

To effectively dispose of an unsightly patch of nettles scythe them off close to the ground when they have attained their full growth, but before they have matured seed. Then take a spade and remove the soil and roots to the depth of a foot or more, being careful to break them as little as possible and to remove every piece of root, which, if left in the ground, will sprout and send up a new shoot. After all the roots have been removed they should be dried and burned with the tops.

If there is any one that is entitled to a day off on a picnic in the woods it is the good wife who stews over the kitchen stove in the farm home. It should be made a family affair to be fully enjoyed, and the man of the house and the boys and girls should go along and help make the outing a success. If such outings had no other justification they would be worth while simply in the relieving of the tedium and monotony of the work of every day. If more farmers and their wives had more days off there would be fewer of them dying of paralysis in the sixties or occupying quarters in insane hospitals.

The writer's family has during the past two weeks greatly enjoyed the companionship of a couple of little grosbeaks that were rudely shaken from their nest on a swaying elm limb by a boisterous northwest wind. For awhile the little fellows were kept in the house nights and put out during the day, when the parent birds fed them. In way of proof that the grosbeak is a real help to the gardener we noticed that the chief bill of fare which was served these half grown birds was the soft potato bugs, or larvae, many dozens of which were stuffed into the red mouths of the hungry little ones in the course of a day. As a substitute for the potato bugs we have found that small pieces of earthworms and bits of bread soaked in milk were eaten greedily and seemed to agree with the birds.

Within the past few weeks agricultural journals in this country have been giving the recipe for the cure of prevention of contagious abortion discovered by M. Geuin, a French agricultural engineer and president of the Agricultural Society of Gourgoin, France. Briefly it consists of an injection of a 2 per cent solution of carbolic acid every fifteenth day into all cows from the fifth to the seventh month of their periods of gestation. The amount used is twenty cubic centimeters, and the injection is made in the neck just above the dewlap. He reports that 75 per cent of the cows in his own herd aborted before he began using this remedy, but that he did not have a single case after he adopted it. Dairymen and stockmen who have tried it report equal success by giving the same amount of carbolic acid in the feed of cows during the period mentioned.

Fifty cents invested in a pair of rubbers may save $5 in doctor bills, with plenty of misery thrown in.

There is no better material of which to build hen or hog house than the clay hollow block. Its use means that the structure will be both dry and warm.

President Taft is to be commended for refusing to pardon W. N. Jones, a rich business man of Portland, Ore., who was recently sentenced to serve four months in prison and pay a fine of $12,000 for the part he had in land frauds in the northwest.

A tablespoonful of spirits of camphor stirred in a gallon of water makes a very good solution with which to spray plants that are afflicted with the green lice. This spray fixes the lice and does not harm the foliage plants to which it is applied.

While other members of the animal kingdom may fail to multiply as nature intended, it is pretty safe to assume that the old frosted eared brindle tabby cat will some warm morning soon lead her bevy of kittens from some well protected and secluded spot. This kitten crop is one that is not reduced by frost, blight or drought.

An item in a daily paper not long since told of the extensive damage which it was supposed had been done to flocks in a certain neighborhood by wolves said to have their retreat in a not distant belt of timber. If the experience of some other communities we know of can be taken as a guide there is reason to believe that most if not all of this damage was done by members of the pack of marauders bearing in broad daylight the names of Shep, Tige and Rover in their masters' door yards. Wolves will do damage enough to poultry and young stock but they ought not to be made scapegoats for the offenses of their distant and more civilized cousins of the dog family.

SUCCESSFUL MEET ASSURED

Preparations Well Under Way for Olympian Games at Stockholm Next Year—Norwegian Women Have Suffrage, but No Voice in Church Affairs—Complete Reorganization of Copenhagen Police Force Planned.

SWEDEN.

Preparations for the great Olympian games next summer in Stockholm are well under way. Everything points to a great and successful event. The Swedish delegates to the congress on the international committee for the games have returned recently from Budapest. Kristian Hellstrom, the general secretary, reports that the results of the deliberations were wholly satisfactory to Sweden. The question most eagerly discussed was the rules for spear throwing, but Colonel Black explained that Sweden would not take part in that game unless the propositions made by the Swedes were adopted. The committee yielded on that point. It is also considered important that the committee passed the proposition to have Swedish judges at the game. Naturally Stockholm, rather Sweden, will be entertaining the participants of the great international games and it is evident that Swedish judges at the great meeting will endeavor to exercise the greatest fair-mindedness to all concerned.

Athletics have taken on new life in Stockholm, and all of Sweden for that matter, owing to the fact that the Olympian games of 1912 are drawing near. In every city of Sweden young men are in training for the big event and it is certain that Sweden's youth and brawn will endeavor to show up at its very best at the great international games next summer, which will place Stockholm on the world's map more than anything else that has ever transpired during the past fifty years in the history of that beautiful city. The Stockholm Y. M. C. A. is preparing to give a series of exhibitions in Swedish gymnastics at Dresden, Germany. On their way to Dresden they are also to give exhibitions at Odense, Denmark, Copenhagen and Berlin.

Queen Victoria, who is a sister of the Grand Duke of Baden, is obliged to spend the winter and the greater part of each spring abroad for the sake of her health. Recently she bought a villa on the island of Capri, twenty miles south of Naples, which is a favorite resort for her majesty. The situation of Villa Capri is a retired one on a steep cliff, from which there is a magnificent view of the famed bay of Naples, and the only means of approach is by a mule track. The queen is well known to the people of Capri and is very popular with them on account of her friendly ways and many charitable actions.

The Swedish Mission society, working among the Lapps, recently celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary in Stockholm. Its work is mostly done in the support of schools. During the last year the society supported seven schools, enrolling 119 Lapp children. These children receive free instruction, room and board and many of them are even clothed. Besides these seventy-one Swedish children attended these schools.

Last Easter one of the old historical churches in Stockholm was destroyed by fire. The exact date of the first building of that church is not known, but so much is known that some of the decorations and paintings of the oldest part dated back to the time of Archbishop Jons Bengtson, of the time of Axel Oxenstierna. The church was partly rebuilt and thoroughly renovated in 1784 and 1785.

A Jewish mission conference was held in Stockholm from June 7 to 9. The conference was opened by Bishop von Scheele, who, it will be remembered, visited the United States last year, and the opening sermon was preached by Professor Kolmodin. The conference was an international one and there were about 500 delegates present.

Rev. Arvid Boman, who has been called by the mission board of the Church of Sweden as missionary among the Swedes in Johannesburg, South Africa, left Sweden for his field of labor a short time ago. He was accompanied by Mrs. Karin Boman, a sister of Missionary Kempe, now in South Africa.

Not a little interest is attached to the rumor that some well to do Swedish-Americans who are living in Sweden propose to publish a paper in that country in the interest of the Swedish-Americans living in Sweden and America. The paper is to be ready for circulation by Jan. 1, 1912.

Negotiations are pending in Paris by which the Swedish government is to send three army officers to Persia for the reorganization of the Persian army. This means that Persia may possibly be getting ready for repelling aggression.

NORWAY.

While it is freely conceded that women have more political privileges in Norway than they have in any other country in the world, having gained the right of suffrage and the right to hold public office, it is nevertheless a conspicuous fact that the Church of Norway rigidly forbids women to have a voice in the congregation, thus formally following the mandate of the Scripture itself. The other day when a Christian Young People's meeting was being held in Indre Vaagso a female representative of the Norwegian Young People's union, Miss Sognen, was forbidden to deliver an address regarding home missions. There was every attempt made to secure an opportunity to allow her to speak, but it failed and in vain the managers and leaders of the meeting appealed to the church department for a request that she be allowed to speak, but the request was promptly turned down. There were over 20,000 people who had come from all parts of the country to attend this meeting and it is reported that the fact that Miss Sognen was forbidden to deliver her address caused much ill feeling.

The daring Norwegian students, who started out in an ancient Viking craft for Rouen to participate in the 1,000th Normandy anniversary May 20, arrived at Rouen June 9. They were received by an immense crowd of people and were literally covered with flowers upon their arrival. The historic old town received them with open arms and there was nothing in Rouen too good for them. Several concerts were held at various places in their honor and there were gala performances in the streets and all the cafes and restaurants were profusely illuminated. On the same day that the students arrived the Norwegian cruiser Fritjof, with the cadets aboard, set sail for Bilbao. A large crowd had gathered at the dock to wave goodbye to the cadets and cheers were freely given for Norway and France.

Norway on July 1, according to latest dispatches from Christiania, put into operation its new compulsory sick insurance law, which entitles workers to free medical attendance, medical and surgical supplies for themselves and families and a money allowance when totally incapacitated for work. All workers over thirteen years of age, receiving pay amounting to less than $335 a year in the country and $390 in a town, are entitled to the benefits. The expense is borne proportionately by the workers, the employers, the local authorities and the state.

The committee which was appointed by the storthing some time ago to present a report as to the feasibility of the storthing making an appropriation for the Norwegian-America steamship line has reported favorably and recommends that the storthing donate half a million crowns for the project.

The well known theologian and educator, Frits Hansen, died at his home in Christiania the other day, aged seventy years. He was a member of the so called "Unionskomiteen" in 1895 and had written a number of educational and theological treatises which attracted wide attention.

DENMARK.

There is going to be a complete reorganization of the Copenhagen police force and no less a personage than King Fredrik himself will appoint the chief of police, besides having been requested to introduce the necessary reforms wherever regarded necessary. The new police corps will in reality cover the whole country and with the introduction of a new police system there will be a regular network of police and detective protection all over the country. Such a thing is possible in a little country the size of Denmark and having the backing of the king, who has surrounded himself with the best advisers in order to appoint the best men for the service.

Talking about international dinners they surely know how to serve them at Fredricia, Denmark. The other day the following bill of fare was served to and enjoyed by a party of tourists, which represented almost every civilized country in the world: Norwegian white grouse, French chickens, Bornholm salmon, Flanders herring, Italian maccaroni, Swiss cheese, Spanish pepper, French bread, Danish brandy, Bavarian beer, Dutch ale and Dutch gin, Mocha coffee, French cognac, East India tea, West India rum, Swedish soda water, English whisky, American olive oil and Fredricia spring water. It is apparent that there was glory enough for all at this dinner.

A million crown fire started in Aalesund the other day when the big oil factories located there caught fire. Every effort was made to check the flames, but it was impossible to stop them. A military company was called to assist the local fire department to prevent the fire from spreading to adjoining buildings and after working heroically for hours they succeeded in their efforts, but everything in and around the big plant became the prey of the flames, entailing a loss amounting to over a million crowns.

A bust of the late Danish statesman, Vilhelm Lassen, was unveiled in Aalborg June 11 in the presence of Minister of Finance Neergaard and Premier Christensen. More than 4,000 people were present and the ceremonies were most impressive.

MINNESOTA BANK FIGURES

Statement Issued by Comptroller of the Treasury.

In a statement issued by the comptroller of the treasurer at Washington of the aggregate and principal items of assets and liabilities of the 272 national and 712 other banks in Minnesota for June 7, this year, as compared with figures for June 30, 1910, a heavy decrease in aggregate assets and individual deposits was shown, despite an increase of seventy-nine banks.

The aggregate assets for June 7 were $385,624,245.39, a decrease from 1910 of $15,405,818. There were $263,182,398.82 in individual deposits, a decrease of $11,936,588. Bonds, etc., showed a decrease of $11,484,993. June 7—loans and discounts amounted to $257,455,990.33, an increase of $3,350,940; cash in banks, $21,390,631.88, an increase of $504,662; capital, $37,350,500, an increase of $559,500; surplus and profits, $22,613,304.10, an increase of $820,156.

CRITICISES THE GOVERNOR

Attorney Says Minnesota Executive Showed Contempt for Laws.

Charges by inference that Governor Eberhart of Minnesota showed contempt of the state's laws in meddling in the Whittier investigation at this time, marked the opening before the board of control of the hearing on the charges filed by Ralph Wheelock, the governor's private secretary.

The attack on the governor was bitterly made by counsel for Superintendent Whittier, Judge F. M. Wilson of Red Wing.

He quoted from the statutes and took the stand that Mr. Eberhart's letter to the board, requesting an investigation of the general administration of the Red Wing training school, was highly improper while a specific investigation against an individual connected with the institution was pending. He declared, in question form, that the board was not required to submit to what he called dictation.

MINNESOTA PROBE GOES ON

Express Rate Inquiry Not Affected by Action at Washington.

The decision of the interstate commerce commission at Washington to investigate express rates and other affairs of the express companies will have little bearing on express rate cases pending before the Minnesota railroad commission, according to members of the commission. It could have a bearing only in the event the interstate commerce commission should order a reduction on interstate rates that would affect intrastate rates.

The state's experts have endeavored to show how much of the earnings of the express companies and what portion of the expenses should be credited to intrastate business and if the rates are too high in proportion to the expenses they will order a reduction of rates, regardless of what the interstate commerce commission does, the members say.

PUTS END TO TAX SUITS

Western Union Agrees to Pay Its Minnesota Assessment.

With the acceptance by the attorney general of Minnesota of the Western Union Telegraph company's offer to pay its back taxes, accrued penalties and costs of the litigation, the $2,000,000 mark is passed by the department in the amount paid into the state treasury through suits instituted to recover back taxes and penalties on timber trespass cases. The Western Union will pay $103,407.33 within the next day or so. Of this amount $16,296.21 is interest on back taxes; $86,825.52 principal and the balance costs on pending litigation.

DROWN IN LAKE MINNETONKA

Boy Tries to Save Friend and Both Sink.

Two Minneapolis boys were drowned in Lake Minnetonka, one losing his life as the result of attempting to save that of his friend, who was unable to swim.

Oscar Henry Rice, sixteen-year-old son of J. O. Rice, who was camping at the lake, and Christian Anderson, aged seventeen, who was visiting him, went bathing in the Tonka bay narrows. Suddenly Anderson, who couldn't swim, stepped into a hole and sank from view. His chum hurried to his rescue, but was unequal to the task and also sank.

TWO ROCK BOAT AND DROWN

Sailors on Lake Steamer Meet Death in Duluth Harbor.

Ive Foudau of Waddington, N. Y., and Joseph Walauski of Utica, N. Y., were drowned in the harbor at Duluth. The men were sailors on the steamer Northwind and left for the shore. Eye witnesses state they were "roughing" the boat when it capsized. Before they realized what had happened both men were drowned. The United States lifesaving crew was called and recovered the bodies in half an hour.

Dive Breaks Bather's Neck.

In the presence of his fiancee and his little daughter Ferdinand Krause, aged thirty, a widower of a year, who was employed as a finisher in the plant of the Winona Shoe company of Winona, broke his neck in the La Crosse river near Indian Hill, when he dived from a height of six feet head first into three feet of water.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The loss of the battleship Maine was caused by the explosion of her three magazines. No such effect as that produced upon the vessel could have been caused by an explosion from without. Such is the opinion of William H. Bixby, chief of engineers, U. S. A., who has returned from a personal inspection of the work of raising the Maine. General Bixby said that a portion of the deck over the magazines was blown upward and laid backward and that there were numerous conditions of the hulk as it lies in Havana harbor which proves this. No explosion from the outside, he said, could have caused the same result.

The measured swing of Referee Welsh's arm, tolling off the fatal ten seconds over the writhing and unconscious body of Owen Moran of England, brought victory to Ad Wolgast in the thirteenth round of the international battle for the lightweight championship at San Francisco. It was a clean knockout and the decisive victory was clearly earned by the rugged strength and the terrific punishing power of the champion.

Judge Bordwell handed down a decision at Los Angeles, Cal., holding that his court had jurisdiction and the right to try John J. McNamara on murder charges growing out of the destruction of the Times plant Oct. 1, 1910, overruling the plea of no jurisdiction entered on behalf of the labor leader.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The forty thousand odd rural free delivery carriers in the United States are to receive salary increase as a result of a decision reached by Postmaster General Hitchcock. The order will provide for the disbursement the current fiscal year of $4,000,000, which will mean an increase of $100 over the present salary of $900 for all carriers on standard routes, with proportionate increase on the shorter routes.

The people of the United States are steadily deserting the country and the farm for the city and town, according to statistics made public by the census bureau. During the past ten years the percentage of people living in cities or other incorporated places of more than 2,500 inhabitants increased from 40.5 to 46.3 of the total.

In announcing the addition of fifty more postal savings depositories, situated in thirty-two states, Postmaster General Hitchcock noted that the opposition of banking institutions to the establishment of these depositories had almost completely disappeared.

A board of naval officers, experts on explosives, is being selected by the navy department to study the hull of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor as the water is pumped from the cofferdam now surrounding the wreck.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Representative Alexander C. Mitchell of the Second Kansas district is dead at Lawrence, Kan., following a long illness. Mr. Mitchell was elected to the house of representatives last year on a progressive Republican platform, defeating Representative Charles F. Scott, "regular Republican."

Considerable mystery surrounds the death of James Pettit, millionaire treasurer of the Peavey Grain company of Chicago, and himself probably the best known grain man in the United States. Pettit's body was found in six inches of water on the bank of Lake Michigan.

California has established a bird farm on which a systematic effort will be made to raise insect eating birds on a large scale. The farm comprises forty acres and is soon to be increased to 100 acres. The plan in view is to send out birds in lots of fifty or more to those sections of the state where it is apparent that birds are most needed. A fact that has given an impetus to the enterprise is that in those sections where birds of a given variety have decreased in numbers insect damage has increased.

Windbreaks are not only indispensable for the protection of orchards, but are to be commended for the general farm in sections which are subject to severe hot winds during the summer months. It is a matter of common observation that if a high temperature is accompanied by a wind the evaporation of moisture from the soil and from growing crops is several fold what it is in the case of the same temperature with no wind. The windbreaks, two or three of which should be put across the farm at right angles to the prevailing hot winds, will greatly reduce evaporation for the reasons mentioned.

The writer believes a great deal could be done toward furthering the protection of bird life, which has so vital and economic a bearing on the work of the tiller of the soil, were the very boys who often thoughtlessly destroy birds nests and eggs organized into junior Audubon societies under the supervision of older persons in the community who are interested in birds and make a study of them and their habits and economic value. We realize that a world of helpful instruction is being given along this line in our public schools, but an enlisting of the boys and girls into an organization state and national in its scope and aims would do much to arouse interest and give recognition to the work which they were able to do.

With mosquito netting and wire screens as cheap as they are, there is no good reason why either country or town folks should sleep with windows down or spend the hour before getting up pawing the pesky pests.

It is the same with quack grass and Canada thistles as with bad habits—a whole lot easier to be careless and let them get a foothold than to root them out afterward. The secret of eradication is the same with all—vigilance, persistence and perseverance.

That piece of ground which failed to give a stand of corn because of cutworms or which was too wet in the spring may be made to do duty yet by putting it to millet or buckwheat. Either will yield a paying crop and, besides this, will keep the weeds in subjection.

If the herd bull has not been or cannot be broken to do some of the work on the farm he should be given the run of a good sized paddock and another bovine of the same gender or two or three big stumps to tousle around to give him needed exercise. If he has this exercise his offspring will be stronger and he will also be better natured.

There seems to be considerable rivalry among Texas cotton growers as to who shall be first in getting a bale of the new season's cotton on the market. This season a bale was marketed at Houston on June 12, which is said to beat the best previous record by eleven days. This bale weighed 493 pounds and brought $1,015, or approximately $2.05 per pound.

The latest arguments put forward in favor of the skunk is that he is one of the best of rat catchers and a voracious consumer of cutworms, army worms, tobacco worms, white grubs and May beetles, as well as grasshoppers and crickets. Investigations which have been made as to the economic value of the skunk class it as an animal entitled to man's protection.

It is estimated that a circular barn can be built at from 30 to 40 per cent less than the common rectangular barn of like capacity. More than this, the circular barn is stronger and can be more conveniently arranged on the interior. About the only drawback with the circular structure is that not one man in ten knows how to put one up nor relishes the job even if he does know how.

A York state miser had no faith in banks and so put $47,000 which he had hoarded during many years in what he thought a safe nook in his house. But the structure caught fire the other day, and the savings of many years went up in smoke. Nothwithstanding the fact that instances like the above are of almost daily occurrence there are a whole lot of folks who still believe that an old trunk, a tin can or a stove is a better place of safety than a bank

A question that naturally comes to the Ohio or Illinois farmer who goes to the southwest is whether listing as a method of planting corn is preferable to plowing and planting by the check row method. This matter has been given a pretty thorough test by several experiment stations in states where listing is practiced, and if there is any difference at all in the yield of corn secured by the two methods it is slightly in favor of the latter method.

There are a good many sections this year in which the only farmers who will harvest a crop of corn worth speaking of will be those who persist in frequent cultivation even after the time when the field is usually laid by. If the drought persists the cultivation should be continued with single horse cultivators or, what gives just as satisfactory results, an old mower wheel hauled between the rows of corn just as it lies on the ground. This levels and pulverizes the soil and gives the desired dust mulch.

Experience which seems to be quite general points to the truth of the fact that, while a silo built of cement blocks or common brick without re-enforcement with steel girders may hold together for a year or so, in the end they are quite likely to go to pieces. Not long ago a big cement block silo at one of the Illinois state farms collapsed and not only came close to killing several persons who were working near it, but all of the silage which it contained was a dead loss. It costs more in the beginning to re-enforce silos with rods of steel placed in courses of material of which the silo is built, but it is economy of a most commendable sort in the long run.

A spray which is excellent in the killing of the several kinds of lice that infest plum, apple and some other fruit trees is the kerosene emulsion. To make shave a one pound bar of laundry soap into a gallon of soft water, which should be heated to boiling, so the soap will be completely dissolved. Remove from stove and pour in slowly one pint of kerosene, stirring the while vigorously. The stirring should be continued until the oil combines with the suds and forms a creamy solution. Stir into this two gallons of cold soft water, and the solution is ready for use. Another preparation is made by steeping tobacco stems or leaves in water at the rate of about a pound and a half to five gallons of water. The latter spray is preferable where one has large trees or a considerable area to cover.

A STRAWBERRY INQUIRY.

A lady reader of these notes living at Rochelle, Ill., writes asking what is the best time to set out a strawberry bed; also if she can renovate an old bed so that it will be worth while. In the section in which our correspondent lives we believe a new bed would give best results if the plants were set out the latter part of April, or about the time when potatoes are planted. To have the most satisfactory bed the plants should be large and thrifty, and the ground in which they are planted should be enriched with well rotted manure and made fine and mellow. If the variety of berry set is a vigorous grower the plants should be put in rows three feet apart and about two feet apart in the row. To have berries that are a delight, a dozen or eighteen of which will fill a quart measure, one should get pedigreed plants from some responsible grower. Such plants will cost a trifle more than the common, runty plants, but the returns at picking time will more than justify the additional expense. The bed should be kept thoroughly tilled during the growing season and free from weeds, and blossoms that develop should be snipped off. When the ground is firmly frozen after winter sets in the bed should be covered with a coat of about three inches of clean straw, which can be raked from the crown of the row at the proper time in the spring and allowed to furnish a covering for the earth between. In answer to the inquiry about the old bed we would say that we believe it can be renovated so that it will give good results. In doing this one should first cut all growth on the bed close with a scythe, including plants and weeds. If this dries sufficiently it should be burned on the bed with any other litter that may be lying close on the ground. Any rubbish that does not burn should be raked off.

One should next take a single horse plow or hand cultivator and break up and thoroughly stir the soil between the original berry rows, leaving unplowed strips of not more than six inches wide. If quite a bit of loosed soil is rattled in on this strip it will do no harm. The bed, what there is left of it, will look decidedly sick after this operation, but following a rain the plants will begin to show up from the undisturbed roots, and runners will develop, from which entirely new plants will set. The success of such renovation of an old bed will depend largely upon the amount of moisture it received during July and August, but an artificial supply will answer the same purpose. Such a bed will bear a good supply of berries next year, but not as large a quantity as would a bed in its second year. As a sort of compromise we would suggest that our friend renovate a half of this bed, unless it is very small, and on the other half set new plants next spring. This will insure some berries next season and a good supply the season following.

MILKING STRAIN SHORTHORNS.

Farmers who have made an effort to develop a milking strain of Shorthorns will be interested in some experiments which have been carried on by the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with the Minnesota experiment station along the line of developing a type of Shorthorns which will produce not only valuable beef animals, but cows which will give a good account of themselves in the dairy. Reports published relative to these experiments show that in three herds owned by private individuals an annual milk production of from 3,000 to 6,000 pounds was secured, yielding from 125 to 250 pounds of butter fat. In one herd owned and directly under the supervision of the experiment station the records show yields running from 4,000 to 8,000 pounds of milk, containing from 125 to 325 pounds of butter fat. Time was when there were in existence a number of herds of milking Shorthorns that possessed a decidedly dairy bent, but the big fat stock shows with standards of judging which put Shorthorns in the beef and not in the dairy classes and which call for mountains of fat on the back of all exhibition animals has played hob with the moderate dairy tendency a few Shorthorns possessed.

ADVANTAGE OF A DUST MULCH.

A friend who lives in Stanley county, in the southwestern part of South Dakota, was telling us the other day of an interesting experiment that one of his neighbors made last year along the line of harrowing a field of wheat after it was up to conserve moisture. He divided an eighteen acre field into two equal tracts. One of these he did not touch after the grain showed above the ground. The other piece he harrowed three times, adjusting the lever so as to put the teeth at quite an angle. The last time through the wheat stood fourteen inches high. At harvest time the plot that had not been dragged yielded nine bushels per acre. The other plot that had been given a dust mulch by dragging yielded eighteen bushels. This easy method of conserving moisture is an especially live problem with every farmer in the semiarid sections, where the rainfall ranges from twelve to eighteen inches per annum, yet the principle is one that the farmer in the humid sections might well put into practice in dry seasons. There is little question that the benefit to be derived from such dragging and a breaking of the soil crust would be correspondingly great.

Let the old tabby cat get a taste of fresh bird meat and forthwith she quits watching the rat holes in the barn.

Some one has discovered that a half teaspoonful of black pepper mixed with a teaspoonful of cream will drive away flies. The theory, so it is claimed, is that the flies inhale the pepper and sneeze their heads off.

About the time that Chinese women are discarding the heathenish practice of foot binding American women have adopted the high heel habit, which is to be condemned quite as severely both from the standpoint of appearance and health.

In many sections of the country unpromising tracts of land in which a hardpan stratum comes close to the surface have been made available for the growing of alfalfa or fruit trees by breaking it up with charges of dynamite exploded at frequent intervals, in the case of fruit trees where each tree is to stand.

Wire screens for doors and windows that are not of the best material—brass or galvanized—corrode with rust very rapidly in sections where there is considerable moisture in the air during the summer season. A coat of paint of the desired color will head off this rusting and materially lengthen the life of the screens.

California has established a bird farm on which a systematic effort will be made to raise insect eating birds on a large scale. The farm comprises forty acres and is soon to be increased to 100 acres. The plan in view is to send out birds in lots of fifty or more to those sections of the state where it is apparent that birds are most needed. A fact that has given an impetus to the enterprise is that in those sections where birds of a given variety have decreased in numbers insect damage has increased.

Windbreaks are not only indispensable for the protection of orchards, but are to be commended for the general farm in sections which are subject to severe hot winds during the summer months. It is a matter of common observation that if a high temperature is accompanied by a wind the evaporation of moisture from the soil and from growing crops is several fold what it is in the case of the same temperature with no wind. The wind breaks, two or three of which should be put across the farm at right angles to the prevailing hot winds, will greatly reduce evaporation for the reasons mentioned.

The writer believes a great deal could be done toward furthering the protection of bird life, which has so vital and economic a bearing on the work of the tiller of the soil, were the very boys who often thoughtlessly destroy birds nests and eggs organized into junior Audubon societies under the supervision of older persons in the community who are interested in birds and make a study of them and their habits and economic value. We realize that a world of helpful instruction is being given along this line in our public schools, but an enlisting of the boys and girls into an organization state and national in its scope and aims would do much to arouse interest and give recognition to the work which they were able to do.

With mosquito netting and wire screens as cheap as they are, there is no good reason why either country or town folks should sleep with windows down or spend the hour before getting up pawing the pesky pests.

It is the same with quack grass and Canada thistles as with bad habits—a whole lot easier to be careless and let them get a foothold than to root them out afterward. The secret of eradication is the same with all—vigilance, persistence and perseverance.

That piece of ground which failed to give a stand of corn because of cutworms or which was too wet in the spring may be made to do duty yet by putting it to millet or buckwheat. Either will yield a paying crop and, besides this, will keep the weeds in subjection.

If the herd bull has not been or cannot be broken to do some of the work on the farm he should be given the run of a good sized paddock and another bovine of the same gender or two or three big stumps to tousle around to give him needed exercise. If he has this exercise his offspring will be stronger and he will also be better natured.

There seems to be considerable rivalry among Texas cotton growers as to who shall be first in getting a bale of the new season's cotton on the market. This season a bale was marketed at Houston on June 12, which is said to beat the best previous record by eleven days. This bale weighed 403 pounds and brought $1,015, or approximately $2.05 per pound.

The latest arguments put forward in favor of the skunk is that he is one of the best of rat catchers and a voracious consumer of cutworms, army worms, tobacco worms, white grubs and May beetles, as well as grasshoppers and crickets. Investigations which have been made as to the economic value of the skunk class it as an animal entitled to man's protection.

It is estimated that a circular barn can be built at from 30 to 40 per cent less than the common rectangular barn of like capacity. More than this, the circular barn is stronger and can be more conveniently arranged on the interior. About the only drawback with the circular structure is that not one man in ten knows how to put one up nor relishes the job even if he does know how.

A York state miser had no faith in banks and so put $47,000 which he had hoarded during many years in what he thought a safe nook in his house. But the structure caught fire the other day, and the savings of many years went up in smoke. Nothwithstanding the fact that instances like the above are of almost daily occurrence there are a whole lot of folks who still believe that an old trunk, a tin can or a stove is a better place of safety than a bank.

A question that naturally comes to the Ohio or Illinois farmer who goes to the southwest is whether listing as a method of planting corn is preferable to plowing and planting by the check row method. This matter has been given a pretty thorough test at several experiment stations in states where listing is practiced, and if there is any difference at all in the yield of corn secured by the two methods it is slightly in favor of the latter method.

There are a good many sections this year in which the only farmers who will harvest a crop of corn worth speaking of will be those who persist in frequent cultivation even after the time when the field is usually laid by. If the drought persists the cultivation should be continued with single horse cultivators or, what gives just as satisfactory results, an old mower wheel hauled between the rows of corn just as it lies on the ground. This levels and pulverizes the soil and gives the desired dust mulch.

Experience which seems to be quite general points to the truth of the fact that, while a silo built of cement blocks or common brick without re-enforcement with steel girders may hold together for a year or so, in the end they are quite likely to go to pieces. Not long ago a big cement block silo at one of the Illinois state farms collapsed and not only came close to killing several persons who were working near it, but all of the silage which it contained was a dead loss. It costs more in the beginning to re-enforce silos with rods of steel placed in courses of material of which the silo is built, but it is economy of a most commendable sort in the long run.

A spray which is excellent in the killing of the several kinds of lice that infest plum, apple and some other fruit trees is the kerosene emulsion. To make shave a one pound bar of laundry soap into a gallon of soft water, which should be heated to boiling, so the soap will be completely dissolved. Remove from stove and pour in slowly one pint of kerosene, stirring all the while vigorously. The stirring should be continued until the oil combines with the suds and forms a creamy solution. Stir into this two gallons of cold soft water, and the solution is ready for use. Another preparation is made by steeping tobacco stems or leaves in water at the rate of about a pound and a half to five gallons of water. The latter spray is preferable where one has large trees or a considerable area to cover.

A WORD TO THE GIRLS.

A little while ago there was a paragraph in this department directed to the class of young men who are interested in nice girls and have a hazy idea of some day asking them to share homes with them, yet who have not sensed the fact that it takes money to furnish a home. This week we have a suggestion or two for some of these same girls and others who may not have realized the fact that it takes something besides a stunning dress, a nicely adjusted rat or a popular air indifferently played or sung and moonshine to adequately meet the responsibilities which a young woman assumes when she becomes mistress of a home. The girl of today is not supposed to spin and weave, as did her great-grandmother, but she should know how to do neatly and well the plainer kinds of sewing. She should know how to make as good a loaf of bread as her mother (if her mother's bread is sour and soggy it should be a good deal better) and a pie with a light crust; should also know how to broil a steak and cook a roast or a boil. She should know something of the care of the sick and how to keep a little child well in hot weather. Then, too, she should realize that any man who is worthy of the name of husband takes just as much pride in seeing his wife neatly attired as when she was his sweetheart and, lastly, that a neatly kept home is the comfort and delight of a decent man, even if he does do a good deal now and then toward getting it out of order. In general it may be said that any girl who is a real help and comfort to her mother and who is serious and unselfish will in the course of things acquire a knowledge of these and other things which she most needs to know. On the other hand, the young man is to be pitied who, drawn to a girl by exterior and surface qualities, finds after they have set up housekeeping that she is lazy, careless, indifferent and sloppy in the way she gets herself up and in the care of the house. Homemaking in the best sense is a wholesome and delightful yet serious business. It requires the best that two young people can put into it, both the young man and the young woman.

SILOS IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

The Kansas Agricultural college directors have come to the conclusion that silos would be a real boon to the farmers in the western part of the state and with this idea in view will next winter build a silo on the state farm at Hays, Kan. A half section of land will be devoted to the experiment, and a practical farmer will be put in charge of the work with a view to demonstrating its feasibility for other farmers in the territory mentioned. Kaffir corn, milo maize, Indian corn and sorghum will be given a trial in the experiment. Some idea of the results to be expected may be gathered from some feeding tests with Kaffir corn ensilage last winter at the state farm at Eureka. Ten steers fed Kaffir corn ensilage, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made an average gain of 127 pounds each in a period of fifty-nine days, while another group fed the same length of time on dry shock corn fodder, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made a gain of but 114 pounds each. Not only did the Kaffir corn ensilage cost less than the dry shock fodder, but the steers which were fed on the former went on to pasture in the spring in much better condition. The silo will not only provide a succulent ration during the period of drought and short pasture, but it will make possible the securing of corn, sorghum or milo maize that is about to be burned up with hot south winds. The full results of this Kansas silo experiment will be watched with a great deal of interest.

FIRES REGULATED BY LAW.

The state of Connecticut has a law which in times of drought prevents a good many destructive fires. This provides first that no person shall kindle a fire upon public land without authority to do so nor upon the premises of another without permission of the owner or his agent. It also provides that no person shall kindle or authorize another to kindle a fire in his woodland unless all combustible materials for the space of six feet surrounding the place where said fire is kindled have been removed, nor shall any such fire be left until extinguished or safely covered. As is natural, perhaps, some farmers of the state think the law is an insult to their intelligence, others that the law is wisely drawn and tends to reduce loss from runaway fires.

ABOUT FISH.

Figures which have lately been collected show that one out of every 400 people in the United States fishes for a living; that the annual catch of this quarter million fishermen is 1,000,000,000 pounds, worth about $50,000,000. Capital to the amount of $75,000,000 is devoted to the fishing business, and of this amount $22,000,000 is tied up in vessels. In the production of fish Virginia leads with a catch of 378,183,258 pounds, New York is second with 228,002,285 pounds, while Alaska stands third with 165,226,000 pounds. In the matter of number of people occupied with the fishing business Maryland leads with 42,812, Virginia comes next with 20,276, Maine 16,956 and Massachusetts 14,261.

BANNER YEAR FOR CROPS

Reports From Surrounding Territory Indicate That Northwestern Minnesota Will Harvest Big Crop

Crops in Pennington County Said to be the Best This Year of Many Preceding Harvests.

Though Canadian reciprocity seems almost certain to pass the senate, Northwestern Minnesota is plugging along just the same and bids fair to raise one of the biggest crops in years this season.

For Pennington County the cool weather of last week has brought the grain along in great shape and the farmers report that unless some unforeseen event occurs, a bumper crop will be harvested this year. The hot weather of June gave the crops an excellent start and indications point to the fact that harvest will be somewhat earlier this year than usual. Threshing outfits are now preparing to thresh the rye and barley and later on the wheat. The hay crop is running two and a half to three tons to the acre which is unusually heavy for this section of the state and the corn, which not very long ago it was thought could not be raised in this climate, bids fair to rival the crop in Iowa and Kansas.

Below are clippings from exchanges which show that all through Northwestern Minnesota the same conditions prevail:

The farmers of Red Lake county are particularly fortunate this year. While in many parts of southern Minnesota, in South Dakota and Iowa, crops will be very short, in Red Lake county magnificent crops are almost ready for the harvest.

This week the farmers are all busy putting up hay. The crop is excellent and the weather for the hay harvest could not be more favorable.

The finest crops of grain ever grown in Red Lake County are now maturing and will be ready for the harvest the last of the month. Every indication points to the breaking of all records for crop yields. The oldest inhabitant, of whom there are several, says that never since there has been any farming here have the fields looked so fine or the growth of all vegetation been so luxuriant.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The cool weather of the past week has been ideal for the crops and especially beneficial to the overly heavy fields which were inclined to lodge. Some barley will be ready for the binder by the latter part of this month.—Marshall County Banner.

Ada, Minn., July 13.—The cool weather and the Saturday rain helped crops. The crop outlook in this vicinity is good. Harvesting of barley and rye has commenced. The rye yield promises to be good. Some early oats will soon be ready to cut, and it is generally conceded that the harvest will be about three weeks earlier than usual. There is a big acreage of corn planted here which promises a good yield.

The Times editor made a trip to Wannaska and south last Saturday. The developement of this section of the county is proceeding rapidly now. The crops give indication that the land in this section is the richest in the county. The farmers are generally waking up to the possibility of results from farming and a large amount of new land is in crop this year.—Roseau County Times.

Several small showers and some cool weather this week has braced the crop prospects—which were already good—to a great extent. About the only thing that can prevent a bumper crop in Mahnomen county this year, from now on, would be excessively hot weather during the filling season, which is during the next three weeks. About all the wheat is headed out and has already commenced to fill. It is confidently predicted that there are fields which will yield as much as 30 bushels to the acre of wheat this year. Flax is in good shape, where it was seeded reasonably early. Late sown flax will have to depend on how long the frosts keep off—as usual. The hay crop is only medium and potatoes are nothing extra. Corn looks well.—Waubun Forum.

Greenbush Tribune: The crops are looking fine in this section. In fact, couldn't be better on a whole. The farmers south of the ridge say that they do not want any more heavy rains or the grain will lodge.

Norman County Index: Reports from almost every section of the country are to the effect that crops never looked better at this time of the year. Not only is the stand of grain heavier, but it also further advanced than is usually the case at this time. The abundant rains in May and June and warm weather are conducive to rapid growth. It is estimated that if the crop now growing can be safely harvested it will surpass the famous crop of '93—and will bring a great deal more money. A few localities report insufficient moisture but in the vicinity of Ada, the rains have been just right, local showers and fair weather. The recent rains have helped the meadows considerably.

PLAN FOR GOOD ROADS

35 Counties of Northern Minnesota to Have Good Roads Meeting In Bemidji July 25.

Planned to Build Four Main Trunk Lines Connecting Points in Northern Part of State.

County attorneys, commissioners, members of automobile clubs and other persons interested in the construction of new roads will meet with Senator James T. Elwell of Minneapolis, State Forester W. T. Cox and members of the Good Roads committee of the Northern Minnesota Development association at what promises to be the greatest good roads meeting ever held in the state to be held in Bemidji Tuesday, July 25.

W. R. MacKenzie, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association, has received assurances that not only will Senator Elwell and Forester Cox come but that a representative from the State Highway commission, probably State Engineer George W. Cooley will come. George E. Marshall, United States forester on the Cass Lake Indian reservation also will be present.

At this meeting definite plans will be decided upon to proceed under the Elwell law with the construction of four trunk roads: East Grand Forks to Duluth; Moorhead to Duluth; St. Paul to International Falls. It is likely that the East Grand Forks and the International Falls road probably will strike Brainerd.

The Good Roads committee is made up of C. M. King, Deer River, chairman; F. A. Green, Stephen; D. P. O'Neil, Thief River Falls; Chris Burns, Cass Lake and James Pardee, Duluth, Secretary.

It is probable that the meeting here July 25, will be held at the courthouse.

It is expected that plans will be adopted asking county commissioners of the 35 counties to be represented to join in the movement to make all continuous roads state roads. The counties involved are the counties north of St. Paul, Anoka and Chisago, while not in the development association, joining in the good roads work, and will have representatives at the Bemidji meeting.—Bemidji Pioneer.

MORE SHOWS FOR FAIR

Three Free Shows, Six Street Shows and Balloon Ascension Every Evening.

Committee Working Hard to Make County Fair the Biggest and Best.

The officers of the fair association have been working hard the past week to make the Pennington county fair to be held here, August 2, 3 and 4, the biggest and best in Northern Minnesota this year, and as a result they have booked an added list of attractions which is expected will greatly improve the amusement and spectacular side of the fair as well as boost the attendance.

With the Wright Bros. aeroplane making two flights daily during the three days of the fair, as the leading feature, the committee has signed up three free attractions for the fair grounds and six independent shows which will show on the streets during the fair. In addition, arrangements have been made for a balloon ascension every evening during the fair which will give those present an excellent opportunity of comparing man's two means of conquering the air. The attractions in the city as well as at the fair grounds will mean that something is going on every minute and anyone who does not enjoy himself at the fair will have only himself to blame. Among the attractions which will show in the city is the "Carry-us-all" or modern merry-go-round which is an exact duplicate of the one at Wonderland, Minneapolis and will show here for the first time.

The fair grounds have been fixed up and everything will be in readiness when the fair opens to give the visitors a good time for three days. The merchants and businessmen are working hard for the fair and no doubt Pennington county's first fair will be the success they wish to make it.

Soards—Yell.

Tuesday morning at St. Bernard's church occured the marriage of Miss Anna Soards to Louis Yell, Father Adolph officiating. Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left for Minneapolis where they will make their future home. The groom lived in this city six years ago and is a brother of Frank Yell of this city. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Soards and is a popular young lady of this city. The many friends of the young people will wish them much happiness in married life.

Former Local Townsman Burglarized.

The Spooner Meat Market was entered some time Monday night, or Tuesday morning and the cash drawer rifled. The burglary was discovered on Tuesday morning by Axel Rod, who noting the rear door standing open upon his morning visit to the place. Mr. Rod personally locks his place of business at night and is usually the first to open up in the morning, thus the open door attracted his attention. On entering he made a hurried examination of the place and found in addition to the cash drawer having been rifled of the change left in the night before, some minor articles missing. The thief or thieves also contemplated taking with them some chickens they had taken from the ice box but which they left later on in the storeroom, evidently becoming alarmed for fear of detection. Whether or not any steps will be taken towards apprehending the burglars we have not been informed but it is likely that some Sherlock Holmes business will be indulged in by our "efficient" patrolman.—Northern News.

State Road Thru Karlstad.

The Roseau county commissioners have considered the question of building a state road from Drayton thru Donaldson into Karlstad and thence along the ridge thru Greenbush, Badger and Roseau and into Warroad. They, for some reason or other, were more in favor of one by the way of Strathcona. We fail to see, however, where they would derive any advantage from this in comparison with the former proposition. Thief River and all that country along that line has direct railroad connections with Warroad while this country has no connections except by a roundabout way that takes several days of travel. Then the cost of building the Strathcona road would be much more expensive than the Kittson county route.—Karlstad Advocate.

The program includes addresses on different parts of the bible and undoubtedly will be well worth attending. The lecturers secured for this meeting include Mr. A. C. Gaebelein of New York, noted bible scholar, expositor and teacher; Mr. A. N. Luccort pastor of the Oak Park church, Chicago, scholar, theologian and platform speaker, and Mr. S. S. Hilcher of Vola, Kansas, a well known Chautaqua speaker. Several of the local ministers are planning to attend the conference

Good Berry Crop.

Reports coming in from Duluth, Bemidji and elsewhere indicate that the berry crop of Northern Minnesota is the best this year that it has been for some time past. Wild strawberry plants in this vicinity yielded abundantly, the crop in the woods region being the best we have ever known. June berries are also very abundant and the boys and girls of the city have been making considerable pocket money by gathering them and disposing of them at the stores. The pin cherry and choke cherry trees are also well loaded.

WILL BUILD STEAM PLANT

Lights and Power Go off Altogether and Council Will Take Decisive Action.

At Mass Meeting Monday Night it is Decided to Build Auxiliary Steam Plant.

At a mass meeting held Monday night in the auditorium, it was decided to vote bonds of $25,000 for an auxiliary steam plant of at least 400 horse-power and the council was instructed to start work on the steam plant at once without waiting till the bonds were formally voted. Work will be started at once on the steam plant and it is estimated that it will take between six weeks and 2 months before it can furnish power, which will leave the city in the dark for some time yet, unless of course the river rises or some other means to furnish power is found.

The meeting Monday evening which was attended by 200 or more tax-payers was called to order by Mayor Hamre who stated that the purpose of the meeting was to discover the sentiment of the people in regard to the light situation. Alderman Forder was first called upon to tell of his trip up the river and conditions as he found them. Mr. Forder stated that the river was very low and beginning 14 miles from the lake there were logs lying loose in the river but no evidence of any jam. There were no logs at the outlet and nothing to prevent the flow of water from the lake. The lake appeared to be very low and the water at the outlet was not over a foot deep. Mr. Forder's opinion was that there would not be any more water until the lake rose. Other persons present who were familiar with conditions at the lake confirmed Mr. Forders' views and the concensus of opinion was that Red Lake could no longer be depended upon as a reliable source of water power.

Mayor Hamre then stated that the council wished to get an assurance from the tax payers that the bonds would be voted and a general discussion took place as to the amount of the bonds and the size of the proposed plant. When the matter was put to a vote it was unanimous that one of at least 400 horse power be built, the general opinion being that the water power could not be depended upon and that the steam plant should be built large enough to carry the whole load. After this was decided the question of a site for the plant came up, but the matter was left to the council. The question of wether it would not be advisable at this time to change from direct to alternating current also came up but no action was taken. Mayor Hamre gave notice that he would possibly call another mass meeting later, and the meeting adjourned.

The power was shut off completely Saturday and the city has been without electric light and power ever since. The general opinion seems to be that there will be no relief until the steam plant is finished. As a consequence the kerosene lamps and gas lights are being used in the stores and residences of the city while not even the humble candle is despised. The streets at night present a marked contrast, with the faint glimmer of a kerosene lamp here and there, to what they usually do. The question of power, however, is troubling some people more than light. The sash and door factory and the creamery have installed steam plants, and gasoline engines are being installed in factories, etc. throughout the city to provide temporary power.

GREATEST FAIR CROWDS.

All Indications Point to a Half Million Attendance and Comfort Will Be Provided for All.

Every preparation is being made for the care and entertainment next September of a greater crowd than ever before attended the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. A large number of additional park seats, new drinking fountains, comfort stations, a rest hospital and nursery have already been provided for.

The sidewalks on the main avenues have been widened and a number of the streets and street corners have been so graded as to care for greater crowds. Additional ground has been given the street car company at their central terminals and this space will greatly increase the company's facilities for handling the immense crowds that are expected.

The Agricultural society has purchased nine lots adjoining their present railroad yards and unloading platform and these will be increased in number and convenience. Fences and buildings on the fair grounds are being repaired and painted. A new building is being erected that will connect the woman's building and annex. Several new structures for machinery exhibits are being built on Machinery hill.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TWO DIE IN PISTOL DUEL

Minneapolis Policeman and Escaped Convict Battle Until Both Are Killed.

In a revolver battle at close range, Jerry McCarty, escaped convict and known as one of the most desperate criminals in America, and Patrolman Joseph Ollinger killed each other at Minneapolis. The hunted man, cornered, did just what his pursuer expected him to do, opened the first fire. Ollinger fired almost at the same instant. McCarty fell first and Ollinger, with four bullets in his body, fell on him.

The battle, which eclipsed any in the annals of the Minneapolis police, was fought alone by the two men, watched at a distance by bystanders, who had been warned away by the policeman.

The death of the two men ends a search for McCarty which has extended throughout the United States, while McCarty, who had escaped from Stillwater penitentiary on March 4, continued his career of robbery.

The fatal fight strangely resembled one which preceded the capture of McCarty in October, 1909, when he shot at Patrolman Jonas Jonassen, but missed fire and wounded himself in the hip. It was for the attack on Jonassen that he was serving the Stillwater sentence when he last escaped.

CRIME CONSPIRACY ALLEGED

Arrests Follow Deaths of Minneapolis Policeman and Bandit.

Two arrests were made by the Minneapolis police following close upon the duel to death between Jerry McCarty, noted bandit, and Patrolman J. J. Ollinger, which the authorities say revealed a plot to plunder which included bank robberies, holdup schemes and other crimes.

Arthur N. Denson, poolroom proprietor, soon after the shooting, is said to have made a complete confession to the police, naming Fred Briggs, cigar broker, leader of the gang and McCarty the active operator.

Denson told the police, it is said, he furnished the automobile for the operations and received his share of the robberies for his part of the game. Briggs appeared at the Minneapolis central station, not knowing that Denson had confessed, and was arrested.

Briggs is well known about the Twin Cities. He was connected with the Ames administration in Minneapolis several years ago and was at one time sent to the workhouse for operating gambling machines.

He denied emphatically having any connection with McCarty or anyone else in McCarty's criminal career, though he said he had aided McCarty when the latter escaped from Stillwater.

"I gave him a suit of clothes and $12 when he came to my house at midnight after his escape from the penitentiary," said Briggs to the police. "He went away and I thought I was rid of him for good.

"I did not tip him off to the police because I knew that I would be killed either by him or his friends if I betrayed him."

RULE OF REASON PLEA FAILS

State Supreme Court Renders Anti-Trust Decision.

The state supreme court refuses to follow the "rule of reason" applied by the United States supreme court in the Standard Oil and American Tobacco cases. The court decides that the Creamery Package Manufacturing company of Mankato is violating the state anti-trust laws and it is ordered to cease doing intrastate business.

The judgment does not prohibit the firm from doing interstate business.

The Creamery Package Manufacturing company cited the Standard Oil and American Tobacco decisions and asked to have the "rule of reason" applied in its case and also asked that it be given time in which to reorganize so as to conform to the state law.

Justice Bunn, who wrote the decision, says that so far as the latter contention is concerned the two cases cited are not at point. He says the Sherman anti-trust act did not impose the penalty of a forfeiture of corporate right, and that the prosecutions were not to forfeit such right, but to enjoin the acts and dissolve the combinations that were in restraint of trade.

ASSAILANT IS FOUND DEAD

Man Accused of Stabbing Probably Committed Suicide.

Halve Reistc, who stabbed Fred Gatel and then set fire to Henry Conzenius' stock barn, was found dead by Edward Chamberlain in a ditch in a clump of trees near the roadside about eighty rods south of the scene of the tragedy in Nininger, evidently having killed himself or fractured his skull in the fall into the ditch.

Gatel, who was assaulted, is reported in a precarious condition with no hope of recovery.

DULUTH HAS SERIOUS FIRE

Wholesale District Threatened With Destruction.

Fire caused a loss of $100,000 or more and at times threatened Duluth's entire wholesale district and only hard fighting on the part of the fire department, assisted by three fire tugs, prevented further destruction. For a time the main building of the Gowan-Peyton-Congdon company was threatened, as the warehouse adjoining it was all ablaze.

The fire started between the warehouses of the Gowan-Peyton-Congdon company and that of the F. A. Patrick company. The scattering brands of the fire spread rapidly. It extended south to the end of the dock and wiped out everything in sight. The block across the slip also caught fire.

The work of the firemen had to be directed in nearly every direction, as everything was dry as tinder. Billboards and refuse soon took fire and many smoldering piles had to be watched.

What caused the fire has not been learned, but from the warehouses in which it started it spread rapidly. From there it went to the residence of Captain Magee, then to the store of the Duluth Marine Supply company and on to the building occupied by the Lake Carriers' association, cleaning out everything and leaving nothing but a wake of ashes.

On reaching the end of the dock the fire swept over to the yards of the Carnegie Fuel company, destroying the weighing office and several coal boxes.

DEPOSIT ASSETS TO SECURE CREDITORS

Peavey & Co. Take Steps Calculated to Hold Confidence.

Assets to the value of $4,750,000 of F. H. Peavey & Co. of Minneapolis are in the hands of the Minneapolis Trust company, a branch of the First National bank of Minneapolis, as a means of protection to the concern's creditors.

This action was announced as voluntary on the part of the company by the committee composed of representatives of Minneapolis and Chicago banks and Eastern commercial paper houses.

The total indebtedness of F. H. Peavey & Co. is placed at $2,050,000, of which $750,000 is due subsidiary concerns, and most of the remainder falls due Aug. 1 or on demand. It was the settlement of these claims the committee has been considering the last three days.

F. H. Peavey & Co. had expected large sums of money from the Peavey Grain company to assist in paying off its own debts. Instead of money came the news the grain company was $1,200,000 short.

TRUST BUSTING EXPENSIVE

Kellogg Received $59,000 in Fees and $22,000 Expenses.

Expense accounts of "special assistants" to the attorney general and the large cost of the "trust busting" campaign of the department of justice was again the subject of inquiry before the house committee on expenditures in that department.

Frank B. Kellogg, special assistant, spent more than $22,000 in considerably less than three years, according to a statement sent the committee by the department of justice.

The department also furnished the committee with an itemized statement of fees paid to Trust Buster Kellogg in the Standard Oil and other cases amounting to $59,000 from Sept. 30, 1907, to Feb. 2, 1911.

The Kellogg fees are enumerated as follows: Eight payments of $3,000 each from July 1, 1907, to June 30, 1909, in the Standard Oil cases, $24,000; Dec. 8, 1909, in full payment to Dec. 3, $25,000; Feb. 2, 1911, "for making brief and assisting in the argument in the Standard Oil cases and for other services, $10,000."

Mr. Kellogg, it appears, spent the sum of $22,561.70 for "expenses" in the Union Pacific and Standard Oil cases.

The expenses covered Mr. Kellogg's trust busting operations from Dec. 23, 1907, to Feb. 11, 1910, a little more than two years.

LUCE IS CHOSEN COLONEL

Will Command First Regiment, Minnesota National Guard.

Major Erle D. Luce of Minneapolis was elected colonel of the First regiment, Minnesota national guard. He received twenty-six votes on the first ballot, eleven being recorded for Lieutenant Colonel Frank T. Corriston, and one for Major Frank Rowley. The election was made unanimous on motion of Colonel Corriston.

The election throughout was a peaceful, good natured affair, but the selection of a successor to succeed Major Luce did not progress with the dispatch that characterized the election of a colonel. It took fourteen ballots before Captain George K. Shepard of St. Paul was chosen.

Teachers Will Meet at St. Paul.

St. Paul won the next annual convention of the National Educational association, defeating Chicago after a close contest.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The state highway commission will adopt a new plan this year to get the county boards to make their plans early for the construction of state roads. Formerly the county boards have not decided until spring what roads they want to improve as state roads during the summer, and in consequence the highway commission has been rushed and not able to turn out plans and specifications as fast as the county boards wanted them. The result has been delay in many cases. Next fall the commission will ask the county boards to send notice before Christmas what roads they want improved and how much money they want from the state.

While tuberculosis claimed more victims on the farms in Minnesota in 1910 than in the smaller cities and villages the death rate was proportionately smaller, according to statistics just compiled by the state board of health. There were 654 deaths on the farm in 1910 as against 545 in the small cities and villages. In cities of more than 5,000 population there were 1,048 deaths. The rate in the city was 1.37, in small cities and villages, 1.34 and on the farm .72.

Provided certain taxes are paid on pending inheritance cases the amount collected by the state under the inheritance tax will pass the $500,000 mark for the fiscal year which ends July 31, 1911. The record of collections in the state auditor's office shows a total of $455,899.86 to date. If the taxes now in dispute are all settled by July 31, the figure will be considerably larger.

A reduction in child labor permits in the Twin Cities in the school year 1910-1911 is reported by the state labor bureau. In Minneapolis 369 such permits were issued, compared with 541 the previous year. In St. Paul there were 426 permits, against 622 the year before. This decline is attributed by the labor bureau to the activities of its inspectors and the city truancy agents.

Governor Eberhart has ordered the suspension of John Kinsella, county attorney of Lake county, pending the investigation of charges made against him by Hans Otterlee, chairman of the board of county commissioners. Marlon Douglas of Duluth was appointed commissioner to take testimony to submit to the governor in the matter of the permanent removal of Kinsella from office.

Friday, Sept. 8, has been designated as Grand Army day at the Minnesota state fair. Veterans wearing the regular Grand Army badge or regimental reunion badge will be admitted free on that day at the fair grounds. The Association of Minnesota Civil War Veterans will hold its annual meeting on the fair grounds on that day. Regimental reunions will also be held.

The Winona county board has declared war on rattlesnakes, which have become so numerous in certain sections as to jeopardize the lives of residents. At a session of the board under authority of state law it was decided to offer 50 cents for each rattlesnake killed in the county.

State railroad commissioners of the Dakotas, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Missouri will meet with the Minnesota commissioners at the state capitol July 26 in an effort to agree on a uniform system of railway safety devices. The conference will probably last two days.

The county seat of Dodge county will be retained by Mantorville as a result of the special election on the question of removing the courthouse from Mantorville to Dodge Center. The balloting showed 1,572 for Mantorville and 1,255 for Dodge Center.

Advanced proofs of the St. Paul directory for 1911 give the present population of the city as 218,344. The edition indicates an increase of 3,600 over last year, which, added to the 214,744 of the government census for 1910, gives the estimated total.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Joseph Eudofsky, aged twenty-three, was instantly killed by lightning while driving a load of hay to the barn of Henry Beardmore on a farm northwest of Angus. Two other men and the team were knocked down, but they recovered.

Harold Bayne, aged fifteen, son of John A. Bayne of St. Paul, was crushed to death beneath an auto truck at Minneapolis. The Bayne boy, with another companion, jumped on the truck near their homes and rode to Minneapolis.

Michael Hendel, a bartender who went to St. Louis recently from Caledonia, this state, is dead of a gunshot wound in his right heel, inflicted by a negro in a dispute over 10 cents.

Felix Haurier, aged seventy-five, of Randolph was killed by a Chicago Great Western freight train at that town.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

James Scofield, a pioneer resident of Minneapolis and a stage driver along the Mississippi and Minnesota river roads in 1849 and subsequent years, is dead in the Mill City. Mr. Scofield was seventy-six years old at the time of his death. He reached the Twin Cities when St. Paul was a trading post.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The Federal express, one of the New Haven railroad's fastest trains, carrying passengers from Washington to Boston without change, plunged down a twenty-foot embankment at Bridgeport, Conn., while running sixty miles an hour. Of 100 passengers who went down with the first six cars scarcely one escaped death or injury. Twelve bodies were taken out of the twisted wreckage, including the engineer and fireman, who were so mutilated that it is evident they must have met instant death. Forty-four injured are in the hospitals and nearly a score more received injuries not severe enough to prevent them from continuing their journey.

The destruction of the twin villages of Au Sable and Oscoda, Mich., and the $500,000 fire at Alpena, which were not due to forest fires, probably caused exaggerated reports of heavy damage and possible loss of life from forest fires in the northern counties of the Southern peninsula of Michigan. Towns along the Detroit and Mackinac railroad, from Posen, in Presque Island county, to Onaway, in Cheboygan county, suffered considerable damage, but many towns that were reported burning are now reported safe. These include Lewiston, Turner and Alger.

Twenty-one miners were killed in an explosion in the shaft of the Cascade Coal and Coke company's mine at Sykesville, Pa. All the dead but three are foreigners. The explosion was slight, as evidenced by the small damage done in the mine, but the deadly afterdamp is responsible for most of the deaths.

Three lives were lost and thirty-one persons experienced a thrilling midnight rescue when the steamer John Mitchell of Chicago was sunk in collision with the steamer William H. Mack of Cleveland, off Vermillion Point, Lake Superior.

Five men were killed and two seriously injured when a traveling crane, bearing a fourteen-ton steel girder, collapsed at a new viaduct being constructed by the Western Maryland railroad at Salisbury, Junction, Pa.

The warping of the rails by heat on the Oregon Trunk railway caused the wreck of a southbound passenger train near The Dalles, Ore. One man was killed and about twenty persons were injured, two perhaps fatally.

Frank Duclerville, forty-one years old, was drowned in the Mississippi river at St. Louis in a futile effort to save his two children, who were thrown into the water by the capsizing of a boat.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Close upon the death of James Pettit of Chicago, who was found dead from drowning in Lake Michigan, comes the announcement of the retirement from the brokerage business of the Peavey Elevator company, of which brokerage company Pettit was president and general manager. Notes aggregating between $1,200,000 and $1,500,000, which Mr. Pettit, it is declared, floated on the credit of the grain concern and which money he is reported to have lost in private speculations, have been under secret consideration at conferences of Chicago and Evanston bankers. It was said that the company had promised the bankers that it would make good on all the paper which had been given by Pettit on the credit of the concern.

We heard the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hopping out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the rump strap or monkeyed with the tug or bridle a bit and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and, like others, we have sat for a good half hour, with the thermometer registering 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG
CENTRAL POINT, ROGUE RIVER VALLEY OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

A poultryman who has tried it recommends a pinch of powdered sulphur put into the throats of chicks as a cure for gapes.

There is often as wide a gap between the pedigree and actual character and performance of a farm animal as there is between the profession of faith and everyday life of many folk whose names are on the kirk roll.

Many of the intestinal ills from which poultry as well as farm animals sometimes suffer could be largely prevented if the vessels from which they drink were frequently scalded out. The hot water kills the germs, and it is the germs that cause the trouble.

If the small boy ever learns to swim he must go swimmin' with his father or with other boys in the neighborhood. Many a mother, naturally anxious for her boy, seems to hold the idea that this can be done by absent treatment—sort o' thinkin' water and swimmin' motions.

A good many popular superstitions or beliefs are hard to dislodge. One of these is that a cow will die if she loses her cud. A cow often quits chewing her cud when sick and will resume the chewing of it when she gets better. If she dies it is not because she has lost her cud, but loses it because sick and dies of the malady.

The slugs that feed on the leaves of roses, cherry and pear trees may be dispatched by dusting the bushes or trees with fine road dust, applied when the dew is on. If beyond reach the same result can be had by spraying trees with a solution made by mixing one pound of arsenate of lead in twenty gallons of water. The solution should be stirred frequently while it is being applied with the sprayer.

Owing to getting hold of a wrong recipe for making the bordeaux mixture a farmer we heard of the other day applied a solution to some of his trees that was about ten times too strong. Not only did it take the leaves off the trees, but it ate holes in the bottom of the tin can in which it was mixed. It would be strange indeed if those who applied the spray to the trees didn't have holes eaten in their clothes and hands.

We have it from an experienced mason who has put up a number of the Iowa or clay hollow block silos re-enforced with cement and steel that no blocks should be used for this purpose unless glazed. Made of the ordinary unglazed block the walls will absorb moisture from the ensilage, and alternate thawing and freezing will cause the blocks to go to pieces. The point mentioned is one that the prospective silo builder would do well to keep in mind, as the first cost of such a silo is considerable.

A determined woman whom we read of the other day who is engaged in the poultry business was up against a pretty stiff mite proposition and hit upon the idea of burning the pests up in their places of concealment in the cracks and crannies of the henhouse by the use of a gasoline torch. She got along famously until the blaze from the torch set fire to the structure, when the mites were dispatched in a jiffy. This treatment did the business, but was a bit expensive. She will try another method next time.

A question of importance to the one having a first crop of alfalfa to harvest is the proper time to cut it. While the general rule is to cut when the blossoms are from one-tenth to one-third out, a surer guide has been found to be the little shoots which come up from the crown of the plant and from which the second crop develops. The crop should be cut when these are from one to two inches long. A heavier tonnage may be got from the first cutting by waiting a little longer, but there will be a delay in the growth of the second crop as a result that will more than offset the gain.

One of the most abject specimens of humanity that one could well run across is the chap who is fooling around doing nothing while waiting for some rich relative to die. We read of just such a fellow the other day who had been holding down a job of this kind for the greater part of twenty years, but at last accounts the one through whose death he was to benefit was still eating three square meals a day and enjoying good health. In the interval mentioned the waiter has lost gumption, initiative and about every other quality that make business success possible or life enjoyable. This prospective inheritance has been a curse to him all through the years and will be to his dying day.

A WORD TO THE GIRLS.

A little while ago there was a paragraph in this department directed to the class of young men who are interested in nice girls and have a hazy idea of some day asking them to share homes with them, yet who have not sensed the fact that it takes money to furnish a home. This week we have a suggestion or two for some of these same girls and others who may not have realized the fact that it takes something besides a stunning dress, a nicely adjusted rat or a popular air indifferently played or sung and moonshine to adequately meet the responsibilities which a young woman assumes when she becomes mistress of a home. The girl of today is not supposed to spin and weave, as did her great-grandmother, but she should know how to do neatly and well the plainer kinds of sewing. She should know how to make as good a loaf of bread as her mother (if her mother's bread is sour and soggy it should be a good deal better) and a pie with a light crust; should also know how to broil a steak and cook a roast or a boil. She should know something of the care of the sick and how to keep a little child well in hot weather. Then, too, she should realize that any man who is worthy of the name of husband takes just as much pride in seeing his wife neatly attired as when she was his sweetheart and, lastly, that a neatly kept home is the comfort and delight of a decent man, even if he does do a good deal now and then toward getting it out of order. In general it may be said that any girl who is a real help and comfort to her mother and who is serious and unselfish will in the course of things acquire a knowledge of these and other things which she most needs to know. On the other hand, the young man is to be pitied who, drawn to a girl by exterior and surface qualities, finds after they have set up housekeeping that she is lazy, careless, indifferent and sloppy in the way she gets herself up and in the care of the house. Homemaking in the best sense is a wholesome and delightful yet serious business. It requires the best that two young people can put into it, both the young man and the young woman.

SILOS IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

The Kansas Agricultural college directors have come to the conclusion that silos would be a real boon to the farmers in the western part of the state and with this idea in view will next winter build a silo on the state farm at Hays, Kan. A half section of land will be devoted to the experiment, and a practical farmer will be put in charge of the work with a view to demonstrating its feasibility for other farmers in the territory mentioned. Kaffir corn, milo maize, Indian corn and sorghum will be given a trial in the experiment. Some idea of the results to be expected may be gathered from some feeding tests with Kaffir corn ensilage last winter at the state farm at Eureka. Ten steers fed Kaffir corn ensilage, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made an average gain of 127 pounds each in a period of fifty-nine days, while another group fed the same length of time on dry shock corn fodder, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made a gain of but 114 pounds each. Not only did the Kaffir corn ensilage cost less than the dry shock fodder, but the steers which were fed on the former went on to pasture in the spring in much better condition. The silo will not only provide a succulent ration during the period of drought and short pasture, but it will make possible the securing of corn, sorghum or milo maize that is about to be burned up with hot south winds. The full results of this Kansas silo experiment will be watched with a great deal of interest.

FIRES REGULATED BY LAW.

The state of Connecticut has a law which in times of drought prevents a good many destructive fires. This provides first that no person shall kindle a fire upon public land without authority to do so nor upon the premises of another without permission of the owner or his agent. It also provides that no person shall kindle or authorize another to kindle a fire in his wood land unless all combustible materials for the space of six feet surrounding the place where said fire is kindled have been removed, nor shall any such fire be left until extinguished or safely covered. As is natural, perhaps, some farmers of the state think the law is an insult to their intelligence, others that the law is wisely drawn and tends to reduce loss from runaway fires.

ABOUT FISH.

Figures which have lately been collected show that one out of every 400 people in the United States fishes for a living; that the annual catch of this quarter million fishermen is 1,000,000,000 pounds, worth about $50,000,000. Capital to the amount of $75,000,000 is devoted to the fishing business, and of this amount $22,000,000 is tied up in vessels. In the production of fish Virginia leads with a catch of 378,183,228 pounds. New York is second with 228,092,285 pounds, while Alaska stands third with 163,220,000 pounds. In the matter of number of people occupied with the fishing business Maryland leads with 62,812, Virginia comes next with 29,276, Maine 16,956 and Massachusetts 14,263.

GOOD ROADS IN NORTHWEST

Washington State Alive to the Importance of Having Serviceable Highways.

The northwest is alive to the value of good roads. In a recent issue of the Seattle (Wash.) Intelligencer the statement is made that before the summer is over Seattle and Tacoma will be connected by a first-class macadamized highway. In King county, of which Seattle is the seat, there will be $320,000 available, including state aid, for road improvement this year. Much of this will be spent on a trunk line destined to connect Seattle and Everett. From Everett to Tacoma an improved road is a matter of the near future. This road work is part of a general plan to build a trunk line from the northern to the southern boundary of Washington, which in turn will become part of a highway from the Great Lakes to the ocean, through the northern tier of state, and this will connect with another trunk line from British Columbia down the coast to Mexico—a dream of that wide-awake country that is certain to be realized in the next few years.

TRY FERRO-CEMENT ROADS

Experiments With This Substance In France Have Been Highly Successful.

"Ferro-cement" roads are being experimented with in France. The substance is made of cement mixed with straw. To make a slab or block of ferro-cement, a mass of iron-straw is placed in the mold, and there is poured over it cement sufficiently fluid to penetrate into all the interstices of the iron and completely cover it. When the whole has set, the core of iron thus intimately incorporated gives to the block a great resistance to breakage and to traction, at the same time furnishing elasticity to compression which enables it to stand superficial shocks. A brick of ferro-cement 1 3-5 inches thick has supported during crushing tests, a pressure of about 65 tons to the square inch. In breakage tests, the resistance was quadruple that of ordinary cement. Resistance to wear was no less remarkable.

ELECTRIC MULES FOR PANAMA

Railroad to Be Built Along Panama for Drawing Ships From Ocean to Ocean.

The first shipment of steel has been made from New York for building a unique electric railway along the Panama canal for drawing great ships from ocean to ocean. The enormous volume of shipping across the isthmus will be drawn on the ancient towpath system, so that it will be unnecessary for steamers to proceed under their own steam. In place of the mules, on this curious towpath, powerful electric locomotives will draw the largest ships smoothly and swiftly across the continent. A steamer of, say 20,000 tons, which the canal will readily accommodate, is obviously a very heavy burden, and the electric locomotives will be geared to the tracks by a middle rail in the form of a rack. The canal commission has advertised for 2,000,000 pounds of steel ties, slots and covers and 1,300,000 pounds of steel channels. This rack railway will be built by the commission, and will be in working order in less than two years, in time for the opening of the canal.

Silver-Eyed Beefsteak.

The London cop calls his half-penny herring his silved-eyed beefsteak, and there are hundreds cooking every minute in London town where one is eaten here. Any time of the year a big part of this city would profit by eating fish for a spell instead of beef. With no open air exercise beef is a heap harder than fish for the body to get rid of, because there is a good deal more water in fish than in beef or pork. Fish are fat or lean. Eel, salmon, herring are more than five per cent. grease. Halibut and mackerel are two to five per cent. fat; cod, whiting, haddock, even less than two per cent.—New York Press.

In Montclair, N. J., they have set about putting an end to the mosquito nuisance by levying a fine of $10 per day on the owners of all premises who permit ponds of water thereon to contain "wrigglers"—mosquitoes in the larval stage.

The job of mowing the lawn may be simplified if the sod is cut away from the trunks of the shade trees thereon for a distance of three or four inches. This will improve the appearance of a mowed lawn and will do away with a pulling of the grass hugging the trunks or clipping it with shears.

The new canes in the raspberry patch will be much more sturdy and will bear far more fruit next season if the terminal shoot is pruned off about now, or as soon as it reaches a height of about three feet. This will induce the putting forth of many lateral shoots on which fruit will be borne next year.

One of the somewhat rare and very beautiful shade trees that are highly prized by the landscape gardener is the Camperdown elm. The tree is a rapid grower, has a large leaf and drooping limb habit, the growth of a single year on a young tree giving it a decided umbrella shape. The stock is grafted in France and sells at a fancy price.

THE NEWS

BY MRS. JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Published Every Thursday.

FOREIGN RATES:
Including the Dominion of Canada and Mexico ....$1.50 Per Year

Entered at the postoffice at Thief River Falls, Minn., as second class matter.

We wish to apologise to our many readers this week for the late appearance of the NEWS. The low stage of the water and the consequent shutting off of the power forced us to install gasoline power. However, we are now as well equipped for power as we were before and our paper will appear hereafter with its customary promptness.

The people of Thief River Falls have probably had brought home to them very strongly the past week, the serious situation they are up against as regards the light and power question. The mayor and the council are to be praised for their prompt action in the matter and the citizens can be assured they will be without light and power the shortest possible time. The light and power plant is the city's most valuable asset and one that a private corporation would gladly secure if they could.

Guilty of Manslaughter.

Sivert Simpson of Crookston was found guilty by a jury Tuesday evening of the crime of manslaughter in the first degree for the shooting last February of Theodore Nelson. The trial was a short one for a murder trial occupying only two days. The defendant claimed Simpson was intoxicated at the time of the shooting and was justified to a certain extent in finding Nelson in his wife's bedroom. The prisoner will be sentenced Monday and may get between 5 and 20 years in state's prison. Nelson, the murdered man, was well known in this city.

Making Plans for Steam Plant.

Ervin Jackson an architect of St. Paul arrived in the city yesterday and at once started to draw the plans for the new proposed steam plant. The exact location of the plant has not yet been decided upon by the council. At the meeting Tuesday night, a resolution was passed to submit a bond issue of $30,000 to the people and August 25 was designated as the day for the special election.

How About It, Mr. Steenerson.

Northern Minnesota has been without representation in the state legislature so long that taxation without representation is getting to be such an old story with her that some folks say she has even permitted the idea to extend beyond the state capitol.

Not that Halvor Steenerson hasn't his good points, and not that he has not been able to break away from the sun baked city of Washington to spend a few cool days at home looking up reservation—yes, even possibly preservation—affairs but just the same the gossips do say that in some way the Ninth congressional district has no real cause for breaking any buttons off a chest expanding with pride over its honorable servant of long speech fame.

These unkind critics forget that there is a reciprocity bill before congress and that, according to Editor Collins, the moment this bill passes, the world will come to an end, or might as well, and that Halvor has used his influence against this measure.

Curious people are even making bold enough to wonder if some self-sacrificing individual will not volunteer to permanently change Mr. Steenerson's address from Washington, D. C. to Crookston, Minn.

Of course there is no necessity for such a change. Mr. Steenerson will tell you so himself.—Bemidji Pioneer.

Pennington County Fair, Aug. 2, 3 & 4

Aldermen Resign.

At the city council meeting Tuesday evening Alderman J. P. Jensen at large and Milton Forder of the second ward tendered their resignations. Mr. Jensen stated that the pressure of business forced him to resign while Mr. Forder said he had had enough of public life for a while. At an adjourned meeting last evening Goodnow Torrison was elected to fill the place left vacant by Mr. Jensen. An alderman from the second ward will be reelected later.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

LOCALS LOSE CLOSE GAME

"Indians" Put Up Game Fight Against Detroit Team but Lose, Six to Four.

Tigers Win From Red Lake Falls, but St. Hilaire Again Trims Picketts.

In a game characterized by hard luck and costly errors at critical times, Detroit won from the Thief River Falls "Indians" Sunday by the score by 6 to 4. The game was one of the best and most exciting the locals have played this year, and there is general regret among the fans that they came off with the short end of the score.

Neither side scored for 3 innings when the Indians shoved one across the plate in the fourth. With 2 down, Detroit secured two runs mostly due to errors. In the fifth the Indians started out strong but after one run was scored the side was retired when the umpire called a man out at the plate when he looked safe to the crowd. Assisted by errors from the locals Detroit made three scores in the ninth and practically sewed the game up. In the eighth the the locals started a batting rally but only scored one run. Ten hits apiece were secured by each side and the game was closer and more exciting than the score would indicate. An effort was made to get a special train to Detroit but it fell through as enough fans would not agree to take the trip. However a number of enthusiasts made the trip on the flyer and report a good time.

Tigers Trim Red Lake.

The Tigers went to Red Lake Falls Sunday and defeated the Red Lake second team by the score of 5 to 3 in a fast game. Karwand and Syverson were the battery for the local boys and Poirier, Keifenheimer and Guillmette tried to stop the Tiger sluggers. The "Dutch Band" accompanied the team and made a big hit in Red Lake Falls.

The St. Hilaire team defeated the Picketts again here Sunday by the score of 11 to 6. The game was arranged at the last minute but was attended by a fair crowd nevertheless.

Coal for Northwest.

About 3,000 car loads of coal will pass through this city over the Soo Line from the head of the lakes within this month. About three or four train loads are passing through this city every day for points in Canada, and two engines are required to pull the heavy loads. This enormous amount of coal is being laid in by the Canadian Pacific railroad in anticipation of a bumper crop this year, and will be used for the purpose of hauling the grain to market this fall.

Water Resources of Minnesota.

The co-operative agreement between the United States Geological Survey and the Minnesota State Drainage Commission for the purpose of investigating the water resources of Minnesota has recently been renewed, and in consequence of an appropriation of $30,000 made by the legislature for two years' work, the investigations are being extended into portions of the State not previously touched.

The general plateau level of the northeastern portion of Minnesota, the section which lies north of Lake Superior and is contained chiefly in Lake and Cook counties, is more than 600 feet above Lake Superior. Numerous streams drain this region into the lake, and although they are small the fact that they descend 600 feet within a few miles of the lake makes them important as sources of water power. Many of the streams pass through canyons having vertical walls which would make excellent dam sites.

The investigation of these streams has been started by making a survey of Pigeon (which forms the extreme eastern boundary between Minnesota and Ontario), Brule and Deviltrack rivers. Other streams to be surveyed in this region are Cascade, Poplar, Temperance, Cross, Manitou, Baptism, Beaver, and Gooseberry rivers. Besides the streams in the northeastern portion of the State, Vermillion, Big Fork, and Little Fork rivers are being surveyed.

Measurements of the flow of the rivers are also being made, to determine more fully their value for water power.

The work of investigating the larger lakes in Minnesota, to determine their capacities as reservoirs to restrain the flood flow and thereby increase the discharge during the low water season, is also being undertaken. The first lake to be surveyed is Lower Rice Lake, through which Wild Rice River flows.

Clergy Gets Half Fare Rates.

Clergymen who have been compelled to pay full fare for traveling in Minnesota during the past three years will be granted half fare on and after August 1.

This is in accordance with a privilege granted before the 2-cent rate became effective, and means the restoration of a reduced rate which has been effective in all the territory of the Transcontinental Passenger association except in Minnesota. The clergy will be able to get this low rate by getting an annual permit by writing to the chairman of the association at Chicago.

The question of granting reduced rates to state fares was discussed at a meeting of the Western Passenger association at Mackinac, but action was postponed.

BAD ROADS BURDEN

ONWARD MARCH OF PROGRESS IS RETARDED BY MISERABLE HIGHWAYS.

BIG HANDICAP TO PEOPLE

Costs Much More to Haul Produce Over Bad Roads Than It Does Over Good Roads—Effect of Good Roads on Social Life.

BY HOWARD H. GROSS.

When one makes a study of this great subject and sees in how many ways the march of progress is retarded by miserable highways the country over, and realizes what a burden this handicap places upon the people, it is surprising that the whole population does not rise as one man and demand that the highway conditions shall be improved to the standard required for the twentieth century.

Road advocates have shown for years and years how much more it costs to haul produce over bad roads than it does over good ones; how with good roads the farmer can market his produce at any time he desires to do so and take advantage of market conditions and get the most for what he has to sell.

A roadside in Jamaica. Shows the hut of a native. These banana trees grow wild as well as oranges. There are few places in the world where one can live with less labor than in parts of Jamaica. Even here the roads are good—far better than the Central West of the United States.

Bad roads are a serious handicap to social conditions, and sometimes for weeks at a time dwellers in the farm home are marooned by stretches of impassable roads. They cannot get out to see anybody and nobody can get to see them. The town that is five miles away might as well be twice that. We know that man is a sociable thing—it is part of his nature—he can only grow and develop by meeting his fellow men—touching elbows—and by social and business intercourse.

We know that bad roads have been responsible in a very large degree for driving the young people from the farms to the cities. The census for the last thirty years has shown an ever increasing drift of the best brains and blood of the farm to the city. This is true notwithstanding that there is no better business in the world than farming, if it is done along up-to-date, progressive lines. It renders a surer and larger return than anything else in the world's work, yet the fact remains that the boy is not satisfied with farm life. With good roads, so he could get out whenever he desired to with his best buggy and girl, or perhaps an automobile, country life would take on an entirely different aspect.

A road that is undrained, undragged, useless and uninviting. Query: Is it a highway or mireway? The march of progress over such roads will certainly be slow. Such roads mean isolation, drudgery, poor schools, poverty and wretchedness. The building of good roads will practically double the value of such farm lands and the State and Federal Government ought to help build the roads. A good road ought to change the name of such a locality from Mud Flats to Pleasant Plains.

The handicap of the bad road is certainly a heavy one and is farreaching. Education has suffered greatly by reason of it. The country schools are little, if any, better than they were forty years ago. It is an open question whether they are as good. The wages paid the teachers are small. The number of pupils is very limited—sometimes three or four—often not over a dozen or fifteen. There is no school spirit; there is no anything but dreariness and drudgery with little progress toward education. When the boy and girl get old enough to realize this condition and the parents see it, there is nothing to do but send Johnny or Lizzie to the nearby town or city, where the schools are better and where there is an opportunity getting the rudiments of an education, and while Johnny and Lizzie are picking up an education under town conditions they are getting the town microbe along with the education. They form friendships and become part of the social life of the school; they are not willing to go back upon the farm with its dreariness and isolation. No one ought to blame them for this, in fact they are to be commended in many instances. The country lass and youth must have the social life that natures demand. This sociological fact must be reckoned with.

The National Educational commission, made up of eminent educators, thoroughly familiar with our conditions, has been studying this subject for a long time, and it says that the solution is only to be found in the consolidated township school, where instead of eight or ten isolated school houses, placed at intervals at the crossroads throughout the township—bleak, dreary and uninviting—there should be one central graded school at the most convenient central point, and provisions made to take the children to and from the school. Good roads are necessary if this is to be done. The school ought to have at least five acres of ground to serve as a miniature experiment station for the study of agriculture, the cultivation of which will increase interest in agriculture and show that farming requires brains as well as muscle. In such a school the boy and girl would be able to get a high school education and live at home upon the farm.

The school would be the social as well as the educational center of the township—the rallying point where the citizens could go and hold meetings; it would develop the social life, would be strong and helpful, and the young people would find in the central school and the associations that go with it, and the school spirit that would be developed, a satisfying condition that would make life upon the farm attractive instead of otherwise.

Another handicap to progress and a menace to our whole country, that is very larely traceable to bad roads, is the fact that so many thousands of farms are passing from the hands of owner into the hands of tenants. The weaning of the children from farm carries the patents away when advancing years makes it necessary for them to lay the burdens down. We are building up a peasantry (it sounds hard to call it that) which promises trouble in the future and raises the question whether we are not establishing here in the central west the conditions that have been the curse of Ireland for three hundred years. The result of this condition is that the soil is losing its fertility; the farm is becoming foul; noxious weeds are growing; the landlord squeezes the tenant for all the rent that is in sight and the tenant takes it out of the farm; he cannot afford for the short lease of one or two years to buy fertilizers; he must simply rob the soil for all he can get and turn it over to his successor in worse condition than he found it. He cannot go into stock farming on short land tenures, so he must be what is known as a grain farmer, and this takes the life out of the soil. The greatest economic menace of the world today, bar nothing, is the depletion of soil fertility, and this will go on as tenantry increases.

Thus we see a few of the very many drawbacks that are directly and indirectly due to bad roads, and we may add to the list, as stated by the department of agriculture, that the cost of moving farm products to the market and getting supplies back to the farm over bad highways causes an extra expense of at least $2.50 per person per year over and above what it would cost to perform the same service over roads that are uniformly good. One of the great world questions is that of good roads, and the sooner the people wake up to the fact the faster and surer will our progress be toward higher and better things.

There is a widespread clamor for a parcel post and strong influences are at work to get the federal government committed to it. The indications are that it will be tried out on a moderate scale. Whether the parcel post will prove a blessing or otherwise is an open question, and one we will not at this time discuss. We may say, however, that any attempt at the parcel post that contemplates extending the service to the rural mail routes will prove a disappointment. The conditions of the public roads are such that for weeks at a time it would be physically impossible to make delivery. The carriers are taxed now to the limit. If he starts out with fifty pounds over bad roads it is a heavier burden than five times the weight over a good road. Given the parcel post in full swing and without doubt the weight the carrier must handle will be many times what it is now. Any one familiar with conditions will say that without good permanent highways the delivery of packages over rural routes will be a physical impossibility. The first thing to strive for is good roads; let the parcel post come later.

Recent Happenings In This Country and Abroad.

KING GUSTAF IS FIFTY-FIVE

Ruler of Sweden Recently Celebrated Birthday Anniversary—Johan Svendsen, Who Died Recently, Was One of Norway's Greatest Artists—Aviators to Make an Effort to Fly Around Denmark.

SWEDEN.

The recent coronation of King George of England overshadowed, of course, all other royal events during the past few weeks, but there has just been a celebation at Stockholm which should be of interest in America. It was the fifty-third birthday anniversary of King Gustaf of Sweden. The ruler of Sweden shares with the emperor of Germany the distinction of being one of the most versatile of living monarchs. He is a D. C. L. of Oxford and an LL. D. of Cambridge, doctors of all the faculties of Vienna and honorary member of the academies of science in Berlin and St. Petersburg. He has the Garter among his many decorations, and the military schools of Sweden are under his inspection. Like his father, King Gustaf is a good sportsman and a splendid shot. He is regarded as the best tennis player in his kingdom. One room in the palace is devoted to trophies won in the tennis court—many of them won against all comers, and not those who gladly lose a game to so illustrious a personage. Not without reason his majesty has been called the most democratic king in Europe. His court is one of the most simple and homely. The poorest of his subjects may call and speak to their sovereign with no more formality than sending in their names.

Stockholm is becoming a popular city for international conferences and congresses. During the past few weeks the International Women's Suffrage association held a meeting in the Swedish capital, which was attended by over 1,200 delegates, representing every civilized country in the world; then the International Industrial society held its meeting and later the Swedish-Danish so called "Skytteforening," which was attended by over 1,000 delegates. And, next summer, comes the great Olympian games, which will attract worldwide attention. All Stockholm hotels have been filled to their full capacity with tourists from all over the world and Northern Baltic steamers and all railway passenger trains bound for the north have been overcrowded with travelers.

The usual quota of Swedish-Americans are spending the summer months in Sweden, sightseeing and visiting old friends and relatives and scenes of childhood days. The percentage of Swedish-American visitors is, if anything, on the increase this year. Among other tourists who visit the country the Germans are plainly in the lead this year. Then follow the English and the Americans. The English tourist used to be in the lead so far as numbers are concerned, but the Germans are way in the lead now.

Professor Svante Arrhenius, the eminent Swedish chemist, who held a series of lectures at Lowell Institute in Boston and also lectured at the Wisconsin and Minnesota universities, returned to Stockholm June 19 in the best of health and spirits. Unlike so many other learned men who have visited America from Sweden Professor Arrhenius returns with words of praise for American institutions.

The persons who are paying the highest taxes are the following, who are taxed for amounts towit: Sir E. Cassel, banker, 1,887,000 crowns; Count W. von Halwyll, 1,059,000 crowns; Bank Director Wallenberg 729,000; A. U. Versteegh, 681,000; G. C. Seippel, 663,000; M. Wallenberg, 596,000 Madame M. Ekman, 598,000.

The Boy Scout movement has reached Sweden and Bishop Dannell at Skara university has taken hold of the movement in earnest and has suggested it be inaugurated at Skara and has also expressed the hope that the Boy Scout movement may become general throughout the kingdom.

Olof Soderberg has been appointed Norwegian consul at Stockholm to succeed Consul General Braathen, who was compelled to tender his resignation some time ago owing to illness. Mr. Soderberg assumed charge of his new position July 1.

The old decree for railway trains to whistle at all crossings has now been placed in effect again. It was abolished for some time, for some reason or other, but it was found to be impracticable.

Colonel Graves, United States minister to Stockholm, accompanied by his wife, have gone to Bastad, a famous watering place in Sweden, to spend the remainder of the summer.

Prince Carl spent midsummer in Copenhagen as the guest of King Frederick. He returned to Stockholm June 25.

Children's day in Stockholm netted over 77,000 crowns this year.

NORWAY.

The Norwegian composer, Johan Svendsen, who died in Copenhagen some two weeks ago, is probably the one of Norway's greatest artists whose name will survive the longest. He has not published many compositions, but this has been owing to an exaggerated self-criticism which did not permit him to print anything which was not in itself perfect and beyond all criticism. Svendsen spent his best years in Denmark as conductor of the Copenhagen Royal Opera. During all these years he remained a Norwegian at heart, and when, several years ago, he felt compelled to resign his position, broken in health and without any means of existence, he refused to become a Danish citizen, thereby losing a life pension which otherwise would have been granted him by the Danish government. The last years of his life were spent in great financial misery; but now that he has passed away all due honors will be paid him. The day after his death the Norwegian storthing was called together and in special session, upon motion of the prime minister, it was unanimously decided to have his body brought to Norway and his funeral taken care of at the expense of the state. According to his own desire he will be cremated and his ashes will be buried in Christiania beside Bjornson and Ibsen.

There have been many interesting events in sporting circles lately. First of all a Scottish football team came to Christiania and defeated the Norwegian players in two games, playing against two different Norwegian football teams. But the Christiania sportsmen got even when it came to the rowing contests, beating the English Agecroft club in two matches, one a four-oared, the other an eight-oared match. The weather was all that could be desired and the course in perfect condition. The two matches were well contestead by the Englishmen, who lost only by two or three boat lengths each time. Then came the German Turnverein of Berlin, who took part in the great national turn meeting at Stavanger a short time ago. The Germans proved splendid turners and covered themselves with glory and silver medals before leaving for their native land.

Norwegian soldiers do not have a great deal of liberty if the following item is true. It is reported that a proposition has been made by the Bergen brigade of the Norwegian army that the soldiers be allowed to visit the Norwegian capital during the summer maneuvers in Eastern Norway. Those supporting the proposition assert that it is the general practice in the American navy to let the sailors visit the cities throughout the course of the cruises and that such a practice would be very beneficial to the individual soldier. It is stated that in the case of a great many of the soldiers, this would be the only opportunity of their lives to visit their country's capital.

Says Harper's Bazaar: "A pretty little anecdote met us in Christiania lately. It seems that a quiet, tailor-made little lady went into one of the shops one day and bought a pair of shoes, and when the saleswoman asked her address, she replied: 'You need not deliver them. Just have them wrapped, if you please. My husband will meet me here and he will carry them.' And in a moment his majesty the king came in, took the queen's parcel and they walked out together as if they had never heard of the crown of Norway."

The dispute of the mine owners and miners over wages and conditions of employment culminated on July 8 in a lockout of 15,000 men at various points in Norway. If a settlement is not reached within a week 17,000 more employes will be shut out.

DENMARK.

The much advertised aviation meeting, when air men will make an effort to fly around the entire kingdom of Denmark, will soon be held and already the sum of 50,000 crowns has been collected for this purpose. The balloons and airships will start from Skagen, near Copenhagen, and the course mapped out for the circum-air trip will be via Fredrikshavn, Aalborg, Aarhus, Skanderborg, Horsens, Velle, Kolding, Middelfart, Odense, Korser and Roskilde. The flight may last three days, at any rate that is the limit set. The following aviators have sent in their applications to participate in the event: Paulain and Cozle of France and Swensen of Denmark. Other applications are expected.

The well known Hotel d'Angleterre, located near "Kongens Nytorl," has recently passed into the hands of a receiver. It was owned by a Danish English concern, and it is reported that O. Davidson of Gothenburg was a heavy stockholder in the company. It is reported on good authority that two more of the city's leading hotels are on a poor financial basis and a general hotel "krasch," as it is designated there, may soon follow.

Hans Freece a prominent anti-Mormon, who has been sent by a Christian American woman's society to deliver a series of lectures against Mormonism in European countries arrived in Copenhagen the other day after having visited England, Holland and Germany. Freece was born in Utah of Danish parents who were polygamists, he being the son of his father's second wife.

GOOD ROADS GOSPEL

DISCIPLES ARE THICK AS BUMBLE BEES IN A CLOVER PATCH.

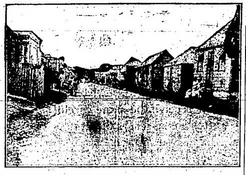
NOT ALL CALLED TO PREACH

Desire Is Strong, but Knowledge Is Lacking—Wonderful Progress in Campaign for Better Highways—Cut Out All Fads.

BY HOWARD H. GROSS.

If one looks carefully over the press clippings that come in upon the question of good roads, he will be astonished at several things.

First, the widespread interest that is taken in the subject. Better highways are being discussed everywhere—in the shop, store, the school, at the cross roads, women's clubs, grain exchanges, boards of trade, railway meetings, etc. The advocates of good roads are as thick as bumble bees in a clover patch. All sorts of solutions are offered, most of which are impracticable, and if undertaken would be simply a waste of time and money. It reminds one of the remark of a philosopher, who, after listening to a young lady of voluble conversation, said: "What a relief it would be if she would stop talking for a little while and do some thinking."



The above shows a good road leading out of Bridgetown, Barbadoes. Coolies live along the road. These usually work upon lands of the wealthy people. This road would do credit to any country in the world.

There are disciples without number who feel they are called to preach the gospel of good roads. They know little or nothing of the subject, but the desire is strong and impelling. It reminds one of the young divinity student with very little aptitude for the profession he proposed to adopt and from which the bishop was trying to disuade him because he regarded him as wholly inapt. The man maintained he was called to preach and therefore he was to obey the summons. The bishop asked him in what manner the call had come. He said he had had a dream in which he saw outlined in the heavens clearly in letters of white "P. C.," which he interpreted to mean to go and preach Christ. The bishop told him he had no doubt he had seen the vision as stated, but he had misinterpreted it, and that the letters "P. C." in his case meant to plow corn. It is so with the good roads advocates, many of them doing more harm than good.

The above view is from the Pitch Lake, Island of Trinidad, where we get asphalt for our street paving. The coolie is loading up his cart to haul the pitch to the docks. Other pitch gatherers can be seen in the distance.

One enthusiast, who has been much in evidence, is telling the people how they can get good roads without money. He might as well try to boost himself over a fence by pulling at his boot straps.

The good roads question is a tremendously big one and must be handled in a big way. No one can master the subject in a short time. The writer has spent 15 years digging into it from every angle and he feels that there is yet much to learn. Some good roads enthusiasts have proposed the building of great national highways connecting all the capitals of the states, or a great trans-continental roadway from Boston to San Francisco, or from Chicago to the gulf. Such roads would be tremendously expensive, and about the only thing that they could be used for would be as speedways for automobiles. These are not the roads that the public needs.

In the building of highways there are two great questions involved. One is the economic advantages to be gained from the transportation viewpoint, and this means good roads from the farm home to the market town over which the food supply of the world must be moved. The other question is one of the social and educational advantages that follow good road construction.

Fortunately it is true that the same highways that would give the largest returns from an economic standpoint, are the roads best suited to give the highest advancement. Hence the need is not these great, broad, expensive highways, extending hundreds of miles in any given direction, but a network of good roads, nine to twelve feet wide, covering the main highways of the country and centering in the market towns upon the railways. The wagon roads are the veins of commerce; the railways the arteries. The largest public good will come from such a condition that there will be a free and uninterrupted movement upon both the highways and railways throughout the year.

Among the economic advantages is that it enables the farmer to keep in close touch with the market and make his deliveries when in his judgment the best price can be realized. There is no doubt that a large percentage—the major portion—of the farm produce for the last 50 years in the Mississippi valley has been sold and moved with road conditions as the determining factor. It is, "Hooray, boys, we must get this grain to market because the roads are good" and not necessarily because the price is at its best. This hurrying of product to market swamps the railroad companies and they are unable to move the freight and enables the shrewd dealers in the city to manipulate prices, pushing them up or down, and to reap a rich harvest out of the farmer on the one hand and the consumer on the other. Colossal fortunes have been built up through the grain exchanges. The principal factor that enables them to do this is bad and at times impassable roads.

If good roads advocates will confine their talk and recommendations to the highways that will serve the people, and such highways as the people can afford to build, much greater progress will be made.

In some instances good roads can be built with gravel at hand at from $700 to $1,000 a mile. Where the gravel must be shipped some distance the cost will be double. When crushed stone is used and must be shipped by train, the expense will be anywhere from $3,000 to $5,000 a mile. Even at $5,000 a mile it would pay well to build good roads upon the highways, if it is done by the state aid plan.

Those who are objecting to the building of good roads advance objections that are found to be fallacious, upon a little consideration. The writer remembers one man who interrupted him during an address, and remarked that in some parts of the country they were building hard roads at a cost of from $8,000 to $10,000 a mile, and then said that their township had about 72 miles of highways and proceeded to show that the expense would be at $8,000 a mile to cover all the highways with this type of road. Upon a little inquiry it was disclosed that the roads in question were brick roads, built upon a concrete foundation—an excellent road to be sure, and such as it may pay to build where the traffic is very heavy and there is a large amount of taxable property to pay the bill—but these are not the roads that it is usually practicable to build. No township needs anything like 72 miles. The facts are that four-fifths of the traffic passes over about one-fourth of the road mileage, and it has been found the country over, at home and abroad, that when from one-fourth to one-third of the total mileage of the highways has been thoroughly improved, all communities are well served, and the good roads problem has been solved. A man may have a farm a mile from a good road, but if it is six miles to town, he can manage to get over this first mile, which will be a little used road, to the main highway, and if from there he can have a first class road to town, making up five-sixths of the distance, he will be well taken care of. The fact that he has five miles of good road and one mile of poor will spur him and his neighbors to put in the best possible condition this road of secondary importance. It has always been found that those opposing the building of good roads overestimate both the cost of the roads and the amount of mileage necessary, and it is apparently done with the studied purpose of trying to convince people that it is impossible to build good roads on account of the expense involved.

It has been demonstrated time without number that well built roads upon the main highways will pay for themselves every five or six years, treated from an economic standpoint alone, to say nothing of the educational and social advantages, and the pleasure and satisfaction of using a good road instead of a poor one.

The good road boomers should keep in mind some certain things that are fundamental.

First, that under our system of government no large amount of good roads can be built unless the farmers are ready to move in the matter, hence the farmer and not the automobile manufacturer or user must be first considered.

Next, that the question of road necessity has the economic, social and educational welfare involved in it.

Next, that good roads the country over need not cost $8,000 to $10,000 a mile, but through the central west they can easily be built at costs ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 a mile, depending upon local conditions. This price may be sometimes reduced by the use of convict labor in the preparation of material.

The farmer should remember that the building of good roads adds to the cash value of his farm more than twice as much and sometimes five times as much as the tax he will be called upon to pay to help build them. He should also remember that if the roads were uniformly good it would be much easier to get help upon the farm. The farm laborer could provide himself with a bicycle, which can be had a very small cost, and upon rainy days or Sunday he could go out and see his friends instead of being marooned by impassable roads.

The farmer should also remember that over good roads can be hauled two or three times as much produce as over bad roads. Taking average road conditions the year round, it is safe to say that if one were hauling over them every day in the year with the same expenditure of power, at least one-third more could be delivered and possibly twice as much over good roads as over the unimproved highways that are often in good condition, but very often bad and sometimes impassable.

In a magazine article the writer noted the following:

"A prominent southern farmer paid $400 for a pair of mules. He refused to pay $300 for a pair of smaller mules because the larger ones could pull 150 pounds more because of their increased size. He refused to vote a bond issue for good roads that would have enabled the smaller mules to pull 1,000 pounds more."

Thus in practice we often save at the spigot and waste at the bung. The need of the hour is to take up the good roads question in a big, broad way with a liberal spirit, and realize that the roads are a permanent asset to the nation, the state and the township, and that if they are well built and properly cared for, they will last for many years, and the expense of building the roads ought to be spread over 20 or 30 years, so as to let those who come after us and share in the benefits, help pay a part of the expense of building them.

Valuable information upon highway construction and good roads generally can be had by applying to the office of public roads, Washington, or to the highway engineer of the respective states.

Let the god roads advocates agree upon some sensible line of procedure and cut out all the fads and impossibilities and bring the proposition down where it belongs, and consider it in the light of local conditions, and advocate such roads as will give the largest return for the money invested.

It Seems Puzzling.

Recently in Pittsburg Mrs. Katherine Maxon-Smith-Baumgardner, reputed to be the wealthiest woman in Louisville, Ky., embarked on the matrimonial sea for the fourth time by becoming the bride of Carl Neumeyer, also of Louisville. The bride is said to be very close to eighty-three years of age and the groom somewhat over half of that. At somewhat the same time in Paris Mrs. Albert Clifford Barney, of Washington, who owns up to sixty-one winters and who is worth some $5,000,000, married Christian D. Hemmick, of Washington, who is twenty-six years of age. There are times when matrimony looks like maternal love.

An Uncertain Step.

"He has about the strangest walk I have ever seen." "Yes; you see, he was engaged to a girl who wore a hobble gown and just when he had got so he could keep step with her she threw him down, and now he is engaged to a girl who wears a harem skirt and he is trying to learn to keep time with her."—Houston Post.

A WORD TO THE GIRLS.

A little while ago there was a paragraph in this department directed to the class of young men who are interested in nice girls and have a hazy idea of some day asking them to share homes with them, yet who have not sensed the fact that it takes money to furnish a home. This week we have a suggestion or two for some of these same girls and others who may not have realized the fact that it takes something besides a stunning dress, a nicely adjusted rat or a popular air indifferently played or sung and moonshine to adequately meet the responsibilities which a young woman assumes when she becomes mistress of a home. The girl of today is not supposed to spin and weave, as did her great-grandmother, but she should know how to do neatly and well the plainer kinds of sewing. She should know how to make as good a loaf of bread as her mother (if her mother's bread is sour and soggy it should be a good deal better) and a pie with a light crust; should also know how to broil a steak and cook a roast or a boil. She should know something of the care of the sick and how to keep a little child well in hot weather. Then, too, she should realize that any man who is worthy of the name of husband takes just as much pride in seeing his wife neatly attired as when she was his sweetheart and, lastly, that a neatly kept home is the comfort and delight of a decent man, even if he does do a good deal now and then toward getting it out of order. In general it may be said that any girl who is a real help and comfort to her mother and who is serious and unselfish will in the course of things acquire a knowledge of these and other things which she most needs to know. On the other hand, the young man is to be pitied who, drawn to a girl by exterior and surface qualities, finds after they have set up housekeeping that she is lazy, careless, indifferent and sloppy in the way she gets herself up and in the care of the house. Homemaking in the best sense is a wholesome and delightful yet serious business. It requires the best that two young people can put into it, both the young man and the young woman.

SILOS IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

The Kansas Agricultural college directors have come to the conclusion that silos would be a real boon to the farmers in the western part of the state and with this idea in view will next winter build a silo on the state farm at Hays, Kan. A half section of land will be devoted to the experiment, and a practical farmer will be put in charge of the work with a view to demonstrating its feasibility for other farmers in the territory mentioned. Kaffir corn, milo maize, Indian corn and sorghum will be given a trial in the experiment. Some idea of the results to be expected may be gathered from some feeding tests with Kaffir corn ensilage last winter at the state farm at Eureka. Ten steers fed Kaffir corn ensilage, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made an average gain of 127 pounds each in a period of fifty-nine days, while another group fed the same length of time on dry shock corn fodder, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made a gain of but 114 pounds each. Not only did the Kaffir corn ensilage cost less than the dry shock fodder, but the steers which were fed on the former went on to pasture in the spring in much better condition. The silo will not only provide a succulent ration during the period of drought and short pasture, but it will make possible the securing of corn, sorghum or milo maize that is about to be burned up with hot south winds. The full results of this Kansas silo experiment will be watched with a great deal of interest.

FIRES REGULATED BY LAW.

The state of Connecticut has a law which in times of drought prevents a good many destructive fires. This provides first that no person shall kindle a fire upon public land without authority to do so nor upon the premises of another without permission of the owner or his agent. It also provides that no person shall kindle or authorize another to kindle a fire in his woodland unless all combustible materials for the space of six feet surrounding the place where said fire is kindled have been removed, nor shall any such fire be left until extinguished or safely covered. As is natural, perhaps, some farmers of the state think the law is an insult to their intelligence, others that the law is wisely drawn and tends to reduce loss from runaway fires.

ABOUT FISH.

Figures which have lately been collected show that one out of every 400 people in the United States fishes for a living; that the annual catch of this quarter million fishermen is 1,000,000,000 pounds, worth about $50,000,000. Capital to the amount of $75,000,000 is devoted to the fishing business, and of this amount $22,000,000 is tied up in vessels. In the production of fish Virginia leads with a catch of 378,183,328 pounds. New York is second with 228,092,285 pounds, while Alaska stands third with 162,326,900 pounds. In the matter of number of people occupied with the fishing business Maryland leads with 42,812. Virginia comes next with 20,376, Maine 16,966 and Massachusetts 14,353.

LIGHTS WILL SHINE SOON

Council Orders Dynamo Which Will be Attached to the Lumber Mill Plant.

Left Chicago Last Friday and Expected Light and Power Will Be on at Once.

Electric lights will soon shine again in Thief River Falls and the question of power which has been troubling many since the power station was forced to shut down, will be satisfactorily solved for the future. The council last week ordered a dynamo from Chicago which will be connected with the engines at the saw mill and will furnish power until the auxiliary steam plant is completed.

The order for the dynamo was telephoned in Friday and it was promised that it would be shipped by fast freight at once. A tracer will be sent with the dynamo to insure its going through the division points with the least possible delay. The time it will take for the dynamo to reach the city is estimated at between five and ten days, but it is generally thought that a week at least will be sufficient.

This dynamo is the same one the city rented last year when the river refused to turn the wheels any longer and there is no question but what it will be able to supply the necessary power. It is rented by the council with the privilege of purchase and may be used later when the city's steam plant is built. A base has been built for the dynamo in the mill and all necessary wiring done so that when the machine arrives it can be connected up and put to work in short order.

This also incidentally solves a problem which has been bothering the county fair officials for some time, that of what to do for electric lights during the Pennington county fair. Of course it would have been practically impossible to hold the fair without illumination but now that the question is settled the officials can bend their undivided efforts to make Pennington county's first fair the biggest and best yet.

During the past week the arc lights have been lit, being connected with the dynamo and gasoline engines of the N. W. Drainage Co.

To Dam River at Grand Forks.

A movement is on foot to construct a permanent dam in Red Lake river in order to provide an adequate water supply for Grand Forks and East Grand Forks. The question was discussed at some length at a recent meeting of the city council of Grand Forks, the Red River committee and other interested citizens.

The alarmingly small supply of water in Red Lake river made it necessary to take immediate steps toward providing for a shortage and Superintendent Lunseth was directed to immediately proceed with the construction of a temporary dam. The dam has been built this week and raises the water in the river about two feet, which is deemed adequate.

It was also suggested at the meeting that the city councils of East Grand Forks and Grand Forks arrange for the construction of a permanent dam so as to insure a sufficient water supply for all time to come, the expense of construction to be borne jointly by the two cities. No action in the matter has been taken by the council of East Grand Forks as yet, but is likely that the subject will come up for consideration at the next regular meeting.—East Grand Forks Valley View.

Pennington County Fair Next Week!

ALL READY FOR BIG FAIR

Large Crowd Expected to Attend Pennington County's First Fair Next Week.

Aeroplane Flights, Balloon Ascension, Horse Races and Many Other Attractions.

Everything is in complete readiness for the opening of the first annual Pennington County Fair and the tenth annual fair held in Thief River Falls next week, August 2, 3, and 4, and preparations are being made to entertain a large number of visitors from this and surrounding counties during fair week.

The officers of the fair association have worked their hardest and no time and expense has been spared to make this fair the best and biggest ever held in this section of the state. As previously announced, the leading feature of the fair will be the first appearance in this section of the state of an aeroplane. The machine was made by the Wright Bros., of world wide reputation, and will be in charge of an experienced aviator. Two flights daily will be given during the three days of the fair and the machine will be on exhibition for closer inspection at the fair grounds between flights. A balloon ascension every evening during the fair will be another big drawing card and will probably prove a rival in arousing interest to the aeroplane. Three big free attractions at the fair grounds including the "Dip of Death" and the famous Myer brothers in their juggling feats completes the list of chief free amusement features.

The horse races this year will be for horses of Pennington and surrounding counties only, professional drivers and horses being barred. The committee has offered $400 in prizes and it is understood that several horsemen from Red Lake Falls will come up and attempt to carry off some of the purses. Below is the program for the two days of racing and the prizes offered for each race. Each purse is divided into three parts 60, 25 and 15 per cent. No entrance fee is charged this year:

Aug. 3rd.

Farmer's Running Race ¼ mile	$25.00
100 yard foot race	10.00
Gentlemen's Driving Race (4 wheel vehicle) 1 mile	30.00
Boys' Bicycle Race ½ mile	10.00
2:40 Trot or Pace, 3 in 5, 1 mile	100 00
Automobile Race, 5 mile handicap	25.00

Aug. 4th.

Slow Race, ½ mile	15.00
Free for All, 3 in 5, 1 mile	125.00
Best Walking Team to Wagon, General Purpose or Draft Horses, ½ mile	20 00
Pony Race, 2 in 3, ¼ mile	25.00
Boy's Foot Race, under 12, 75 yards	5.00
Boy's Foot Race, under 15, 75 yards	5.00

Two ball games have been arranged for fair week, one with Red Lake Falls and another may be played. Besides the attractions at the fair grounds six street shows will be showing in the city with the giant "Carry-Us-All" which will provide plenty of amusement at all times.

An unusually fine lot of exhibits will be shown this year it is believed, and everything points to a most successful fair.

Oiling the Streets.

Work was started Friday covering the business streets of the city with oil. This is a new experiment for Thief River Falls, but one that will be highly successful if the experience of other cities in the state count for anything.

The streets and avenues which are being covered with oil are LaBree avenue from Bridge street to Fourth street east, Main avenue from Second street east to Fourth street east, Second street east from Main avenue to LaBree avenue and Third street from Main avenue to Horace avenue. If the supply of oil ordered is sufficient, Main avenue may also be oiled to Bridge street and Third street to the Soo depot. In applying the oil the city officials are closing the streets and keeping them closed until the oil is thoroughly soaked in. The crossings are covered with sand which prevents tracking of the oil. When the work is done, clean, dustless streets, that will shed water easily and will not need any more attention or sprinkling for a year is promised the city. If the oiling of the business streets of the city proves a success more oil will undoubtedly be used next year.

Cheaper Automobiles

The day when the automobile could be regarded as the vehicle of the rich and prosperous exclusively— or when, if owned by a person of moderate means, and employed otherwise than in some regular business, its possession was held to indicate spendthrift habits—is rapidly passing away. The multiplication of great establishments for the manufacture of automobiles has proceeded so rapidly, and the number of machines turned out by them annually has become so vast, that the "upper ten" in society can no longer afford a sufficient market for the product; and manufacturers are turning their eyes toward the "middle thousands". There, after all, in supplying the needs of the farmers and middle-class townsmen, they are to find, hereafter, their largest rewards.

One great multi millionaire corporation already announces for sale a "thoroughly capable" guaranteed car, rubber-tired, and "with a powerplant that will run 25,000 miles" for $350—a figure which approximates the cost of a good "horse and buggy" such as almost every farmer has looked upon as entirely within his means. It is practically certain that the rivalry between manufacturers will lead to the immediate offering of even better cars for the same money, or of similar ones for a lower price. The farmer, then, finds himself now the heir and beneficiary of one of the most beneficial and revolutionary inventions of the age. He is to be the beneficiary of all the experimentation which has been done, at the expense of the rich, in perfecting and developing the "auto". The "devil wagon", as he has been want to call the swift machine which scared his horses and made the roads so often unsafe for him, is transformed by the progress of manufacturing ingenuity into the vehicle of a good genius, with which—if he cannot, like Puck, "put a girdle round the earth in forty minutes,"—he can at least hie to his market town and get home again in minutes where it before took hours. It will also enable him to do an amount of pleasure traveling, independently of the railroads, such as was before a practical impossibility. It will also, by practically bringing the farm closer to the market—and by giving in many cases a choice of markets—tend greatly to increase the value of outlying farms.

It was entirely natural that manufacturers should first cater to the class having the most money to spend, and that they should bend their energies to the production of vehicles which would, from the pockets of that class for the time being, extract the largest prices. But now that they turn to "the market of the millions," they will find its opportunities incomparably greater than those afforded by "the market of "the select few."

Noticable Odor.

Citizens who live near the river below the dam have been complaining since the low water of the sewerage which flows into the river below the dam. The river bed there is practically dry and naturally the odor is proving disagreeable. Fortunately the weather has been cool the past week or so or it might have been worse. If the water in the river does not raise soon it looks as though the city would be up against another problem.

Red Lake to Have Fair.

Red Lake Falls Gazette: Red Lake County is to have a fair this fall, to be held in this city about the middle of September. The Red Lake County Agricultural Society has been organized and articles of incorporation have been filed. The purpose of the organization is to make the holding of a county fair an annual event.

The location for the fair grounds has not been definitely decided upon, but any one of several desirable locations can be secured and that matter is under consideration now.

Silos and Silage.

When Timothy hay is worth $7 per ton for feeding, good corn ensilage is worth about $3 per ton. The present indications are that hay is going to be scarce the coming winter, as the crop seems to be short in nearly all sections of the state. This will mean that hay will sell for a price considerably above the average, and will mean that all kinds of roughage will be worth correspondingly more. If timothy hay should be worth $12 per ton on the farm, good ensilage will be worth about $5.

The prospects for a corn crop were certainly never better in Minnesota than at present; and, with good cultivation and a reasonable amount of rainfall, an unusually good crop is assured. Likewise, the acreage of corn in the state is considerable more than ever before. If some satisfactory method can be provided for saving the immense amount of food that will evidently be produced in this corn crop, there will be no need for reducing the amount of live stock on our farms, and it will be practical to increase the amount on many farms. With these facts in mind, the Minnesota Experimental Station has no hesitation in urging every farmer who can afford to do so, to provide himself with some sort of silo in which the corn can be stored. The average cost of raising and storing silage on Minnesota farms, for the past several years, has been about $2.25 per ton. If from $3 to $5 worth of food can be secured, at a cost of $2.25, it makes a reasonable investment. Under present circumstances,—that is, a very evident shortage in the supply of other roughage in the state,—we believe that any farmer who has 20 or more head of stock will do well even to borrow money with which to erect a good silo, in which to store a portion of his corn crop, which will enable him to keep all of his stock and probably increase his herd; while, if he does not provide silage he will be likely too keep his stock very poorly, and will probably have to cut down his herd:

A silo that will hold 100 tons, which is a good silo for an ordinary farm, can be erected at a cost not far from $300. Interest on $300 is a small consideration when it enables one to keep well all of his live stock, or when the lack of such a structure means a reduction in the live stock kept, or at least a reduction in income from the stock. There are many farms, of course, on which it is not advisable to build silos at present; but any ordinary farm, on which enough live stock is kept to maintain its productivity, affords a condition under which the proposition to erect a silo should at least receive careful consideration.

Rules of the Road.

George A. Newett, editor of Iron Ore at Ishpeming, Mich., and an enthusiastic automobilist, writes the following on rules which should be observed by those driving automobiles and other vehicles.

"And again we wish to make the statement that the practice of driving automobiles and vehicles on the left-hand side of the road will lead to a bad accident some day. Also driving at high speed around curves will have its lesson. We also wish to state that when a driver of a wagon or carriage wishes to let an automobile get past him, he should keep well on the right hand side of the road, just the same as if he were meeting a car. We understand one of the teamsters of this city had an altercation with an auto driver a few days ago, insisting that the car should go by him on the right side when both were travelling in the same direction. He was wrong. The law as well as the generally-well understood rules of the roads, says so. Observing one's proper place on the highway will avert accidents, and sometimes accidents are most deplorable in their results."

WHO'S WHO ON BOARD

Claimed that D. P. O'Neil is Not a Member of the School Board.

Special School Election to Be Held August 4 to Fill the Vacancy.

Who belongs on the board of education of this city is a question that is bothering several people these days, placing some members of the board and others in a position where they did not know whether they are members or not.

At the annual school election held July 15, two members were elected to the board, Emil Zeh and Bernhard Knudson, Mr. Zeh defeating Mrs. J. M. Bishop, and Mr. Knudson winning without opposition. Now it is claimed that there were three vacancies to be voted upon instead of two and as Mrs. Bishop was the third person voted for, she is necessarily elected. The vacancy referred to is that which is claimed was made when D. P. O'Neil of the board qualified for a member of the legislatur Jan. 1, 1911. According to section 9 of article 4 of the state constitution no member of the state legislature can hold any other elective or appointive office except that of postmaster. Acting on this theory J. M. Bishop Monday filed with G. A. Penney clerk of the board, the qualifications of Mrs. Bishop as a member.

Another factor enters the situation, however, which renders Mrs. Bishop's election uncertain and has resulted in having a special election called to definitely settle the matter. That is the fact that the person who succeeded Mr. O'Neil on the school board would be elected for a two year term while all votes cast at the last election were for three year terms. Monday evening notices of a special school election to be held August 4, at 3 p. m. in the Central school building were posted about the city. These were issued in accordance with section 1317 of the revised laws of 1905, which states that when the school fails to fill a vacancy for ten days, any three voters of the district may call a special election. The voters signing this call are J. Berry, G. L. Sterns, J. M. Bishop, J. H. Johnson, Ole Peterson and A. B. Remmem.

Two Licenses Needed.

This year it will be necessary that every hunter who sallies forth for big and small game procure two licenses rather than one as has been permissible in past years. Executive Agent H. A. Rider of the game and fish commission has sent out notice to this effect. Each license, for residents, is to be procured at payment of a fee of $1. Licenses for the shooting of small game will be on sale by August 1 but it is required by law that those for the killing of big game be withheld until within three days of the big game season, Nov. 10.

10,000 More For Forest Aid.

Government money to the amount of $10,000 a year will be spent in the protection of the forests in northern Minnesota. An agreement between the state and the federal governments under the Weeks' law has just been perfected, and government foresters are already on the ground to take charge of fire protection at the Mississippi headwaters and other navigable streams. The government aid will mean much to this section, as dry weather is threatening a repetition of disastrous fires. State rangers will be concentrated, as they can be withdrawn entirely from the territory looked after by Uncle Sam's men.

Accidents and Suicides of Frequent Occurrence at Stockholm This Summer—Norwegian Lutheran Synod at St. Paul Largely Attended—Danish Government's Novel Method to Aid Baltic Fishermen.

SWEDEN.

There have been many persons who have drowned in Stockholm this summer. Bathers have been caught by cramps and many boats have been upset, causing much loss of life. There have also been a large number of suicides. The most sensational drowning occured a few days ago in the vicinity of Vaxholm, when August Anderson and wife, together with Elsa Anderson, a sister-in-law of Anderson's wife, were drowned. One of the women suddenly made a move in the boat, causing it to upset, and all three went to a watery grave. Another person, Johan Carlsson, went out to swim in the Lojviken and had only been in the water a few minutes when he was taken with cramps and sank. All efforts to locate the body have proven in vain.

Shortly before the 200 members of the "Deutche Flottenvereln" left Hotel Continental, where they had been making their headquarters for about two weeks, during their visit to Stockholm and environs, the leader of the party handed a check for 9,500 crowns to the manager of the hotel, which, on behalf of the company, he requested should be divided among the various hotel employes for services rendered. Naturally the waiters and others, who had been offering their services to the good natured Germans, felt highly elated.

According to rumors from St. Petersburg, Princess Maria's brother, Dmitrij Pavlovitsch, is in the very near future to become engaged to the czar's oldest daughter, Princess Olga. Prince Dmitrij is not unknown to the Swedes, having of recent years paid Stockholm a visit about twice a year. During his first visit he was but a mere boy; he is now twenty years old. His royal sweetheart is only sixteen years old.

Svedelius, the rising opera singer, who received much praise for singing at the Hof Opera in Berlin, will be retained at the Royal Opera in Stockholm for another year. An effort was recently made to have Mr. Svedelius sign a contract with the Berlin Opera, but the manager of the Royal Opera in Stockholm made him a better offer, so he will remain, much to the joy of music loving Stockholmians.

Queen Victoria arrived at Trelleborg July 1 and continued her journey to Stockholm the same day, via Malmo. She will remain at home for an indefinite period, but contemplates going to the Southern continent at no distant date, as she cannot stand the northern climate.

The engagement of Tor Hedberg, chief of the Dagmar theater in Stockholm and well known playwright, to Miss Stina Holm, daughter of the fire marshal at the royal palace, has recently been announced.

The question of a national monument has not been settled as yet and the committee which has charge of this work states that it will be a long time yet before it will be ready to give a formal report.

In the death of Albert Pallander, an associate editor of the Aftonbladet, the city has lost one of its ablest newspaper writers. He attained an age of fifty-nine years and during the past three years has been in ill health.

There are only thirty-seven horse cabs left in Stockholm. The auto taxicab has outclassed the old horse vehicles and soon they will be out of date completely.

Anders Zorn, the portrait painter, and Bonnier, the well known Stockholm publisher, have each subscribed 1,000 crowns to the Strindberg fund

Editor Kristian Winterhjelm, who since 1883 has been the Aftenposten's (Christiania) Stockholm correspondent, resigned from his position July 1.

Dr. Sven Hedin has been appointed corresponding secretary and member of Academie des Sciences in Paris to success Prince Albert of Monaco.

NORWAY.

Says the Lutheran church weekly: "For overcrowded conventions you must look to Norwegian Lutherans of the West. The Old Norwegian synod just closed an eventful session in St. Paul, Minn. One of the features of this convention was the renewed effort made to bring the United Norwegians and the Old Norwegian bodies together. A fraternal delegate from the former to the latter body seems to have kindled anew the desire to unite these two vigorous bodies, about 175,000 strong. Recent efforts in this direction were halted because of certain doctrinal differences that came to the fore. A fresh attempt to arrive at unity is now to be made and Lutherans generally will pray that it may succeed. In no section of our American church have divisions seemed more unnecessary and inexcusable than among the Norwegians, though it must be admitted that certain erratic tendencies in several smaller bodies are chiefly responsible for these divisions. These Norwegians know how to sing. They have brought with them to this country the old Norse love for music and St. Paul witnessed one of the most successful concerts ever given in that city. A Choral union of 1,000 voices, with such special talent as Mme. Norelli, soprano, and Adolph Olsen, violinist, among the number, and Luther College Concert band to assist, rendered what was a most worthy attempt to make religion speak through the harmonies of sound."

A Swedish workman who has lived for many years in Norway has been arrested in Stockholm as a spy. He tried to sell information about the Sarpsborg fortress to a Swedish official living at the frontier, whom he had several times asked for money. The official finally refused him financial assistance, whereupon the man went to a Socialist paper and said that he and the Swedish official were both spies. The editor of the paper delivered him over to the Norwegian police. The most interesting feature of the affair is that the Norwegian Socialist journalist was patriotic enough to hand over to the police a socialistic workman and fellow-thinker.

Christiania will be the first city among Scandinavian cities and capitals to have an underground street railway. The government has just made concessions for building an underground street railway from the center of the city to the city limits, where it will connect with the electric line for Holmenkollen, the famous Norwegian amusement resort.

A Viking drinking horn, which was found some years ago in the Viking mounds near Hardanger and which passed into the hands of an English relic gatherer from London, was purchased for the "Kunstindustri-museum" in Christiania a few days ago for £300. Thus the old Viking horn has been returned to its native land.

Owing to the strike in Christiania and other coast cities the Wilson Steamship company has been compelled to discontinue its traffic for the present. The Wilson steamers ply between Swedish and Norwegian coast cities and England.

The Christiania dog show was a great success this year and was attended by a great many people. The managers are well satisfied and the attendance at future dog shows gives promise of being greater than ever.

Tourist traffic in the so called "Vestlandet" has been very brisk this summer. The largest number of tourists on record have visited this section of the country this season.

DENMARK.

The Danish government, under the direction of its biological station at Copenhagen, has begun an interesting effort to aid the fishermen of the Baltic by preventing the migration of eels from that sea into the ocean. The means employed is a barrier of light, formed by placing fifty electric lamps along a submerged cable between the island of Fano and the coast of Funan. The effectiveness of such a barrier depends upon the fact that the eels migrate only during the dark hours. Accordingly, as soon as darkness begins in the season of migration, the lamps are illuminated and thus a wall of light is interposed from which the eels recoil. A similar principle is said to have been employed from time immemorial by fishermen on certain parts of the coast of Italy.

A delegation of thirty Russian farmers have for a month or more been visiting different parts of the country to study agricultural and dairy conditions in Denmark. They have expressed their great surprise at what is done in the dairy line in Denmark and have expressed their earnest desire to introduce Danish farming and dairy methods in Russia, if possible.

One of the Social Democratic party's most trusted men in the vicinity of Copenhagen, Rasmus Olsen, skipped the country the other day after having stolen 14,000 crowns from the treasury of the Ljungby-Gentofte Workingmen's union. In a letter to his wife some time ago he confessed that he had used the money for speculating and gambling.

The Socialist members of the city council of Copenhagen are advocating with much vigor the erection of tenement houses by the city. There is a dearth of houses and lodging places in the Danish capital and as private capital cannot be induced to fill the want the Socialists insist that it is the duty of the municipality to do so.

The Russian czar and czarina departed from Copenhagen June 25 aboard the Standart, accompanied by the battleship Polestjernan and a number of torpedo boats. Their visit to Copenhagen was marked by a number of festivities given in their honor at the royal palace.

Time was when cows needed their horns for self protection, but under modern domestic conditions they are useless and often dangerous appendages. The best and easiest method of dehorning is by the application of some caustic potash to the germ of the horns when the calf is a few days old. After the horn has got a good start the job must be done by saw or clippers. Many a dairyman hesitates to dehorn his cows because of the harmful effect he thinks it will have in reducing their milk flow. However, this is likely to be overestimated. A test made at the Kansas Agricultural college in a herd of twelve cows with a view to determining the shrinkage as a result of dehorning showed that in the five days prior to the operation it gave 1,142.5 pounds of milk, while in the five days following it gave 1,100. pounds, or a total shrinkage for the twelve cows of 40.8 pounds. This amounts to sixty-nine one-hundredths of a pound of milk per cow each day, or about half a pint. On the fifth day after dehorning all except two of the cows were giving as much milk, and a few more than they did the day before their horns were removed.

Rye and vetch make an excellent cover crop for an orchard in all sections where there is need of a growth to catch the winter snow. It should be sowed at once.

A few years ago the bite of a mad dog was equivalent to a death certificate, but today, if the patient is given the Pasteur treatment in time, not one case in a dozen proves fatal.

Typhoid fever may be contracted by drinking water containing the germs, also by bathing in streams at a low stage of water which have been contaminated by sewage.

The enormous total of 76,034,675 barrels of cement was the output of mills in this country last year, being an increase of 10,000,000 barrels over the production of the year before.

Records are usually interesting: hence the performance of Jumbo, a frog in charge of the Lincoln park zoo in Chicago, is worth giving. Not long ago tab was kept on the frog, and it was found that in a period of one hour it devoured 266 flies.

In a baking test made lately in Hutchinson, Kan., it was found that one barrel of flour made of the best grade of Turkey hard wheat made 324 one pound loaves, while a barrel of average good wheat made 302 loaves of similar weight.

It is questionable which sort of neglect is the more cruel, leaving a horse for hours without a blanket on the village street on a cold winter day or hitched to the same post without a fly net in July or August when the mercury is crowding the 100 mark.

Through the middle west, where on July 4 early potatoes were retailing for 75 cents a peck, it will be entirely proper to serve murphies in cut glass dishes with the best silver in the house. Here's hoping that taters will get down to a queensware basis before snow flies, but at the present writing the prospect isn't particularly flattering.

Good horse sense and just a fair regard for sanitary considerations would seem to suggest to all retailers of fruits, as well as to the housewife who gathers fruit from her own garden, the wisdom of covering fruit when thus exposed with mosquito netting to keep off flies that may have come to it direct from barnyard, cesspool or dead animals in the neighborhood.

The proposition that thousands of those living in the drought belt from the ninetieth meridian west have been up against has been a soil so dry that field and garden seeds sowed in April have not yet germinated. In some of these sections there seems to be sufficient moisture beneath a six inch dust mulch, but unfortunately the seeds were put in above this level.

Some poultry specialists in the employ of the Connecticut experiment station have proved quite conclusively that germs of white diarrhea, which is a most destructive poultry disease, trace their origin to the mother hen, being transmitted by her to the eggs which she lays; hence at hatching time the little chick has the germs in its own system. This announcement does not offer much along the line of possible prevention, but is welcome because it is definite and gives a basis on which to make further progress.

Within the last year or two the alfalfa weevil has become a serious menace to the growers of this legume in Utah and some other mountain states. In making search for some means for keeping the pest in check the department of agriculture learned that in Italy there was a natural parasite of this particular weevil. Accordingly agents of the department were sent to Italy and a supply of the parasites shipped under cold storage to this country, and they are now being distributed in the sections infested with the weevil. Naturally, results will be watched with great interest.

As showing the great need that exists of keeping sources of milk supply and the conditions under which it is handled as nearly germ free as possible, may be cited an instance which has come to light recently in Englewood, a Chicago suburb, where thirty four cases of typhoid fever have been traced to the milk of a dairyman who supplied their wants along this line. Going further back the health authorities traced the typhoid germs to the dairyman's daughter, whose duty it was to wash the milk cans, and who was found to be a typhoid carrier as a result of an attack of the disease three years before.

THE SHOSHONE LAND OPENING.

On June 23 just past the United States' government opened to homestead entry a choice tract of land in the famous Big Horn basin of Wyoming under what is known as the Shoshone irrigation project. Two units or sections of this project have already been settled, and water is now ready to be delivered to the third. The section just opened, which includes some of the most desirable land of the entire project, is located near the town at Ralston, and none of the farms is more than a mile from the railroad. Several hundred families have already located on the project, and those who are successful in getting a farm will have all the advantages of a well settled region—schools, churches, progressive stores, banks, etc., and good markets and railway facilities. The dam which stores water for the project is the highest in the world, completely blocking the course of the Shoshone river, and provides an ample water supply for all needs. While the price (cost of the water right) of this land was not stated in the notice which was generally published, it is quite likely in the neighborhood of $40 per acre, payable in ten annual equal payments without interest. These conditions put the lands in the Shoshone project within reach of any man of moderate means and determination who wants to get a home of his own on the land. The small amount he would have to pay annually on the investment, four or five dollars per acre, would be but a fair rent for the use of the land, and he could make these annual payments and more in growing small grain, alfalfa and other crops suited to the climatic conditions prevailing. Full information about this project and the exact terms on which the land may be secured may be got by addressing the United States reclamation service, 802 Federal building, Chicago, Ill.

JUST GRUBBING.

Too many folks who do not have to do so spend most of their time and most of their life "just grubbing." We here refer not to the class that are handicapped financially and are compelled to grub, but to a very large class that have more acres than they need, big red barns and bank accounts, yet who, in spite of this, delve and toil, deny themselves recreation, outings, holidays and not only the luxuries but many of the comforts of life. They forget that life is not measured by what one is able to save or to squeeze out of it, but by what it is possible to contribute and put into it. They seem to overlook the fact, too, that it does not take so very many years of this "just grubbing" to put a crook in one's back, take the elasticity out of one's step and dwarf or entirely extinguish one's capacity to enjoy things. More than this, they have at best but a few years here and will be a long time dead. So why scratch and scrimp and hoard and deny oneself wholesome food, decent clothing and a share in life's good things that are really worth while just to get title to a little more land and to a bigger bank account when the whole works will be left for heirs to divide or squabble over? There are a whole lot of fools outside of asylums for idiots and the feeble minded, and some of the biggest in the category are those who put in most of their lives "just grubbing."

SOME ARGUMENTS FOR IT.

The writer does not remember a season in a good many years when so many conditions seemed to urge the wisdom of installing silos all through the corn belt. In the first place, owing to the shortage in the hay crop, roughage of most every kind is likely to be high priced. Again, it is possible that many fields in the drought afflicted sections will be short in ears and that to realize what one ought from the whole corn plant it should be put into a silo. It is patent that this fall, if ever, it will be the height of folly to allow 40 per cent of the value of the corn plant to bleach and go to waste in the fields. Of course it is better if the corn is cut than not, but it is better put into a silo than put in shock and exposed to uncertain weather conditions. One of the strongest arguments in favor of installing a silo now, before the 1911 corn crop is ready to shred, is that it will provide a succulent ration during the winter months and next summer, when there is a possibility of just such a dry spell as we are now having. The job of filling the silo can be cheapened as well as simplified if three or four neighbors install them and unite in the purchase of the equipment used in shredding and filling.

A LATE SUMMER CROP.

In many sections where drought has prevailed during the past two or three months there are many gardens that will not yield a sufficient return to pay for plowing and seed, saying nothing about hoeing and cultivating which has been done since. In spite of the fact that it is late in the season, a portion of the garden may be made to give a return if one will sow turnip seed between now and Aug. 1. The soil may be very dry when the seed is sowed, but the first good shower will germinate them and a nice crop will be harvested in the late fall, if enough rain falls. We remember sowing turnip seed in this way on the site of an old strawberry bed, and sold from $12 to $15 worth of turnips in the fall. It was in a season much like this when potatoes were very high priced.

SCOTCH SHEEP DOGS AT STATE FAIR

Combined Entertainment and Instruction by Champion Dogs and Sheep Farmers.

Brought Direct From Scotland for Their First Appearance in America at Minnesota Exhibition.

Real Scotch sheep dog trials, in which the competitors will be champion Scotch collies, and their owners, the United Kingdom's most famous sheep farmers, will be a big attraction of the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. Six dogs and three shepherds will be brought direct from Scotland for the occasion.

The trials, which are an important feature at all the big agricultural shows in England and Scotland, will be seen for the first time in America at Minnesota's big fair next September. The event will be a feature of the afternoon program every day during the fair and the announcement of it has already aroused more than unusual enthusiasm.

JOHN JOHNSTONE.

Appreciating the value as an attraction of the sheep dog trials Secretary J. C. Simpson, after much correspondence and continued efforts, has succeeded in completing arrangements for bringing to the Minnesota State Fair, John Johnstone, James Scott and Mr. Robertson, three of the best known and most successful sheep farmers in the United Kingdom. These men with six dogs all of which have won many prizes for the handling of sheep, will start for this country next month and will be in Minnesota during the six days of the fair and perhaps longer. Two of the dogs are international prize winners.

The trials will be conducted every afternoon during the fair. They will be given over a course eight feet wide and about a half mile in length, to be laid out on the fair grounds. The starting point will be on the hill near the agricultural buildings and from there the course will lay across the track through gates, back and forth through the center field and will end in pens in front of the grandstand.

JAMES SCOTT AND KEP

Throughout its length the course will be marked only by short flags. Over this course a flock of sheep, probably three or four in number, will be driven by each dog in turn. The expired time of each trial will not be more than twelve minutes and during that time the collie will have to drive his sheep over the entire course and pen them. During the performance of his dog the shepherd remains in one position, usually about the center of the course. A large part of the way he is out of hearing, but always in sight of his collie. He directs his course in various ways, some times by a shout or whistle, but more often merely by a motion of his hands.

CARLTON AND WIFE ARE FREE

Acquitted of Alleged Murder of Latter's Aged Father.

Lloyd Carlton of Bemidji, accused of the murder of Peter O. Neste of Farris, his father-in-law, was acquitted by a jury at Park Rapids after it had been out but twenty minutes. Mrs. Carlton, jointly accused with her husband, was dismissed previously for lack of evidence.

Judge McClennahan had instructed the jury that they could bring in a verdict of murder in either of the three degrees or for manslaughter. The instructions placed emphasis upon the right of self-defense, which had been entered by Carlton as a special plea.

The defense tried to show that Neste was a man of violent temper and that the alleged crime was committed in self-defense during one of these [illegible].

The state submitted rebuttal evidence [illegible] to show that the old man was seventy-two, that his hands were crippled with rheumatism, that for two months before his death he lived principally upon milk on account of stomach troubles and that he was in a very feeble condition.

Entered at the postoffice at Thief River Falls, Minn., as second class matter.

Don't forget to attend Pennington County's first annual fair next week. Bring your family and give them a chance to see man's newest and most wonderful invention, the aeroplane.

The Bemidji Pioneer says that the only thing the matter up to date with our representative, "Dan" O'Neil is that he will insist upon living in Thief River Falls. If that is the worst they can bring up against him, we will be willing to stick with "Dan" for some time.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

Canadian reciprocity which passed the Senate Saturday by the vote of 53 to 27, is now up to the Canadian legislature and if passed by them will go into effect immediately. Canadian authorities however, have stated that the measure is almost certain to be adopted in the Dominion.

This measure has occupied the public eye to a great extent the past few months and has been a matter of keen debate especially in states like Minnesota which border on Canada. The Twin City and Duluth papers have been unanimously in calling reciprocity a great piece of constructive salesmanship which will greatly benefit the nation and the northwest, while the country press has been almost unanimous in condemning it as a crime against the farmer. To predict in advance just how the measure will act, would require a very wise or rash man, but since its operation seems a certainty we can at least hope for the best. There is little doubt that railroad activity will be greatly increased and Duluth and the Twin Cities will become more important shipping points. On the other hand, it is declared that its passage has been discounted in the wheat market months in advance and were it not for reciprocity wheat would now be 15 to 20 cents higher. At the present time it is quoted as around 92 in Minneapolis with crops a practical failure in southern Minnesota, South Dakota and parts of North Dakota. While it is hard to compare two years until the harvest is over, it does not seem as though there is the difference between this year and last when wheat ranged between $1.00 and $1.25, that would account for a difference of 15 cents or more in the price of wheat.

At present it looks as though we would have to grin and bear it, although if reciprocity means the opening wedge for genuine tariff reductions which will help the farmer as much as the people in the city, the present injustice may be overlooked. Anyway the Red River Valley can congratulate itself upon having a bumper crop this year which will help some whether reciprocity goes into effect or not.

Rural School Notes.

The blanks for taking school census in the districts are sent out this week. The blanks are delayed because they were not received from the printer. Time will be saved in a large measure in this office if this matter of school census is completed at an early date. The reports must be made by Sept. 1. School Clerks will kindly remember to forward the annual reports, see that items and figures are correct and that receipts and disbursements balance. It will save sending reports back for corrections.

Respectfully submitted,

Will Distribute Old Clothing.

The Salvation Army will gladly accept old clothing to distribute to those who are in need.

The past week we have had a number of calls for men's clothing. If any one has old clothing that they would like to dispose of, especially men's clothing, let us know and we will give out the garments to those who are in need.

Capt. W. L. Estep,
Officer in Charge.

Line up for Land.

Cass Lake, Minn., July 25-Twenty five men and women took positions to-day in front of the United States land office to await the date or filing on large tracts of land which will be ready August 21. Nels Erickson, a resident of Cass Lake county holds position No 1, and the other numbers are held by residents of different sections of the district.

A party of fifteen or twenty from the Canadian border towns of Beaudette and Spooner are in line, eagerly watching the opening. When they arrived they stated that several hundred would be in line shortly from that district, and they wanted to get the lead. A number of waiters have built tents near the land office and will occupy them at night and during the day will hold places on chairs outside the office door, as they have done heretofore.

While the sudden appearance of seekers was not unexpected, it was not expected so soon. As it is, these land seekers will be obliged to wait for almost a month before they will be able to get a filing on the particular piece of land they have in view.

Two Burglaries.

Sometime between Saturday night and Monday morning some one entered Dr. G. A. Penny's dentistry offices and stole gold and tools valued at $100. It is believed that the work was done by professionals. Dr. Penny left his office for a short time Saturday and it is thought the robbery may have been effected then. The door was not broken in or any evidence of violence found. Over $25 in currency lying in a drawer near the gold was untouched by the burglars.

Monday night two boys, Christ Moore and a lad by the name of Lundahl, aged 10 and 11 years, broke into Ed Iverson's hardware store on Main Avenue. Entrance was effected through the back way, the boys breaking a large window pane. Tuesday morning, Chief of Police Lang who suspected the boys, took them in charge and secured a confession. The goods taken from the store were, three rifles, several boxes of cartridges, a whip and a small amount of cash from the till were found hidden in different parts of the city. The boys will be arranged today before Judge Bishop and it is probable that one at least will be sent to the reform school at Red Wing.

A Tribute to the Press.

James Gray, democracy's candidate for governor last fall, recently made an address at Devil's Lake on the subject of "The Press and its Place in Modern Civilization," in which he referred in glowing terms to the newspaper.

"We hear that the press is commercialized," said the speaker after tracing the history of the institution from its inception; "that it bows to the power of money and is the ally of reaction. This charge against the press rests on an insufficient foundation. It is refuted every day by the very newspapers which are so charged. There are venal newspapers as there are venal lawyers and dishonest business men, but the press is not venal. There are corrupt newspapers, but the press is not corrupt. There are reactionary papers, but the press is not reactionary. It is intellectually progressive. It has thrown off the shackles of the party. It is no longer an organ. The press has never been freer or more responsible than it is today, and it never performed its function of instruction, amusement and counsel as well. The charge of commercialism arises from the fact that the newspaper is a private, a personal and independent enterprise. The subsidized newspaper exists, but it does not reach the people."

Economies of the Harvest.

It is possible for careless help to leave a considerable portion of the grain crop in the field by neglecting to gather up scatterings, loose bundles. etc., and by hauling grain on open-bottom racks.

From a few pounds to a few bushels of grain may be saved every day, during stacking, by using a tight-bottom rack, or a canvas over the rack that will catch all the grain that is shattered out of the heads. In seasons when the grain shatters daily, a surprisingly large amount of grain can be saved in this way.

Beat the Drummers.

The game that the Indians had scheduled with the Red Lake Falls team for last Sunday was not played on account of the heavy rains of Saturday night which kept the Red Lake County team from driving up here. A team composed of traveling men of the city was gotten together, however and played an interesting game against the locals losing to them 5 to 2.

The director of the dairy department of the Kansas Agricultural college has recently published the following recipe for keeping flies off horses and cattle in hot weather: Dissolve two cakes of laundry soap in warm water and add one and one half pounds of rosin and one half pound of fish oil and boil until the rosin is thoroughly dissolved. Then add enough water to make three gallons. Apply to animals with brush or spray pump at the rate of about half a pint of liquid to each animal three times a week until the coat is pretty well covered with rosin. The fly pest can be still further reduced in the stables by putting dark coverings over the windows and pieces of slit gunny sacking in the doorways through which the animals must pass in going to their places.

Tried by Fire.

Minnesota is going to be tried by fire again this year. Let us hope for a better result than that of the last two or three years. After the strenuous public agitation and the considerable response to it by the legislature another failure to control forest fire would be most disheartening.

Forest fires are breaking out in Michigan, under circumstances that point to the old murderous neglect of railroads and timber companies, the same slothful and callous indifference to the lives and property of humble individual settlers on the part of the state. Minnesota has been partly lifted out of that ditch by energetic and persistant agitation.

The legislature has has done something, though it might have done more. We have a state forester of alertness and energy as well as training. He has the disposal of about half as much money as the department asked for. More could not be spared from the legislative jackpot. He has more rangers and guards than any previous forester.

Best of all, we trust he has the nerve to make the necessary deficiency in his department in time to prevent destructive fires instead of vain fighting of them after they get out of hand. We should like to see any legislature call him to account for this, in the light of past warnings and the neglect of them.

As far as the plain citizen can judge, the preparations for fire control this year are admirable, but they will be judged by the result.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Rural Road Improvement.

There is a disposition on the part of people in both city and country to improve the public highways. Men who are at home in the cities are of the opinion that large sums of money will be required to build good roads in the country, hence, the demand for appropriations in cash, from the state, county and township and private subscriptions for this purpose. Money is required to build large bridges and should be invested in establishing grades and purchasing material for such, as cement, crushed stone, sand pits, etc.

Money that is appropriated by special tax from the various townships is quite sure to be used in an economical manner, but this is not always true of that obtained from the state and county. In fact, the best roads in the county are found where the township or village as a unit is at work determined to maintain serviceable road beds and neatly kept highways, regardless of state or county aid. We believe home cooperation and determined effort will result in building and maintaining more good roads than anything that has been done on the part of the state or county.

The season for road making is at hand. Every man in the country, village and city should make it a strenuous effort to interest his neighbors in building roads and maintaining the public highways, so that they will be serviceable for drives and heavy loads and, at the same time, appear inviting to strangers as well as the home people. The split log drag is the cheapest and most serviceable road maker that has ever been used in the Northwest. Earth roads are kept in excellent condition during the entire summer where the split log drag is used occasionally to smooth the surface, fill ruts and maintain the grades so that they will shed water rather than become running streams in wheel tracks during heavy rains. Every farmer should own and use a split log drag on the roads about his premises after every heavy rain.

Mrs. Bryant a Candidate

The candidacy of Mrs. D. K. Bryant of the east side for a member of the school board at the special election to be held August 4 to fill the vacancy caused by D. P. O'Neill being a member of the legislature was announced yesterday. The people of the east side feel that they should be represented on the board and have united on Mrs. Bryant as their candidate. It is understood that Mrs. Bishop is also a candidate for this office.

Kittens are generally viewed as cute and harmless pets for little children, but the truth is that they are among the worst germ carriers we have.

Praties may go out of sight as a result of the drought, but there is reason for comfort in the thought that there is a better crop of apples in sight than for a number of years.

A section of wire netting makes a fine trellis for Champion of England peas, and also a good perching place for the grosbeaks that like to shell and eat the green peas as a relish between rations of potato bugs.

There is no profit whatever in keeping hens of the "star boarder" type through the molting period for the few eggs they may lay in the fall. They should be converted into toothsome stews or shipped to market.

A musty old rat is an uninviting morsel to the family cat when she has had her appetite aroused with two or three juicy young birds, and it is quite natural that she should pass the former up when the latter are to be had.

The aim of the designers of women's dress styles seems to be to make them so outlandish in style that it will be impossible to make them over into anything that it would be safe to wear outside the back yard. Surely the women are deserving of pity!

Post timber felled the last week in July will outlast two cut during the winter months. The reason for it seems to be that it has a chance to dry out thoroughly before being set in the ground. In any event a year should elapse between time of cutting and setting.

The habit some animals, old and young, have of eating dirt is usually due to the fact that some mineral element is not present in sufficient quantities in the ration which they are getting. Where such tendency is noticed bran or other bone forming feed should be furnished; also salt and an abundance of pure water.

Evidence a-plenty is forthcoming to show that the presence of cedar trees in the vicinity of apple orchards is a prolific source of the cedar rust which has done much damage during the past year or two. Little help has been derived from spraying, and the only way to keep an orchard free from the disease is to cut down all red cedar trees in the neighborhood.

Stock that is not used to eating alfalfa have to learn to like it the way some folks do olives and lobsters. On the farm of a friend, who was growing a small patch of the legume for the first time, the farm animals had the range of this alfalfa, clover and some timothy and blue grass. It was interesting to notice that while the alfalfa was the most nutritious forage available, the stock ate everything else before they would touch it.

While birds like the robin and brown thrush never build or rebuild their nest in the same place during the same season, the writer has noticed with much interest that a pair of the latter have built a new nest in the same syringa bush as the one from which they led a brood of little ones about four weeks ago. Wrens, on the other hand, will rebuild their nests in the same place and will do it the more quickly if all the old nest material is removed.

A gang of sharpers have been "working" a number of old soldiers and soldiers' widows in Kansas lately. The grafters posed as representatives of the government who were introducing a new electric belt (price only $100), which they guaranteed would give long life and happiness, and they augmented their sales by promising that the government would increase the pensions of all purchasers. Just so long as suckers of this type run around loose they are bound to get caught.

There are two or three points in the artificial watering of gardens that it is well to keep in mind. One of these is that water should be put on growing vegetation only in the evening or early in the morning. Applied when the sun is shining brightly, it is likely to scald and kill garden stuff. Another point worth keeping in mind is that unless watering is kept up systematically during dry and heated spells it is often worse than no watering at all. And, lastly, it is important to remember that a frequent stirring of the surface soil, which will bring up subsoil moisture, is preferable in every way to an application of water without cultivation.

A pound of raisins, cured with special reference to eating out of hand, costs at retail 15 cents. Not only are they an appetizing ration, but from the standpoint of nutritive elements they compare favorably pound for pound with meat and eggs at the same price.

A Vermont farmer who has tested the method for twenty years, reports in an eastern farm journal that he has successfully killed willow trees, root and top, by removing a two foot girdle of bark the latter part of August. For many readers who have had trouble killing these hardy trees this suggestion is worth remembering.

Good profits may be made in dairying and fruit raising; but, if reports are to be credited, the easiest money is made by a big army of sharks and grafters who make a business of farming suckers, the class of folks who are always hotfoot to get something for nothing, the crop of which seems perennial, like quack grass, mumps and fleas.

The low form of vegetable life that makes the green scum in water tanks may be done away with by dissolving copper sulphate in the tank at the rate of one two-hundredths of a pound of the chemical to a hundred gallons of water. This chemical is poisonous and used in larger quantities than this would be injurious to the stock drinking it.

Conditions point to a record breaking cotton crop for the year. The area planted is 35,004,000 acres, as compared with 33,418,000 last year, while the condition of the crop as reported June 1 was 87.8 of a normal as compared with 82 per cent for the corresponding period in 1910 and 80.9 per cent, the average condition for the past ten years.

While the growth of timber of the hardwood varieties is usually a mark of a fertile soil, it cannot always be relied upon as indicative of the character of the surface soil, as the roots of many trees penetrate deep. But where one finds clover growing naturally the evidence is quite conclusive that the soil is rich and also that it is sweet and does not need liming.

An experiment made recently by the department of agriculture for the purpose of testing the shrinkage in corn in storage showed that 28,000 pounds of shelled corn kept under ordinary conditions for a period of 147 days lost 1,070 pounds, or about 7 per cent, as a result of evaporation of moisture. Weighings made at frequent intervals showed that the corn gained in weight in wet weather and shrank correspondingly in dry.

A lot of farmers who do not live in territory usually termed semi-arid have been confronted with a pretty stiff dry farming proposition this year and out of it all may learn something that will stand them in good stead in the years to come. One of these lessons is the advantage of a very thorough preparation of the seed bed for small grain, also the harrowing of small grain to break the crust after it is up; secondly, the distinct advantage of a frequent and careful tillage of such crops as corn and potatoes.

The writer has seen some pretty effective execution done within the past few weeks with one of the guillotine or terror rat traps. Cheese, grain or a piece of meat makes excellent bait, but a small piece of bone with gristle attached and tied to the tongue of the trap is perhaps the best bait of all. Care should be used in setting the trap, for a blow that will break a rat's back or crush its skull is apt to break the bone of one's finger. While the campaign is being waged the traps should be attended to daily, baited at night and emptied in the morning. Moreover, the traps should be placed so that neither kittens, chickens nor children can have access to them.

A number of state experiment stations are now offering courses in poultry management especially designed to fit men who desire to go into poultry farming for themselves. Among practical lines taken up are feeding, the use of incubators and brooders, anatomy and physiology of poultry, marketing various poultry products and poultry judging. There is little question that it would be time and money well spent for those planning to take up poultry raising on an extensive scale and possessing no previous experience to take just such a course. They would be able to secure instruction from experts and acquire experience in the business without the heavy losses that often accompany the early efforts of novices who take up the poultry business.

July and August are pre-eminently the two months in which that joint rooting, drought defying pest, crab grass, gets in its work, often counteracting and rendering futile most of the good hoe and cultivator work done during May and June. It is fortunate that crab grass is an annual. This means that the root does not live through the winter and that to exterminate it all one needs to do is to keep it from going to seed. It is hard to overcome, for the reason that it makes most of its growth in corn, potatoes and other cultivated crops after they have been laid by; hence to get rid of it one must wage a persistent fight from now on by pulling and hoeing so as to keep any seed from maturing. This will require a lot of persevering work when the sun beats down hard, but the reward will be a clean garden next season.

KEEP THE BOYS ON THE FARM

Exhibit at the State Fair Will Teach You How to Do This.

If you want to know how to build the best home for the farm and to make that home so attractive that it will be a pleasure to the adult members and keep the boys and girls on the farm you can learn all the details at the Minnesota State Fair.

A new and what will undoubtedly be a very popular and helpful exhibit of the 1911 fair will be a model farm home. This permanent exhibit is being prepared and will be shown under the auspices of the Minnesota State Art society. It is intended to give practical as well as artistic ideas to the prospective home builder. It will be helpful in many ways.

In all the details of construction, in every variety of practical and artistic furnishing and in the best pictures and books the home will be a model and those in charge will give valuable information on all subjects that pertain to making a home attractive.

GREATEST FAIR CROWDS.

All Indications Point to a Half Million Attendance and Comfort Will Be Provided for All.

Every preparation is being made for the care and entertainment next September of a greater crowd than ever before attended the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. A large number of additional park seats, new drinking fountains, comfort stations, a rest hospital and nursery have already been provided for.

The sidewalks on the main avenues have been widened and a number of the streets and street corners have been so graded as to care for greater crowds. Additional ground has been given the street car company at their central terminals and this space will greatly increase the company's facilities for handling the immense crowds that are expected.

The Agricultural society has purchased nine [illegible] adjoining their present railroad tracks and unloading platform and these will be increased in number at [illegible]. Fences and buildings on the fair grounds are being repaired and painted. A new building is being erected that will connect the woman's building and [illegible]. Several new structures for machinery exhibits are being built on Machinery hill.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TO KEEP UP WAR ON PACT

Meeting of Farmers Called for Sept. 6 at the State Fair Grounds at Midway.

A meeting of farmers to voice their sentiments against the reciprocity bill recently passed by congress has been called to meet at the institute hall at the state fair grounds Sept. 6 at 2 p. m. The call for the meeting is made by P. V. Collins of Minneapolis in an editorial in his paper, the Northwestern Agriculturist. Just what the meeting will do, now that the bill has been passed, is not stated, but the editorial intimates that they propose to stir up sentiment against those who advocated the bill.

Mr. Collins was active in getting up the meeting held in the old capitol at St. Paul some months ago to protest against the bill and headed a delegation that went to Washington to appear before the senate committee that considered the bill.

LUCKY MAN PASSES AWAY

Worth Ten Million Through Ownership of Mine Site.

James McCahill, Duluth mine owner and millionaire, died at his summer home at Lake City after a long illness, aged fifty-eight. Mr. McCahill has not passed much of his time in Duluth for several years and usually spends two-thirds of the year in California.

He was a carpenter and building contractor in the early days in Duluth up to the early nineties, when he traded a piece of Duluth real estate, valued at about $1,500, for 160 acres of land on the Mesaba range.

This quarter section happened to be what is now known as the Shenango iron mine. It contained more than 40,000,000 tons of iron ore and the royalty to Mr. McCahill of 25 cents a ton easily establishes his wealth at around $10,000,000.

NEW RULE IN GAMBLING CASES

Money Can Only Be Recovered From Party Who Won It.

Money lost at gambling cannot be recovered from the keeper of the place or the owner or lessee of the building in which the gambling takes place, but must be recovered, if at all, from the person that won the money.

Such is the decision handed down by the state supreme court in the case of John W. Nagel against Edward Randall and others of Minneapolis.

Mr. Nagel sued to recover $1,500 alleged to have been lost playing poker in a gambling room conducted at Minneapolis in a building owned by Randall.

INQUIRY ON PANAMA CANAL

Clapp Curious About Overtime and Longevity Pay on Isthmus.

Senator Clapp of Minnesota has reintroduced in the senate his resolution of inquiry as to overtime pay and longevity pay alleged to be due employes on the Panama canal. It was first presented last January, but not acted upon. It also inquires whether the circular of March, 1910, signed by Colonel Goethals, with reference to men discharged from South American railroads, was a prohibition of work to citizens of the United States.

Charge of Bribery Made.

The first direct charge of bribery in the present hearing at Minneapolis of the petition for the removal from office of the board of commissioners of Hennepin county appeared when attorneys for Alfred Stringer, the petitioner, filed amended charges, part of which accused Commissioner C. M. E. Carlson of accepting $750 for his vote for C. J. Minor as county supervisor of taxes.

Rusty Shell Cause of Shooting.

Iver Osander, a young man living near Fergus Falls, took down an old shotgun and endeavored to extract a rusty shell. The shell would not come out, so he stood up and pounded the gun on the floor. This discharged the weapon and the charge tore a hole through Osander's chin and face and carried away a part of his brain, killing him instantly. He was twenty-four years old.

Mangled by a Binder.

Joe Nadratoski, a farmer living near Barnesville, met a frightful death while harvesting in his field. Nadratoski had climbed down in front of the binder to adjust the blades when the team became frightened and started, throwing him onto the blades and mangling him under the binder. He leaves a widow and five children.

Minnesota Bank Statistics.

In ten years the number of state banks has increased from 194 in November, 1900, to 712 on June 7, 1911, and the resources have increased in these banks from $29,952,946.74 in 1900 to $129,574,307.31, according to data compiled by State Immigration Commissioner George Walsh.

FAVORS FEDERAL CONTROL

Wickersham Talks About Corporations in Address at Duluth.

Control of corporations by a federal commission instead of the present method wherein varying state laws make difficult obedience to the law was urged by Attorney General George W. Wickersham in an address before the Minnesota State Bar association at Duluth.

Mr. Wickersham pointed out the difficulties of the problem. He declared more regulation is necessary. He was not ready to say that the federal commission, for which he argued, should be given control over prices, although he pointed out that there is little difference between regulation of transportation charges and a reasonable supervision of commodity prices.

The laws of supply and demand, he declared, do not fix the price of staple articles in the United States. Those prices have been fixed too long by agreement of the producers, he said, leading him to the conclusion that in theory the creation of a federal commission to regulate prices is advisable, but that practical obstacles in the way of such procedure practically are insurmountable.

The attorney general declared himself in favor of federal incorporation as a step necessary to control the monopoly evil. He argued against intercorporate stock holdings whereby one company is able to own a controlling interest in another and asserted that with federal incorporation and supervision business affairs could be conducted to the benefit of the public and the satisfaction of the commercial world.

BOOK COMPANY LOSES SUIT

St. Paul School Board May Change Text Books at Pleasure.

The St. Paul school board has won its fight with the American Book company in the matter of the change in geography text books made last January.

The state supreme court, in a decision written by Justice George L. Bunn, affirmed the decision made some months ago by Judge William Louis Kelly of the Ramsey county district court.

It is held that the statutes governing the actions of trustees of common and independent school districts do not apply to the St. Paul board of school inspectors, the state law being inconsistent with the provisions of the city charter.

The St. Paul school board is therefore not bound in its action by the state law providing that text books be adopted for a period of not less than three nor more than five years.

TO OPEN MINNESOTA LANDS

Settlers Must Pay $1.25 an Acre for Cut Over Indian Tracts.

Cut over Indian lands in the northern part of this state or lands from which timber has been cut, approximating 191,847 acres, will be thrown open to entry Aug. 22 under instructions signed by the first assistant secretary of the interior.

Although open to homestead entry settlers will have to pay $1.25 an acre for the land, which is situated in the Cass Lake and Duluth districts.

Roosevelt Writes on Retarding of Progress in Alaska.

New York, July 23.—Theodore Roosevelt has an article on the development of Alaska in the last issue of the Outlook. He declares two factors to be responsible for retarding progress in this direction: "Great capitalists who wished to 'develop' Alaska by making enormous fortunes for themselves outside of and in defiance of the law," and the congressmen who "under pretense of hostility to the corporations, decline to permit the passage of legislation which will enable them to do their work honestly and to develop the coal fields with a fair profit to themselves, while doing justice to others."

Washington, July 23.—Chairman Dillingham of the senate committee on privileges and elections has appointed Senators Heyburn, Sutherland, Bradley, Bailey and Paynter as a sub-committee to suggest what recommendation shall be made to the senate on the request for an investigation of the election of Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin.

Senator Clapp, a Republican progressive member of the committee, asked to be excused from service on the sub-committee.

Washington, July 25.—Declaring that the attack made upon him before a congressional committee by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor left him no alternative but to proceed with the trial to the end Justice Wright of the District supreme court reiterated his refusal to certify the contempt cases of the three labor leaders, Messrs. STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Government money to the amount of $10,000 a year will be spent in the protection of forests in Northern Minnesota. An agreement between the state and federal governments under the Weeks law has just been perfected and government foresters are already on the ground to take charge of fire protection at the headwaters of the Mississippi and other navigable streams. The government aid will mean much this season, as dry weather is threatening a repetition of disastrous fires. State rangers will be concentrated, as they can be withdrawn entirely from the territory looked after by Uncle Sam's men.

Hans August Larson of the township of Linsell, in Marshall county, says that he has invented perpetual motion mechanism and has sent his application for a patent to the patent office at Washington. By the use of gravity and a siphon Mr. Larson believes that he has found a combination for a successful water motor and he places the value of his invention at nothing less than $10,000,000, as he says it will supplant both steam and electricity as motive power in the near future if it works.

The Minnesota State Bar association's meeting at Duluth closed with the election of officers. C. A. Severance of St. Paul was elected president, John G. Williams of Duluth was elected vice president, Royal A. Stone of St. Paul was re-elected treasurer and Charles A. Farnham of St. Paul was re-elected secretary.

Papers have been served in a sensational damage suit for $10,000 by Julia Schachtschneider of Duluth, against her father-in-law and mother-in-law, Otto and Gusta Schachtsneider, for alienation of the affections of her husband. The defendants are prominent and well to do residents of Otter Tail county.

Every veteran of the Civil war who presents himself at the gates of the state fair when the big show is on this fall will be admitted free. Last year there was a day set aside for free admission of veterans. Every day will be free to them this year.

Four hundred and twenty-five double loaves of bread, the largest quantity ever seized in Minneapolis at one time, were confiscated by John E. Lyle, milk and bread inspector, for lack of tags showing the weight, as required by the city ordinance.

Alonzo Whiteman, a former Minnesota state senator, has returned to his home at Danville, N. Y., after having completed a term for check forging. Whiteman ran through a fortune of more than $2,000,000, most of it being spent in New York and Chicago.

The Socialists, who had made a strong campaign, were defeated in the school board election at Virginia.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

William Hendricks, superintendent of the cement works at Russell, was killed one mile south of Amiret when his automobile upset. He was found pinned under his machine, with his head crushed. He was alone in the car. The tracks indicate that he ran off the grade, righted the auto, ran off the other side, again righted the car, and the third time the car upset.

The jury in the case of Sivert Simpson, on trial at Crookston charged with the murder of Theodore Nelson last February in the bedroom of Simpson's wife, returned a verdict of manslaughter, recommending the prisoner to the mercy of the court.

While Peter Skougland, his wife and some neighbors were crossing the Rat Root river bridge on the railroad track Skougland stumbled against a rock and fell into the river, knocking his head against a boom stick. He was instantly killed.

A four-year-old son of Bert McCuen, living on a farm east of Faribault, had both of his feet severed from his body when he fell in front of a harvester which his father was driving. The child died a few hours after the accident.

The lifeless body of Stanley W. Manning, for nearly six years superintendent of the St. Paul fire alarm telegraph, was found at the base of an electric pole at the state fair grounds. Death was caused by electrocution.

Mrs. Nan Mealey is dead at Duluth from burns she received while lighting a fire with kerosene oil. She was forty-nine years old.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Frank Hoxie Waterman, widely known and universally popular in Minneapolis for the past seventeen years in business, club and social circles, died suddenly after an illness of a few weeks' standing, which had not been considered alarming.

Arthur B. Farnham, founder of the business of the Farnham Printing and Stationery company of Minneapolis and for twenty years a Minneapolis resident, died last week in Atlantic City, N. J., aged forty-three years.

Chris Syverson, president of the Glyndon Mercantile company and owner of Syverson hotel, is dead. He was a Clay county settler of the seventies.

Allen D. Libby, seventy-eight years old, a pioneer resident of South Minneapolis, is dead. Mr. Libby reached Minneapolis from Maine in 1856.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A disastrous conflagration raged for hours in Stambul, the ancient part of Constantinople, and assumed such proportions that it could not be checked. The flames ceased only when there was practically nothing left in their path to destroy. The disaster was the greatest since the great fire in Pera, the European quarter, in 1870. Five square miles of the city were devastated, 5,000 buildings being destroyed.

The house of lords passed the third reading of the parliament bill, otherwise known as the veto bill, without division, after only three hours' debate. The revolt of the insurgent peers failed to materialize. All threats of the extremist lords to throw out the bill at this stage and precipitate a crisis proved a bluff. One solitary peer raised his voice to demand a vote, but found no support.

Emperor Francis Joseph opened the Austrian reichsrath with the customary ceremonial. The speech from the throne emphasized the necessity for the immediate reorganization of the army to make good the deficiency of the past and to keep pace with "the development of military forces which is progressing rapidly everywhere."

The Haytian revolutionists are marching on Port au Prince, the capital. The situation of the government is critical. President Simon, who is disheartened by the reverses of the government troops at Fort Liberte, is seriously ill with pulmonary trouble.

Scenes of wild disorder marked the session of the house of commons. Half a dozen times Premier Asquith rose to move consideration of the lords' amendments to the parliamentary bill and each time he was howled down by a terrific din.

"Permit a vote to be taken in parliament on reciprocity or we will take a vote of the Canadian people on it without delay," is the ultimatum Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed to the Conservative opposition in parliament.

Owing to the fact that the roots of alfalfa plants penetrate the soil to a great depth, it is more than likely that in time they would clog any system of drain tile that might be laid within six or eight feet of the surface. Better is it to sow alfalfa on only that land that is naturally well drained.

It is the comparatively small number of weeds that mature their crop of seed unmolested after the crops in which they grow are laid by that furnish the supply of weed seed for the following year. A little work from this on will rid the garden of the weeds and greatly reduce the weed nuisance for another year.

The white grub, the larval stage of the familiar June bug, is a hard pest to contend with in a piece of ground which is devoted to a tilled crop. However, they can be very effectually cleaned out of a piece of ground which is being prepared for a crop by turning in a bunch of hogs that consider the grubs a juicy treat and will sometimes root the soil up to a depth of a couple of feet to get them.

The progressive sheep raisers of Australia have adopted a new method as a preliminary to shearing their sheep. Instead of clipping the wool, dirt, grease and all, as is the quite general practice, those who have plenty of water for the purpose scrub, wash and clean their sheep just before shearing. As a result they are saved paying freight on dirt and grease and also realize the highest prices for their fine, clean wool.

It is to be hoped that in the near future some broad minded and influential member of congress will secure favorable consideration for a bill which will protect migratory or interstate birds. That there is need of this is shown in the statement recently published that in the state of Georgia alone last year 75,000 of our northern meadow larks were slaughtered to satisfy the greed of a lot of pothunters, who probably realized from 8 to 10 cents a dozen for the birds.

In the construction of a silo it is well for those planning to install them to keep in mind two or three weak points to be found with the wooden or stave structure. One of these and perhaps the worst is the shrinking of the staves in dry weather and the swelling in wet, necessitating an adjustment of the metal hoops to correspond; another is the likelihood of the structure being overturned in windstorms, while a third drawback is that the wooden structure cannot be made airtight so easily as those of brick and hollow blocks and is not so warm.

Morning glories can be given an effective backset by plowing the soil infested by them to a depth of about six inches not later than Aug. 1. Of course land that is raising a tilled crop could not be handled in this way, but in small grain stubble this plan would be very effective. It would mean that the shocks of grain would have to be thrashed at once or put in the stack. Plowing the morning glories at this time hits them when a maximum of the plant's energy has been sent into the vine and proves so great a shock that the few plants that survive can be muckled with a tilled crop the following season.

Again this season, as was the case last, many a small fruit grower in the drouth afflicted states could have saved or greatly increased his output of fruit had he been equipped with an irrigating plant of some kind with which to supply moisture to his growing vines and bushes when the clouds failed to yield their usual refreshment. It will cost money to install such a plant as the one referred to, but if one is engaging in the fruit raising business on an extensive scale it should be viewed in the light of necessary insurance, the benefit of which will represent a handsome interest return on the money required to install it.

SCOTCH SHEEP DOGS AT STATE FAIR

Combined Entertainment and Instruction by Champion Dogs and Sheep Farmers.

Brought Direct From Scotland for Their First Appearance in America at Minnesota Exhibition.

Real Scotch sheep dog trials, in which the competitors will be champion Scotch collies, and their owners, the United Kingdom's most famous sheep farmers, will be a big attraction of the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. Six dogs and three shepherds will be brought direct from Scotland for the occasion.

The trials, which are an important feature at all the big agricultural shows in England and Scotland, will be seen for the first time in America at Minnesota's big fair next September. The event will be a feature of the afternoon program every day during the fair and the announcement of it has already aroused more than unusual enthusiasm.

JOHN JOHNSTONE.

Appreciating the value as an attraction of the sheep dog trials Secretary J. C. Simpson, after much correspondence and continued efforts, has succeeded in completing arrangements for bringing to the Minnesota State Fair, John Johnstone, James Scott and Mr. Robertson, three of the best known and most successful sheep farmers in the United Kingdom. These men with six dogs all of which have won many prizes for the handling of sheep, will start for this country next month and will be in Minnesota during the six days of the fair and perhaps longer. Two of the dogs are international prize winners.

The trials will be conducted every afternoon during the fair. They will be given over a course eight feet wide and about a half mile in length, to be laid out on the fair grounds. The starting point will be on the hill near the agricultural buildings and from there the course will lay across the track through gates, back and forth through the center field and will end in pens in front of the grandstand.

JAMES SCOTT AND KEP

Throughout its length the course will be marked only by short flags. Over this course a flock of sheep, probably three or four in number, will be driven by each dog in turn. The expired time of each trial will not be more than twelve minutes and during that time the collie will have to drive his sheep over the entire course and pen them. During the performance of his dog the shepherd remains in one position, usually about the center of the course. A large part of the way he is out of hearing, but always in sight of his collie. He directs his course in various ways, some times by a shout or whistle, but more often merely by a motion of his hands.

VOL XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1911 NUMBER 32

WELCOME TO THE FIRST PENNINGTON CO. FAIR!

MILLIONS FOR GOOD ROADS

At Good Roads Meeting at Bemidji last Week Plans were Made for Northern Minnesota.

Will Start Construction of Road from St. Vincent to Duluth via Grand Forks at Once.

One road directly from St. Vincent to East Grand Forks and on to Duluth, cutting through the towns of Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Erskine, Bagley, Bemidji and the Cass Lake reservation, was decided upon as the crowning feature of the good roads meeting held in Bemidji last week characterized by Chairman C. M. King of Deer River as one of the most important gatherings ever assembled in northern Minnesota.

Advised by Senator J. T. Elwell, who came from Minneapolis, that under the provisions of this bill funds can be obtained, the spirit of "do-it now" was so pronounced that the campaign launched anticipates the ultimate expenditure of ten millions in the construction of a network of highways cutting through the forests and extending over all of the northern half of Minnesota.

It was decided that immediate work on the St. Vincent-Duluth highway should be started. It will be a judicial road, which means that instead of the cumbersome process of applying to all the counties involved, petititions for its construction may be secured from the district judges.

Other trunk roads were considered and selected, although there was not information enough at hand to make definite conclusions. There will be one from International Falls to the Twin Cities, to follow the Minnesota & International railway to Bemidji. There will be a slight detour at Big Falls to Itasca Park and St. Cloud. A Moorhead-to-Duluth route will also be considered at a meeting to be held soon at Hinckley.

The meeting was addressed by Senator James T. Elwell of Minneapolis, author of the bill, which makes possible the undertaking.

Elwell declared that, although Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth assume more than 60 per cent of the state's share of the road-building burden, no complaint has been made, because the larger cities feel that the rapid settlement which will follow the building of good roads will react to their benefit.

E. M. Stanton of this city, county attorney of Pennington county, told Senator Elwell that he believed the supreme court must pass upon the constitutionality of the law before it ever could become fully effective, as the sale of bonds under its provisions would be endangered until all technicalities have been removed.

Senator Elwell replied that a member of the supreme bench had advised him that it was proper for the residents of the districts affected to proceed as if there was no question about the legality of the law.

The actual plans for the elaborate scheme of roadways were perfected by the good roads committee which met in the afternoon and then adjourned, reconvening after the close of the public meeting. This committee is made up of C. M. King, Deer River, chairman; F. A. Green, Stephens; D. P. O'Neil, Thief River Falls; Chris [illegible], Cass Lake and John S. Pardee of Duluth, secretary.

Domestic Superstitions.

The signs and wonders of the household have markedly diminished in the last quarter century. Many of them were picturesque and diverting. Few of them were taken seriously enough to be harmful.

It is easy to trace several of them to their sources in domestic economy. A group of them, for example, had to do with the approach of an unexpected guest. The scissors or a knife sticking up straight in the floor, a dropped dishcloth or a long, floating stem in a cup of tea—all these foretold arrivals. They had the agreeable double effect of keeping the housekeeper up to a high mark and of breaking monotony by the pleasure of anticipated society. If the prophesied caller followed the dropped scissors the sign received an increased authority. When the promise failed the promise was promptly forgotten.

Another group of superstitions rests upon the thrifty habits of former times. To pick up a pin brought good luck. To neglect to snuff a candle until it wasted by the "weeper" was sure to involve misfortune. An overabundance of tea-grounds in the cup spoke of careless measure, and so threatened debt. A second helping of food before the first was eaten foretold of an undesirable beggar.

The woman's mind if left to itself turns naturally to believe the make-believe. A housewife likes to pit her unreason against her reason. The mere act of absurd illogic gives variety and charm to an otherwise dull forenoon of housework, and nobody is the worse for stretching the arm of immagination to include a little mild superstition of the old-fashioned sort.—Youth's Companion.

Canada to Vote on Reciprocity.

Ottawa, Ont., July 29.—The eleventh Parliament of Canada passed out of existence today, and upon the political complexion of the new one to be elected September 21 will depend the fate of the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada.

As the House does not sit on Saturdays there were only a few members at the Parliament buildings when the action was announced. In both Liberal and Opposition rooms the news was received with cheers and the members hurried away to telegraph their political workers that the campaign was on.

Practically every member will have left the capitol by tomorrow and the campaign on the reciprocity issue will begin all over the dominion early next week.

The announcement of dissolution today came somewhat as a surprise, as few persons expected it before next week at the earliest. The absolute refusal of the Conservative minority in the House to close the debate on the government's reciprocity resolution and permit a vote upon it, which would mean its adoption, resulted in the government's decision that it was useless to keep Parliament sitting another day.

Although all the supply or appropriations for the year have not been voted, the government figures that it has funds to suffice until the assembly of the new Parliament, which will be summoned to meet October 11.

It is generally agreed that the two months campaign before the country will be vigorous and even bitter. Reciprocity will probably be the sole issue, although the Conservatives in Quebec may seek to inject the naval issue into the contest. The anti-annexation cry already has been raised by the Conservatives in all parts of the country.

Should the present Liberal government be returned with anything like a working majority it will mean that a vote can be taken on the reciprocity resolution and that the trade agreement will go into effect. A conservative victory at the polls means the passing of the Laurier government and the permanent shelving of the reciprocity pact.

HARVEST IN FULL SWING

Farmers Commence Cutting Enormous Wheat Crop This Week.

Rye and Oats Harvest Finished last Week—Many Binders Sold.

The harvesting of the Red River valley's great wheat crop commenced this week and from present indications the crop will be safely cut and stacked.

Last week finished up the last of the rye and oats harvesting and this week the farmers commenced cutting the biggest crop of northwestern Minnesota. Though reports from the southern part of the state indicate that the hot weather and the lack of moisture has been disastrous for the crops, conditions in this vicinity have nearly been ideal and old settlers say they have never seen the crops looking better than this year. If the present crop is threshed without accident it will be one of the greatest advertisments this section of the state has ever received and just what is needed to bring the settlers to the undeveloped land. The marketing of this crop at the present prices of grain will mean a year of prosperity for the farmers and this section of the state in general and will increase building and other activities along all lines.

As an evidence of the heavy crops and the prosperity of the farmers, the fact may be mentioned that it is estimated by those who are fully in touch with the situation that between 75 and 100 binders and threshing outfits will be sold in this city this season.

Broke Into Station.

The Great Northern station was broken into last Thursday night and about a dollar's worth of pennies and a small express package were stolen. Axes were used to effect an entrance and the station was gone over thoroughly although little is missing. It is thought by the police to be the work of boys.

Special Train Goes Through.

Accompanied by a bodyguard of detectives and a dozen servants, a special train carrying William Rockefeller, present head of the Standard Oil Co., passed through the city Saturday afternoon on the Soo bound for Winnipeg. Great secrecy surrounded his movements but it is thought he is going to the Canadian Rockies for his health.

LIGHTS SHINE ONCE MORE

Dynamo Arrives From Chicago and Electric Light Service Started Monday Night.

Expected that Lights Will Lessen Robberies of Past Two Weeks

After being over two weeks in darkness that was only slightly relieved by kerosene lamps and candles, the electric lighting system was put in operation Monday night and Thief River Falls looked like her old self again. If the plans of the city fathers go through, the city will not again revert to darkness, the present intention being to run the dynamo until the steam plant is finished.

The dynamo which was shipped from Chicago arrived in the city Friday and was taken at once to the saw mill. It was first thought that it could be in operation Saturday night, but the necessary connections could not be made until Monday. The dynamo is only being run nights at present and it is not thought that day service will be inaugurated until the proposed steam plant is ready to run. The running of this dynamo including cost of fuel, freight and rent makes it an expensive preposition for the city, and probably the greatest item of expense will be the fuel.

The lighting of the city again is also expected to greatly lessen the number of burglaries and robberies which have occured rather frequently since the lights have been off. Fortunately none of them have been of a very serious nature and the police consider them mostly the work of boys or of loafers passing through town. Considering the excellent opportunities offered in the past two weeks for crime, Thief River Falls can consider herself very lucky there was so little real damage done while the lighting system took a vacation.

Some Early Valley History.

The Breckenridge Telegram is publishing some Red River Valle yhistory in connection with the anniversary celebration at Abercomie and the following items will be of interest;

George Winship crossed the Red river in the fall of 1863 and it was so dry that he did not get his feet wet when crossing.

The first job of threshing done in the valley was at McCauleyville in the year of 1866 in David Mc Cauly.

From 1864 to 1870 David McCauley was the leading business man in the valley. In 1867 he was owner of the first steam sawmill in the valley and was proprietor of the first store that dealt in general merchandise.

"Forty years ago the Red River valley was as wild as nature made it. Today it is famed throughout the world and is the best wheat growing country."

The fact that the Red River could be crossed in 1863 without wetting one's feet indicates that there was some painfully dry weather in the northwest along about fifty years ago.

May Open Tow Mill.

The Union Fiber Co. is making an effort to reopen their local mill this season, and if a manager can be secured will start this fall. The mill was run two years ago but owing to a drop in the tow market was shut down last year. If started the mill will provide a local market for the flax.

"No Extra" Says O'Neill.

"The big cities pay the taxes and people pay the freight, and that is why I am not in favor of an extra session of the Minnesota legislature," said Representative D. P. O'Neill, here to attend the Good Roads meeting last night, to the Pioneer.

"I have a letter from the Duluth Evening Herald asking me what I think about an extra session. I am going to write them I don't. The cities do pay a large part of the taxes and would be hit hardest by the cost of reconvening the legislature for no real purpose, but the fellows in the country pay the freight, and if we hurt the railroads they will shoot the freight rates up all right."

Mr. O'Neill explained that he did not believe that in any event could there be any valuable legislation enacted at a special session.

Senator Elwell, here from Minneapolis, likewise doubted the advisability of reassembling the legislature, the strongest call for such an action coming from the Duluth paper which urges railroad legislation to counteract the three cent passenger rate.—Bemidji Pioneer.

Why Not Hold It Here.

There has been considerable newspaper discussion of the proposition of organizing a district fair association embracing the counties of Marshall, Roseau, Kittson, Polk, Norman, Mahnomen, Red Lake and Pennington counties. The idea is to hold an annual fair that will fittingly portray the marvelous resources of the northwest counties to prospective settlers. We believe the idea is a good one and if an agreement can be held in turn at the county seats of the counties embraced in the proposed district, there is no doubt that the scheme will meet with the hearty endorsement of the people of the several counties.—Middle River Pioneer.

Raising the Standard.

The Cloquet Independent recently suspended publication for want of support, and Cloquet, a city of about 8,000 people, now has but one newspaper. The tendency these times is to have fewer and better newspapers. The cost of getting out newspapers is tremendous, especially creditable sheets, and there are many places not a hundred miles from Grand Rapids where the killing off of incompetent and inconsequental sheets would have a tendency to lighten the burdens of both the publishers and the newspaper ridden public—Itasca County Independent.

Special Election Tomorrow.

Tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Central School House a special election to fill the vacancy on the board of education caused by D. P. O'Neil being a member of the legislature will be held. Mrs. D. K. Bryant and Mrs. J. M. Bishop are the candidates for the position. Considerable interest has been aroused in the city over the election and it is predicted that a large vote will be polled. Friends of both candidates are claiming the election and it is probable the election will be close.

May Have More Fires.

State Forester W. T. Cox arrived in the city Saturday from the northern part of the state where he had been investigating conditions as regards to forest fires. Mr. Cox stated that the only region in danger at present is that north of Lake Superior which has had little rain this year. The rest of the northern part of the state which suffered from the severe forest fires last fall has had enough rain to remove the danger, although if a dry spell should come bad fires might result on account of the unusually rank vegitation this year.

FAIR OPENS AUSPICIOUSLY

Thief River Falls Entertaining Large Crowd at Annual County Fair.

Aeroplane Proves Big Attraction—Horse Races Today and Tomorrow.

The first annual Pennington County fair and the tenth annual fair held in Thief River Falls opened here yesterday morning when the fair ground gates were opened and the crowd poured into grounds to view the exhibits and witness the numerous amusement features. While the first day is usually the lowest in point of attendance, if yesterday can be any criterion the fair this year promises to be the best and most successful ever held in Thief River. A large crowd was on hand in the morning to witness the aeroplane flight and the three free attractions provided on the fair grounds. The aeroplane promises to be the leading feature of the fair and chief magnet for the crowds. All the flights were watched breathlessly and while not in use it was inspected by many curious ones from close range. The balloon ascensions every evening are proving as popular as ever and as usual are witnessed by large crowds.

Today and tomorrow will prove the big days of the fair however, and the attendance is expected to double over that of the first day. This afternoon and Friday the program of the horse races will be run off, and some close contests are expected. Owing to the excellent crops this year the exhibits are looking unusually good and aside from the amusement features the affair should prove a big success as an ad for the newly organized Pennington county.

When the fair grounds closed in the afternoon there was plenty to amuse the crowds in the evening in the city. The street shows commenced their harvest while the merry go rounds, dances and other amusements gave the visitors a run for their money.

Everything considered the fair promises to be a huge success, the first fair held in Pennington county and what ought to develop into the largest and most important fair held in Northwestern Minnesota.

Crookston Auditorium Burns.

Fire believed to have been incendiary destroyed six frame buildings in Crookston Friday night, including the auditorium, at an estimated loss of $30,000.

The fire broke out at 9:30 and was under control inside of an hour. As many people left their homes during the excitement caused by the fire, it is feared there were several burglaries committed. Most of the buildings destroyed were old frame structures, being among the pioneer buildings, and many believe the fire will prove a benefit in the long run, as modern, up-to-date structures will probably be erected on the ruins.

Lock Your House.

Chief of Police Lang requests the people of the city to be especially careful during the fair to lock their houses when away from home. A number of undesirable citizens usually are attracted by fairs and carnivals and attempt to pick up some small change while the honest citizens are enjoying the sights. The police will double their precautions during the fair but of course they cannot be everywhere at once and householders are requested to exercise ordinary care themselves.

For the first year in a score or more Irish potatoes from New Jersey are being shipped west in large quantities to north central states. The almost total failure of the early potato crop in the Mississippi valley, coupled with a retail price of $2 per bushel, are the conditions which have induced the shipment of the eastern product.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

State Treasurer Walter J. Smith has reported that the total receipts from the inheritance tax in the fiscal year ending June 30 were $453,225. Of this sum the largest amounts were paid by the legatees of William H. Laird, Winona, $92,664, and Levi M. Stewart, Minneapolis, $65,882. The total collections the previous year were $508,881, a larger sum, but of that $345,000 was paid by the estate of John Stewart Kennedy of New York.

St. Paul's ordinance requiring the protection from flies and insects of all fruits, berries and other edibles exposed for sale is constitutional. The supreme court held that "the ordinance is not an unnecessary interference with private rights; is not an unreasonable requirement or impossible of performance, and is not in restraint of trade or contrary to the provisions of the state or federal constitutions."

Dr. J. A. Du Bois of Sauk Center has been appointed physician to the Industrial Home for Girls, the state board of control authorizing the appointment. The board also decided to grade the lands adjacent to the recently built cottages and put in gravel roads and walks. Plans for two new buildings were considered by the board, one for the superintendent and another for a modern hospital.

Warrants have been drawn by the state auditor for wolf bounties representing the June and July slaughter which aggregates $3,762. This will make the payment for the fiscal year on wolf bounty applications $29,350.50. During the fiscal year 4,754 grown and cub wolves were killed in the state, for which the state paid $7.50 and $3 respectively.

Formal announcement has been made by President T. M. Hodgman of Macalester college of the completion of the $450,000 endowment and building fund for the institution. This fund gives Macalester total resources of $670,000, making it one of the strongest institutions of its class in the country.

The nomination of Joseph Mertz as postmaster at New Prague has been confirmed by the senate. This appointment, recommended by Representative Davis, has been pending since last February. Mertz will succeed John F. Wrabek, who has been the New Prague postmaster for sixteen years.

The sale of twine made at the Minnesota state prison will net $125,000 less this fiscal year than last. This was shown by the figures given out by Walter J. Smith, state treasurer. The amount received to date is $1,104,071.91.

A. D. Brown of Madison, chairman of the Republican state committee in 1908, has been appointed by State Treasurer Walter J. Smith as investment clerk, a position created by the last legislature.

A Socialist daily newspaper may be established in St. Paul or Minneapolis within the near future as a result of a movement launched at a meeting of the Public Ownership party at St. Paul.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Herman Girkler, a pioneer resident of Minneapolis and former resident of St. Paul, died suddenly at his home in Minneapolis. Mr. Girkler was one of the foremost German citizens of Minneapolis and for ten years was grand secretary of the Sons of Hermann. He was born in Silesia May 26, 1832. He also figured prominently at New Ulm at the time of the Sioux massacre.

Following an illness which lasted less than a week, James Kasson, well known St. Paul lumberman, is dead. He was about sixty-two years old.

Arthur H. Ward, head miller of the Pillsbury A mill at Minneapolis, is dead. Mr. Ward was fifty-one years old and a native of England.

Gershom Bintliff, eighty-one years old, a pioneer of Minneapolis, is dead. He was founder of the Bintliff Manufacturing company.

Joseph Charles, aged seventy, former chief clerk of the Northern Express company in St. Paul, is dead at Vancouver, B. C.

Hamilton W. Hall, Civil war veteran and for many years a postoffice inspector, is dead at St. Paul, aged seventy-four.

Walter V. Fifield, a widely known attorney and business man of Minneapolis, is dead, aged fifty-five years.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Charles Milsdrewski, a youthful bandit of Duluth, formerly a bellboy at a hotel and sixteen years old, is dead at the state prison hospital of acute tuberculosis. He was one of two boys who last winter held up the night clerk at a Duluth hotel, tied him to a post, robbed the cash drawer and was on his way to Superior in a street car when a policeman intercepted him. The boys shot and killed the policeman.

Martin Gray, aged sixteen, son of Fred L. Gray of Minneapolis, is lingering between life and death at the Northwestern hospital with a broken neck. The accident happened when Gray dived into shallow water at Lake Calhoun. Little hope is held for the youth's recovery.

NEW POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

St. Paul and Minneapolis to Have Them Sept. 1.

After weeks of speculation and unofficial reports fixing various dates, St. Paul, together with Minneapolis and eight other cities of the large class, will get their much talked of postal savings bank Sept. 1, according to an order signed by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

Encouraged by the success of the postal banking system in the hundreds of smaller cities where it already is in operation the postmaster general decided to install them in ten cities of the United States, known in the postal service as group B of the first class. They include in addition to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Wilmington, Del., and Long Island City. All of these cities rank high as industrial and commercial centers and all have a large foreign born population.

REPEAL CLAPP AMENDMENT

Oklahoman Has Solution of White Earth Difficulties.

Major J. R. Howard, superintendent of the White Earth Indian agency in Minnesota, was the only witness before the committee on expenditures in the interior department, which is investigating the Indian administration in Minnesota.

Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, a member of the committee, made a suggestion in the hearing which failed to find sympathy with Representative Graham of Illinois, the chairman. Mr. Ferris gave it as his belief that the crux of the situation was the necessity for the repeal of the Clapp amendment. The whole matter, he declared, should be referred to the committee on Indian affairs, with a recommendation for legislation providing for the repeal of the Clapp law, which permits the mixed bloods to alienate their allotments.

WHITE EARTH PROBE STARTED

Alleged Frauds Practiced on Indians Explained to Committee.

Alleged frauds practiced upon the Chippewa Indians of the White Earth reservation in Minnesota by whites, who have secured their lands, were detailed before the house committee on interior department expenditures by W. C. Burch of the department of justice, in answer to charges of misuse of money in connection with government investigation of those matters. Numerous suits growing out of these frauds are pending in the federal courts in Minnesota.

Mr. Burch declared that the most valuable pine land on the reservation had been allotted to the mixed bloods who are legally competent to dispose of it. He said that "speculators and grafters" rushed in and took land conveyances indiscriminately from children and others legally incompetent.

COMPANY TO REFUND DEBTS

Peavey Creditors' Committee Agrees Upon Plan.

F. H. Peavey & Co. of Minneapolis proposes to refund all its indebtedness by issuing collateral trust 6 per cent notes maturing in three years. The plan already has the approval of a majority of the note holders. Its full acceptance will insure the maintenance as a unit of all the Peavey interests, unchanged operation and unchanged management and the Minneapolis company, so far as business operation is concerned, will be in the same position as before the death of James Pettit, manager of the Peavey Grain company of Chicago, and the discovery of a shortage in the accounts of the Chicago company. Through the Minneapolis Trust company, custodian, and with the creditors' committee as a party to the trust deed the new financing will be effected.

BRUTALLY BEATEN TO DEATH

Unknown Harvest Hand Killed Near Le Sueur, Minn.

Beaten to death by his two companions for a few dollars he had earned while working as a harvest hand, an unidentified man was the victim of a brutal murder under the coal chutes of the Omaha road at Le Sueur.

To conceal the crime the body was dragged about thirty feet and placed on the Omaha tracks, where the head was severed from the body when it was hit by the midnight flyer. The body was found by Agent Price of the Omaha road a short time after the flyer pulled out. The sheriff of Le Sueur county was notified and he instituted an investigation which revealed the manner in which the crime had been committed.

Never Was Connected With Any Lorimer Proposition.

Former Representative J. A. Tawney says that dragging him into the Lorimore probe evidence is purely gratuitous. James Keeley of Chicago testified that G. O. Glavis had told him Mr. Tawney was "mixed up in the deal" of the "Fireproof" magazine of Chicago to get mail privileges. When shown the dispatch from Washington Mr. Tawney said:

"The matter is all Greek to me. I do not know Mr. Keeley of the Chicago Tribune, nor George O. Glavis or any other Glavis. I never before heard of the 'Fireproof magazine' and know nothing whatever of any mail privileges which it ever sought or obtained."

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

HALF MILLION DOLLAR LOSS

Fire Destroys the Immense Plant of the Bay State Milling Company at Winona.

Fire which originated presumably from an overheated motor, resulting in an explosion of the flour dust in the sack room, practically wiped out the plant of the Bay State Milling company at Winona, entailing a loss of fully half a million dollars. The company was the fourth largest producer of flour in the United States and its plant was one of the most modern in the Northwest.

The fire broke out just as the day force was planning to stop work and the night crew was coming on. The defective motor was discovered and a small fire was corralled, when a terrific explosion took place in an adjoining room on the north side of the ground floor of the main building. The alarm was spread immediately and all the men reached a place of safety before the flames cut off escape.

The fire department was handicapped because of the lack of water pressure due to the low stage of the river and with every available piece of fire fighting apparatus on the scene it became necessary to send a call for assistance to La Crosse and Eau Claire. Both responded quickly.

A few minutes after the firemen arrived the flames had spread through the west end of the mill and broken through the roof, where they were fanned by a high wind. The fire swept through the entire structure and half an hour after the alarm was rounded the building was engulfed in flames which licked up the adjoining structures and shot sparks for a mile into the business section of the city.

TAXICAB FIRM GOES BROKE

Minneapolis Concern About to Enter Into Bankruptcy.

With liabilities of $15,000 and assets listed as $14[illegible] McAllister & Newgord, the first taxicab company to invade Minneapolis, is about to enter the bankruptcy courts, twelve taxcabs are reposing quietly in the company's garage, twenty men who have been employed by the firm are wondering where two months' back salary is coming from and the senior partner in the firm has left for the West.

To the neglect of a part of the Minneapolis public to pay its taxicab bills is ascribed in part the failure of the company. The company's books could tell interesting stories, according to Sam J. Levy, attorney for T. G. Newgord, a partner in the company:

"The company's books show that some of our 'best people' have a disinclination to paying for taxicab rides," said Mr. Levy. "The books show that one prominent man has even refused to pay for the taxicab he used in going to church to be married. This is only one of the stories the books tell."

WILL BUILD FOREST ROADS

Ten Million Dollars to Be Spent in Northern Minnesota.

The sum of $10,000,000 is to be expended in piercing the forests of Northern Minnesota with modern roads under the provisions of the Elwell bill as the result of a public meeting held at Bemidji attended by representatives from nearly every county north of St. Paul and Minneapolis in response to a call of the permanent roads committee of the Northern Minnesota Development association.

The gathering, remarkable for the gigantic task assumed, was addressed by Senator James T. Elwell of Minneapolis, author of the bill which makes possible the present undertaking, which will include as its first step the construction of a continuous road from East Grand Forks direct to Duluth, by way of Red Lake Falls, Erskine, Bagley, Bemidji and Cass Lake.

HEARING ON EXPRESS RATES

Experts to Be Placed on Stand When Case Is Resumed Aug. 7.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has announced that the hearing on interstate express rates will be resumed Aug. 7.

Evidence will then be introduced relating to the reasonableness of the amount paid by the express companies to the railways for transporting express.

Experts employed by the state have been working the last three weeks on books of the Wells Fargo Express company and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul and the Chicago Great Western railways. These experts will testify regarding the results of their investigation.

The express rate hearing was started last June and then adjourned until early in July, when another adjournment was taken so additional evidence could be gathered.

The NEWS, $1

There are a whole lot of farmers in sections where stock feeding is usually carried on who will not be able to carry their stock to snowfall, let alone through the coming winter. Putting two and two together, this means that the man who has the roughage and grain and who can buy feeders this fall and will carry them through the winter is bound to make good money in the venture. It is fair to assume also that the same thing will be true of sheep and hogs.

Sweet clover is not as valuable a legume as alfalfa or as red clover in sections where the latter will do well, but there is no denying the fact that it has merits which are worth looking into. Like other members of the legume family, it is a soil enricher, is deep rooted, vigorous, remarkably hardy and flourishes on the thinnest and poorest kinds of soils. It is true that stock do not take to it kindly as a forage plant or in the form of hay, but they will in time acquire a liking for it.

The efforts of the Norfolk (Neb.) Commercial club to boost and aid the section of country of which it is the center is unique and at the same time worthy of mention. Members of this club believed the farmers around Norfolk would be benefited by raising a better type of horses and with this idea in mind bought and imported sixty Belgian mares and a number of stallions, the finest representatives of this breed obtainable, and sold them to the nearby farmers at cost. It would be difficult, indeed, to estimate the benefit of this move on the horse raising industry of the community. It is a plan other commercial clubs might well copy.

While peas and turnips are in no way related, they flourish under the same conditions of cool weather and moisture. This is why the pea grows to perfection during April, May and early June, and why turnips do best sowed very early in the spring (for market use when small), or during September and October.

The North Dakota experiment station at Williston made a depth test in the planting of Early Ohio potatoes, putting the seed four, six, eight and ten inches deep. At digging time the yield of the plats was 57½, 78, 83 and 69½ bushels respectively. The experiment proved that the depth at which potatoes are commonly planted gives the best return.

It has always been beyond the writer's ken why, instead of making an appetizing, substantial and wholesome loaf of bread, bakeries—most of them—still persist in putting good flour into a loaf that is punky, unsubstantial and unsatisfying—just an aggregation of cells of carbonated air, the consumption of which is reduced greatly because of its flimsy character.

MAKING GOOD ROADS

UNITED STATES AWAY BEHIND REST OF THE WORLD IN THIS WORK.

EVOLUTION OF THE HIGHWAY

Awakening of the People to Necessity for Road Improvement Slow Process—State Governments at Last Aroused—Vote Money for Work.

By HOWARD H. GROSS.

Is it not strange that in this country, where we have the largest aggregate of wealth that the world has ever known and where we have achieved the greatest success in human history along certain lines of endeavor, that we have failed to keep pace with the march of progress, and that we are a century behind the rest of the world in the matter of handling public roads?

The conditions of the highways in American are a great surprise to the foreign traveler, who has been used to smooth, hard roads throughout his land. Upon his arrival in New York he is overwhelmed by the immensity of the buildings and the gigantic scale upon which everything is done. A day or two in the metropolis prepares him to believe that Americans can do anything and accomplish anything. The resources of the country seem to be boundless. In this frame of mind he starts his journey westward, and from the railway window he can see roads that are practically bottomless and teams struggling through the mire that is nearly knee deep. He is perfectly amazed that such conditions should obtain. He cannot understand why it should be so in a country that has such marvelous resources. The fact is that America is the only country in the world that is rich enough to stand the drain, handicap and the losses that bad roads impose.

Again, may we ask, why is it that in this land, where so many great successes have been scored in so many fields that we have utterly failed in dealing with the highways? In the writer's opinion the reason will be found in certain fundamental misconceptions. They date back to colonial times. In the early days the people settled along the water courses, in the valleys. Farming was done in a primitive way. It was the day of the homespun. The hand loom and spinning wheel were found everywhere. The people lived very simply; what they wore, they made; what they ate, they raised. The community was self-centered and had very little to do with the settlement over the hills in the next valley. The spirit of home rule was everywhere dominant. The roads were regarded purely as of local concern. They were just such roads as the people cared to build, and whether good or bad it was no one's business but their own.

Thus the concept that the highways were purely a local matter and did not concern any one outside of the immediate vicinity became firmly established and held undisputed sway until about 20 years ago, when a New Jersey man made a discovery that was far more important than finding the north pole, and that was that the roads were public property—they belonged to all the people and as such it was the state's duty to take up the question of highway improvement and not leave the whole burden upon the township where the amount of taxable property was limited. It was shown that the world's food supply had to pass over these roads and that bad roads increased the cost of delivery—made the food supply intermittent instead of constant, and that bad roads produced a heavy burden to every one and was a serious economic error. A movement was started for state aid in road building. It met great opposition, and principally from those who would most greatly benefit from it—the farmers. They feared it was a scheme to take the roads out of their hands, and no telling where they would land or what taxation would be put upon them, but the movement grew because it was right. In two or three years after the people had had the experience of building roads under the plan, had used and paid for them—they found it was a splendid investment and that instead of adding to their burdens the good roads took many burdens off. The plan became so popular opposition died out and those who at first were strongly against the plan were soon among its foremost advocates.

New Jersey began state aid with an appropriation of $50,000 per year, this sum was soon increased to five times the amount. The state aid plan of road building spread from state to state, until now fully half of the states have adopted it, and it has everywhere proved popular and successful. It is the plan that gets the roads and so distributes the burden that the taxation is not appreciably higher than it was before. State aid would have been impractical in the early days of the republic, but now under the country-wide plan of distribution of food products and the factory output and the enormous amount of city and corporate property, all of which is benefitted by good roads. The plan removes a heavy burden from the farmers, by requiring all classes of property to stand its just proportion of the cost.

New York presents a striking example of the growth of the good roads sentiment and the possibilities of road construction. This state began state aid with a measly appropriation of $50,000, but in five years by a heavy majority voted a constitutional amendment authorizing the issue of $50,000,000 of bonds for state aid in road building. Thus the wave of progress goes on with increasing momentum, and it will eventually sweep the whole country.

When one looks back over the campaign for good roads in any community he finds that when the subject was first brought up scores of good people became frightened at the expense, and they were loud in denunciation of the proposal, saying and believing, that it meant the confiscation of their property. That they never could stand the tax and that good roads spelled ruin. In every case, however, where the plan was proceeded with by state aid, the people were surprised that they had the roads and that they did not feel the tax, that, in fact, more and more roads were demanded, up to the lawful limit. Thus it has ever been, and probably will be, for years to come.

Good roads mean more social life, more pleasure, less drudgery. They mean better schools, a more enlightened and intelligent citizenship, they mean progress and civilization.

Utilization of Waste.

A distinguished chemist once observed that "My lady writes tender sentiments to her lord with ink made from an old copper coffee pot on paper made from old collars." The utilization of waste products, which is adding so enormously to the wealth of the world, furnishes many such fantastic adaptations.

"Give me," Dr. Long said, "the sewage of New York, and I will return you yearly the superior milk of 100,000 cows." The waste soapsuds from woolen factories which used to pollute hundreds of rivers, is now precipitated and the coagulum is pressed into bricks and converted into superior illuminating gas. These are only examples of the ingenuity of man. That the field is far from exhausted is instanced in the estimate that from 600 to 1,000 tons of fine coal are thrown away every day in the ashes of New York. It is not impossible that some one will shortly invent a process for reclaiming this wasted material.

Teaching School Girls to Swim.

In the apparatus in use in Germany for teaching school girls how to swim the pupil is supported in such a position as to leave the legs and arms free to perform the motions of a swimmer. The body is hung in a wide belt, suspended from an overhead rail, while the feet are attached to a pair of ropes running over pulleys and adjustable to various requirements.

The pupils thus suspended are then taught how to perform the movements of the breast stroke until the action becomes inmost instinctive. There is a decided advantage in teaching these movements in air, a way instead of in the water, for the pupil is not distracted by the fear of a ducking. It is not at all easy to learn the swimming movements even out of water, hence the advantage of acquiring this knowledge until it becomes almost instinctive before entering the water.—Scientific American.

Greed.

"A fool and his money are soon parted," quoted the bunko steerer.

"Yes," replied the green goods man. "But the trouble is that a fool usually hasn't much money to start with."

WHAT GOOD ROADS DO COST

New York to Expend Over $5,000,000 This Year in Repair Work.

How few automobilists and tourists realize as they glide over the good or bad roads of New York state what the upkeep of these highways and byways is costing their town, county and state, and indirectly them. If they would stop to think of this there would be much less profanity when one chances upon a mud puddle difficult to dodge.

In the first place, the average, or, rather, the majority of tourists have no idea of the number of miles of roads in New York state which must be annually repaired, oftentimes semi-annually. Frank D. Lyon, the deputy commissioner of the state highway department, has furnished statistics and information on this subject which are not only startling and surprising, but vastly interesting to motorists.

There are in the Empire state 80,000 miles of roads, a greater mileage of which is improved highway than all the other eastern states put together, not including Massachusetts. There are now 2,000 miles of state roads and more under construction. There are macadam roads totaling in mileage 2,400, constructed by towns. There are more than 40,000 miles of earth roads, properly shaped and crowned, stones picked and removed, depressions filled, culverts and bridges repaired. Towns have constructed 8,000 miles of gravel roads, in first-class condition.

To keep these roads navigable, so to speak, shape means work, systematic, untiring labor on the part of a great corps of people. The state is divided into nine districts, with Mr. Lyon in actual charge of these. Each district has a superintendent, an assistant to Mr. Lyon. Then the state is again subdivided into forty-four counties under the supervision of fifty-four superintendents, who in turn are answerable to the nine assistants of Mr. Lyon. Then it is further subdivided into 934 towns, under 934 town superintendents. By this system Commissioner Lyon can reach within twenty-four hours after notification any road in the state in need of repair.

Work of construction and repair is now at its height, and Mr. Lyon's report of recent date showed that on one particular day there were 26,000 men and teams on the roads of the state.

Co-operation on the part of automobilists with the state authorities is urged by the state highway department. Mr. Lyon asks that tourists running across anything wrong with the roads immediately report the same to him. In this way tourists—those who are actually using the roads—will not only aid the state, but themselves, in keeping the highways in the best of condition.

"The upkeep of motor cars," says Mr. Lyon, "will this year be reduced 40 per cent, in my mind, on account of repairs to highways being made."

Towns are this year raising by taxes for highway improvement the sum of $2,504,675.23. The state is turning over to the towns to aid them in this work $1,593,070. Bridge work during the year 1911 is to cost $628,414.63. The amount to be paid out for new machinery is $160,011.25. Special road improvements in towns of the state are to cost $279,706.22, making in all $5,185,877.33 to be expended by towns this year.

The state is to bond itself for $19,000,000 for the construction of state roads. Towns and counties are to be called upon to provide as their share $5,000,000. The state legislature has appropriated $1,800,000 for the maintenance of state roads already constructed.

The sum of $21,985,877.33 is to be expended in one year for road construction and improvement throughout the great Empire state—that is, this amount is available for the work, and in all probability will be utilized by the state department of highways.

The Pink Marble Personal.

While the Japanese are rapidly assimilating western business notions, they have not yet entirely divested themselves of Oriental extravagance of expression in their advertisements, especially those of a personal nature, as the following, which some time ago appeared in a Tokio newspaper, will testify:

"I am a beautiful woman. My abundant, undulating hair envelops me as a cloud. Supple as a willow is my waist. Soft and brilliant is my visage as the satin of flowers. I am endowed with wealth sufficient to saunter through life hand in hand with my beloved. Were I to meet a gracious lord, kindly, intelligent, well educated and of good taste, I would unite myself with him for life, and later share with him the pleasure of being laid to rest eternal in a tomb of pink marble."

Oxygen As a Cutting Tool.

A jet of burning oxygen from a blowpipe may be successfully employed to cut sheet iron, iron tubes, and small bars. The cut made is almost as sharp and thin as that made by a saw. In earlier attempts difficulty was encountered in clearing the cut of liquid metal and in preventing the spread of the melting effect beyond the borders of the cut. In later processes two blowpipes were used. The first has an ordinary oxyhydrogen flame, which heats the iron to redness at the place where the cut is to be made. This is followed immediately by the second jet, composed of pure oxygen, which instantly burns the metal without melting. The liquidized iron is blown swiftly from the fissure, so that there is no serious spreading of the heat to surrounding parts.

Report on Free Seed Distributed.

Agriculturist Andrew Boss, of the State University made a tour of last fall's fire zone, last week, and while here made a report upon the results of the free seed distribution. Mr. Boss' report is as follows:

I have just concluded the inspection of lands on which free grass seed was sown this spring and am pleased to say that all that I have seen seems to have been carefully put in and well cared for.

Timothy in many places is heading out and clover is blooming around the edges of the field or where sown without nurse crops. Both crops will form some seed this year and will reseed, making the crops thicker next year. Where sown in oats it is coming well but will wilt when the oats are cut. It would be a good thing to cut the stubble as high as possible thus protecting the grass. If rains come soon it will be all right anyway. Your people have handled the seed well and the settlers who received the seed have made good use of it. If all is doing as well as what I have seen Northern Beltrami county will benefit much from the grass seed shipped in by the state,

Searching for Son.

From news received in the city it is feared that Harold Hicks of Verndale, son of H. M. Hicks of this city, has mysteriously disappeared while making a trip to Verndale, from Minneapolis upon a motorcycle. Mr. Hicks heard from his son, six days ago as he was leaving Minneapolis. Becoming anxious he caused inquiries to be made but it was found he had not yet arrived in Verndale. A search was instituted and he was traced to Sauk Centre where all traces were lost. As nothing has been heard from him, it is supposed he either met with an accident or foul play. Searchers are now at work endeavoring to find the missing man or his machine. Harold Hicks is well known in this city where he formerly made his home and his many friends here will hope nothing serious has happened to him. He was 24 years of age and unmarried.

Established Two Ditches.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held yesterday, ditches 53 and and 55 were established. These ditches are in the townships of Hickory and Deer Park and each with their branches will be between 7 and 8 miles long. The contracts will be let and work started in the near future. The board also voted $200 for the Pennington County fair. The board met Monday as the county board of equalization and finished equalizing the taxes.

Mrs. Bryant Withdraws.

Mrs. D. K. Bryant Tuesday announced her withdrawal from the race for member of the school board to succeed D. P. O'Neil to be held tomorrow. Dr. O. F. Melby of the east side will run in her place. The other candidate for the position is Mrs. J. M. Bishop.

At the regular election held two weeks ago, the judges found a few instances where two or three ballots were put in together. Of course they were thrown out, but the voters will be watched this time and any caught attempting to stuff the ballot box will be dealt with according to law.

TO THE VOTERS

To the voters of Independent School District No. 18:

Last week I was announced as a candidate for director at the election to be held on the 4th inst. to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Mr. O'Neill. I was urged to become a candidate in order that the ward in which I live should have equal representation with less important subdivisions of the city. As the candidacy of Dr. Melby removes my reason for being a candidate and having in view the unfortunate nature of the controversy which this small matter has given rise to, I hereby announce my retirement in favor of Dr. Melby and thank my many friends for their assurance of support which I am convinced would have elected me by a large majority.

Mrs. D. K. Bryant.

While fertilizing soil for beans usually results in a vigorous growth of vine, it is quite likely to make vines that produce few or no pods. It's a case of overmuch kindness.

In most states the law requires that partition hedges which serve as fences shall be cut back to a height of four or five feet every other year. The regulation would also quite likely include trees growing on a partition line.

Vermont is a little state, but after all is not a loafer or a star boarder. In 1910 she produced $6,324,366 worth of stone, $16,574,000 worth of hay, $10,690,000 worth of potatoes, $1,764,000 worth of oats and $1,901,000 worth of corn.

It is a lucky farmer that has a silo and put up a large enough supply last fall so that he has some on hand now to feed to his dairy cows during the days of flies and short pasture. He is excusable if he pats himself on the back just a bit.

Tomato vines can often be made to get down to business in the matter of fruit production by pruning them rather severely with a corn knife or bread knife. This tends to check the growth of leaves and stems and hastens the production of fruit.

Unless the stream or pond in which ducks swim abounds in insect and animal life paddling around in the water will do them more harm than good. In fact, a good deal of experience in the duck raising business seems to show that ducks will make more rapid gains if they do not have access to water at all.

It is a stand off which is the more prolific spreader of disease germs—the public drinking cup, the communion goblet or the careless doctor's clinical thermometer that is put from one patient's mouth into another's, often without further cleansing than washing in cold water. All three should be suppressed.

The green worms will soon be at work on the late cabbage, and one should be ready to give 'em fits. Water at a temperature of 160 degrees will kill the worms and will not damage the cabbage. Black pepper dusted on the heads is feasible for small patches, while air slaked lime is cheap and excellent for a field crop. Poisons such as paris green should not be used after the heads have begun to form.

Some one recently asked the editor of a leading agricultural journal if a man could be a Christian and take advantage of a bankruptcy law. If taking advantage of the law is really an easy way of shirking responsibility for one's own mismanagement or dishonesty and gouging other folks out of money justly due them it would seem that such action would not be Christian—not even decent or honest.

The federal department of agriculture has formulated and recommends the following recipe for the making of a hog tonic: Good charcoal, one pound; one pound sulphur, two pounds common salt, two pounds sodium bicarbonate, two pounds sodium hyposulphate, one pound sodium sulphate, one pound antimony sulphide. The ingredients should be thoroughly powdered and mixed and given in slop feed. A tablespoonful is a dose for a hog weighing 200 pounds.

Sorghum poisoning seems to be due to the development of prussic acid in the new growth of sorghum and Kafir corn, which springs up following a period of protracted and severe drought. In the natural order of things such growth appears in the late summer or early fall, and it is then that especial care should be taken in turning stock to pasture on fields where any of these crops have been growing. Whether poison is contained in such new growth can be determined by sending samples to one's state experiment station.

In all sections where a winter covering of snow is necessary for the protection of the roots of fruit trees and the snowfall cannot be counted upon a cover crop of buckwheat, buckwheat and oats, vetch or cowpeas should be sown about the middle of July. This cover crop will serve a twofold purpose—will extract surplus moisture from the soil and thus hasten the maturing of this year's wood growth and will also catch whatever snow that does fall and prevent the ground from getting bare in spots. If one of the legumes are used they will add materially to the fertility of the soil and can be plowed under in the spring, as can any of the others, as a green manure.

DAKOTA LANDS OPEN TO SETTLEMENT.

As a result of executive proclamation recently issued there have been thrown open to homestead entry about 150,000 acres of land in the Fort Berthold Indian reservation in Montraille and McLean counties, in central North Dakota, and 460,562 acres of land in the Pine Ridge and Rosebud Indian reservations in Molette and Bennett counties, in the central part of South Dakota. The usual rules of homestead entry will hold in case of these lands, except that in addition to the usual filing fees the homesteader will have to pay the appraised value of the land, which will vary from $1.50 to $6 per acre, depending upon whether the land entered is first or second class agricultural land or grazing land. All persons desiring to register for the Fort Berthold lands must go either to Bismarck, Minto, Ryder, Garrison or Plaza, N. D., on or after Aug. 14 and not later than Sept. 2, 1911, and there swear to their applications. Those wishing to register for Pine Ridge or Rosebud lands must go to either Chamberlain, Dallas, Gregory or Rapid City, S. D., on or after Oct. 2 and not later than Oct. 21, 1911, and there swear to their applications. Weather reports at the Berthold reservation covering the past five years show extreme summer temperatures ranging from 102 degrees to 107 degrees and extreme winter temperatures ranging from 22 degrees to 43 degrees below zero. The largest rainfall during any one of the five years was 19.03 inches, the heaviest precipitation being in the months of May and June. The minimum annual rainfall was 9.51 inches, the average for the five years being 14.79 inches. Observations made in the vicinity of the Pine Ridge and Rosebud tracts show maximum summer temperature ranging from 101 degrees to 104 degrees, while the extreme winter temperatures ranged from 17 degrees to 25 degrees below zero. The minimum annual rainfall here was 16.07 inches, the maximum 33.59 inches, while the average for the five year period was 23.72 inches. Readers who may be contemplating making entry on either of these tracts would do well to address the general land office, department of the interior, Washington, for the information circular which has been prepared relative to them. This not only indicates those who may make entry, but gives in detail the conditions under which entry may be made.

A BOSS FLY TRAP.

A friend, who is a grocer and has a fly problem on his hands in a very real sense, has devised a trap for destroying the pests wholesale. It is so simple a device that we give a brief description of it for the benefit of those who have the same problem to contend with. Our friend has simply adopted the principle of the little wire screen cage trap, which has an inverted conical inlet for the flies extending upward from the base, where a bait of sweetened water or other stuff is put to draw the flies. Applying this principle, he has taken a common sugar barrel, replaced the top with a cover of wire screen, sawed a hole twelve inches in diameter in the center of the bottom and into this inserted a cone made of wire screen, having a diameter at the base equal to the hole in the barrel and an aperture at the smaller end about three-quarters of an inch across. When thus fixed and made fly tight, except for the inlet, the barrel should be placed on some support which will raise it from the ground a few inches so that a bait of some kind can be placed beneath to draw the first flies. When a goodly number of flies have been trapped their very buzzing will attract other flies from all directions. Our friend tells us that he emptied one of these traps ten times within a day or two recently, and he estimates that he destroyed three solid pecks of flies in that time. He holds the trap over a blaze of kerosene, and that fixes 'em. He further says that when he dumps the flies into the alley the neighbors' chickens eat them up clean. Here would seem to be a tiptop method of getting rid of an insufferable summer pest and at the same time furnishing the poultry with needed insect food. Such a trap would be a blessing, not only to grocers, but to housewives in town and country.

STOCK FOODS.

A stock food the writer saw advertised in a pretty reputable agricultural paper the other day claimed to "double the milk and butter when fed to milk cows and to fatten hogs and beef cattle in forty days' less time than usually required." There are just two classes of elements which these stock foods contain which entitle them to any consideration at all—namely, ground alfalfa and grains in some form and, on the other hand, tonics such as salt, spices and roots. The real food content can be bought vastly cheaper when not disguised under a fancy name and wrapper, and the same is true of most of the tonic elements of such prepared foods. In a series of feeding experiments made by one agricultural college recently it was found that a pen of fattening pigs that were given rations of some of the leading stock foods did not make as rapid gains as did those that were not given any at all and no more of other foods. In view of such a showing, it is safe to brand such claims as the above as bosh pure and simple, and the feeder who bites at such a bait is also simple.

Low Water at Crookston.

The Crookston Water Works, Power & Light Co., has decided on making a $15,000 improvement to their plant here by the installation at an early date of a new and the latest improved turbine wheel at the dam, in order to secure more power for commercial use, electric lights, and water for the city.

This was made necessary because of the continued low stage of the river, which has necessitated generating the power at the steam plant, which is more expensive and has only been used in the past as an auxiliary plant to use in an emergency or at a time when the demand was specially heavy.

The new turbine wheel will be a very material improvement to the plant.—Crookston Times.

Will Steam Plant.

The special committee from the council that went to St. Paul and Minneapolis last week to investigate oil engines to use in the auxiliary power plant, returned the first part of the week, satisfied that steam was the best power. The committee made a thorough investigation of the steam and oil plants in the Twin Cities and were convinced that the steam plant was the one best suited to the needs of this city. It is planned to run the dynamo installed in the saw mill night and day for the present at least.

INDIANS WIN CLOSE GAME

Thief River Falls Indians Scalp Red Lake Falls Team Here Sunday.

When the Dust Had Settled the Score Was 5 to 4 in Favor of The Locals.

A good sized crowd witnessed a fast and exciting game of ball at the fair grounds last Sunday and saw the Indians trim their ancient rivals from Red Lake Falls by the score of 5 to 4. With a game apiece to their credit before they met each team played hard to land the rubber game and the result was in doubt until the last man had been retired.

No scores were made to the fourth inning when Red Lake broke the ice and shoved two across the plate. The Indians could do nothing in their half of the fourth and things looked black when Red Lake ran in two more scores in the next inning. The Indians came back strong in the fifth, however, putting three runners across the plate, and the next inning made two more runs which ended the scoring on both sides for the game.

Hess started the whirling for the locals but after Red Lake began bunching hits on him; Matson relieved him letting them down with one hit for the rest of the game. Garceau for the visitors allowed only three hits but gave 5 passes and let two get to first by being hit with a pitched ball. His support was rather ragged however, 6 errors being made behind him. This game gives Thief River an advantage of one game in the coming series to be pulled off during the fair and much interest is being shown in the coming struggle.

It is the same with quack grass and Canada thistles as with bad habits—a whole lot easier to be careless and let them get a foothold than to root them out afterward. The secret of eradication is the same with all—vigilance, persistence and perseverance.

That piece of ground which failed to give a stand of corn because of cutworms or which was too wet in the spring may be made to do duty yet by putting it to millet or buckwheat. Either will yield a paying crop and, besides this, will keep the weeds in subjection.

ENSILAGE AS A RATION FOR STEERS.

It has been generally conceded for years past that the silo is a proper adjunct of the dairy in providing a succulent ration for winter. Not until recently, however, has it also come to be realized as just as valuable an aid in fitting steers for market. The Indiana experiment station at Purdue has carried on feeding tests with silage for several years past and has lately published the data gathered. Among facts which should be of value to every feeder of steers, it was found that when corn silage was added to a ration of shelled corn, cottonseed meal and clover hay the result was a more rapid as well as a cheaper gain and a higher finish on the cattle; that cattle fed corn silage shed their coats earlier in the spring; that a smaller quantity of grain was consumed when silage was fed; that steers receiving cottonseed meal and corn silage fattened more rapidly, required less finish, distributed the fat more evenly and brought a higher market price than similar cattle that did not receive the two feeds. In feeding operations carried on during the winter of 1908-9 it was found that corn had the following values when fed in combination with the following feeds: With clover hay, 73.1 cents; with clover hay and cottonseed meal, 79.3; with clover hay, cottonseed meal and corn silage, 83.8 cents, and with cottonseed meal and corn silage, 86.7 cents per bushel.

TWO IMPORTANT CONDITIONS.

Two points are important in the successful canning of vegetables, such as peas and corn—the thorough sterilizing of the product in the can by boiling in the sealed containers in a boiler with rack beneath cans for about three hours, and, second, having covers that are absolutely air tight. Many a housewife has worked hard over a hot fire to put up these vegetables only to find in a few days that the cans were fermenting (bacteria working) and all her work gone for naught. This condition is due to one of the two things referred to—failure to properly kill all bacterial life by boiling or leaky covers which admitted bacteria after the cans had cooled. In the putting up of corn, if one does not wish to run the risk of canning, an excellent method is cooking the corn on the cob for about twenty minutes, cutting from cob, then mixing salt with the corn at the rate of one part to four of corn and packing in open stone jars, covering with cloth and plate, as one would salted cucumber pickles. Such pickled corn has to be freshened, but the tenderness and flavor are preserved very well in the process.

GOOD ROADS BETTER COUNTRY

Highways Tell Tale of Profit or Loss and Spell Ruin for County That Neglects Them.

The plain people of the land are familiar with the truths of history. They know the past. They realize that often difference between good roads and bad roads is the difference between profit and loss. Good roads have a money value far beyond our ordinary conception. Bad roads constitute our greatest drawback to internal development and material progress. Good roads mean prosperous farmers; bad roads mean abandoned farms, sparsely settled country districts, and congested populated cities, where the poor are destined to become poorer. Good roads mean more cultivated farms and cheaper food products for the toilers in the towns; bad roads mean poor transportation, lack of communication, high prices for the necessaries of life, the loss of untold millions of wealth, and idle workmen seeking employment. Good roads will help those who cultivate the soil and feed the multitude, and whatever aids the producers of our country will increase our wealth and our greatness and benefit all the people. We cannot destroy our farms without final decay. They are today the heart of our national life and the chief source of our material greatness. Tear down every edifice in our cities and labor will rebuild them, but abandon the farms and our cities will disappear forever.

I take an abiding interest in this all-absorbing question for better highways by some plan it can be done honestly, economically and constitutionally. I am not committed to any pet scheme. I have no vanity in the matter. I care not who gets the glory so long as the people get the results.

I am for the cause and in the fight to stay. Good roads mean progress and prosperity, a benefit to the people who live in the cities, an advantage to the people who live in the country, and it will help every section of our vast domain. Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable; they enhance the value of farm lands, facilitate transportation, and add untold wealth to the producers and consumers of the country; they are the milestones marking the advance of civilization; they economize time, give labor a lift, and make millions in money; they save wear and tear and worry and waste; they beautify the country, bring it in touch with the city; they aid the social and the religious and the educational and the industrial progress of the people; they make better homes and happier hearth sides; they are the avenues of trade; the highways of commerce, and mail routes of information, and the agencies of speedy communication; they mean the economical transportation of marketable products—the maximum burden at the minimum cost; they are the ligaments that bind the country together in thrift and industry and intelligence and patriotism; they promote social intercourse, prevent intellectual stagnation and increase the happiness and the prosperity of our producing masses; they contribute to the glory of the country, give employment to our idle workmen, distribute the necessaries of life—the products of the fields and the forests and the factories—encourage energy and husbandry, inculcate love for our scenic wonders and make mankind better and greater and grander and broader.

Good roads are the arteries of industrial life of a great and powerful people. Good roads make a good country. In a government such as ours all sorts of men and women are more or less absolutely dependent upon the best and speediest means of communication and transportation. If you say that good roads will only help the farmer, I deny it. The farmer who produce the necessaries of life are less dependent than the millions and millions of people who live in our cities. The very lives of the latter depend on the farmers—the producers of the necessaries of life. The most superficial investigation of this subject will clearly prove that good roads are more important to the consumers than they are to the producers of the country.

The fathers of the republic wisely recognized the importance of this question. Washington and Jefferson advocated good roads and projected the construction of a great highway from the capital to the Mississippi valley. The far-seeing statesmen of the early days of our national existence championed and passed measures to better the means of transportation. They knew that of all human agencies the one which has done most for civilization has been the building of good roads—the abridgment of distances, the shortening of time—in the facility of communication. They realized the necessity of good roads, how important they were to the country, to its growth and its development; and to mankind, morally, physically, intellectually and industrially.

WILLIAM SULZER.

Division Extraordinary.

At the Zoological park it became necessary to cut down a large tree. A log about twenty feet long was one of the results. Dr. Hornaday, the director, gave orders to one of the workmen, a stalwart Irishman, to split the log, with a small charge of dynamite, into two halves and scoop out each half for a trough to be used in feeding some of the animals. Later in the day the son of Erin appeared at the director's office, much excited, and stammered: "Th' dynamite has blowed thot log into t'ree halves."

THE OYSTER SHELL BARK LOUSE.

A reader of these notes brings us a twig from an apple tree quite badly infected with a scale which is gray in color, a little wider than the body of a pin and about an eighth of an inch long. These scales are scattered thick on the small limbs and, our friend says, have practically killed several young trees, having been at work for the past two or three years. This scale is the protective covering of the oyster shell bark louse, which is safe beneath it and is able to suck the juices of the bark unmolested. While it is a pest that does not spread in an orchard with great rapidity, it is nevertheless one that should be combatted vigorously. The best spray to use is the lime-sulphur, which may be applied in the fall after the leaves have fallen or in the early spring before they start. One can buy good commercial lime-sulphur in quantity desired or make it at home. For a small amount bring five gallons of water to a boil, preferably in an iron receptacle, and add five pounds of fresh stone lime and about three and three-fourths pounds of flour of sulphur, the latter being made into a paste by mixing with a small amount of water. This solution should be boiled for about an hour, or until a clear liquid results. It should then be diluted to about twelve gallons and applied when warm to trees already infected and others in the same tract. A less effective solution for immediate use while the trees are in leaf is the kerosene emulsion, made by dissolving a pound of soap in a gallon of hot water and adding thereto while still warm two gallons of kerosene. This should be stirred and churned until a cream emulsion results, which before using should be diluted in about twelve gallons of water. In spraying the trees especial care should be taken to see that all parts of the tree are covered, so that the destruction of the pest will be complete.

A TERRIBLE DROUGHT.

If reports coming direct from the country west of the Missouri river can be believed there are sections of the territory mentioned which are now experiencing the worst and most disastrous drought in a period of thirty or forty years. It has been aggravated greatly owing to the fact that the drought of the present season follows on the heels of the unusually protracted dry spell of last year. In many localities the soil was so dry the past spring that the seed sown has not yet germinated. In other sections where the seed germinated and grew and gave promise of abundant yield harvest hopes have been blasted by week after week of withering, blistering, burning heat, with no refreshing rain or cool interval to stay the disaster, which in Oklahoma and portions of Kansas, Nebraska and South Dakota seems to be about as complete as could be. Thousands of unfortunate homesteaders in the drought stricken belt, with reserve depleted as a result of last year's drought, will have to have aid where they are, starve or leave their claims and throw themselves on the mercy and support of relatives and friends. In many states farther east the drought has been severe, but has been relieved at intervals by rain, but in the territory first mentioned it has been well nigh indescribable.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE.

A calamity is often a blessing in disguise. In no event of large importance has the truth of this fact been more forcefully demonstrated than in the visitation upon certain sections of the south of the cotton boll weevil. For a time dire disaster seemed about to overwhelm the localities visited by the pest, but the very fact that tillers of the soil were compelled to turn to the raising of other crops—corn, milo maize, field peas and beans, clover and alfalfa—and to dairying and stock raising has, in fact, been of the greatest possible benefit to the pest ridden sections. Some important lessons have been gleaned from the experience, among them that there is more money in diversified farming than in cotton raising, that soil fertility can be maintained and even increased if the legumes are used in rotation and if dairying and stock raising is carried on; that more cotton can be produced per acre in rotation with other crops, and that the boll weevil pest is greatly reduced as a direct result of rotation. It has further demonstrated pretty clearly to the southern cotton grower that he can just as well produce on his own plantation a whole lot of the things he has been shipping in from a distance at long prices and heavy transportation charges.

THE HIGHWAY MUTILATOR.

A good many folk who travel country roads by auto or team hope for the day to come when a newly appointed road supervisor shall not think he has done his full duty along the line of highway improvement when he has heaped a lot of roadside sod and soft earth into the middle of the highway and left it there without pulverizing, dragging or top dressing of any kind whatever. We know of a number of instances where really good stretches of road top dressed with gravel not so very long ago, but worn a bit, have been mutilated in the above fashion and rendered well nigh impassable. Men who know no more about the science of road building than this might be appointed township dog catchers, but they should not be given appointment as road supervisor.

SCOTCH SHEEP DOGS AT STATE FAIR

Combined Entertainment and Instruction by Champion Dogs and Sheep Farmers.

Brought Direct From Scotland for Their First Appearance in America at Minnesota Exhibition.

Real Scotch sheep dog trials, in which the competitors will be champion Scotch collies, and their owners, the United Kingdom's most famous sheep farmers, will be a big attraction of the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. Six dogs and three shepherds will be brought direct from Scotland for the occasion.

The trials, which are an important feature at all the big agricultural shows in England and Scotland, will be seen for the first time in America at Minnesota's big fair next September. The event will be a feature of the afternoon program every day during the fair and the announcement of it has already aroused more than unusual enthusiasm.

JOHN JOHNSTONE.

Appreciating the value as an attraction of the sheep dog trials Secretary J. C. Simpson, after much correspondence and continued efforts, has succeeded in completing arrangements for bringing to the Minnesota State Fair, John Johnstone, James Scott and Mr. Robertson, three of the best known and most successful sheep farmers in the United Kingdom. These men with six dogs all of which have won many prizes for the handling of sheep, will start for this country next month and will be in Minnesota during the six days of the fair and perhaps longer. Two of the dogs are international prize winners.

The trials will be conducted every afternoon during the fair. They will be given over a course eight feet wide and about a half mile in length, to be laid out on the fair grounds. The starting point will be on the hill near the agricultural buildings and from there the course will lay across the track, through gates, back and forth through the center field and will end in pens in front of the grandstand.

JAMES SCOTT AND KEP

Throughout its length the course will be marked only by short flags. Over this course a flock of sheep, probably three or four in number, will be driven by each dog in turn. The expired time of each trial will not be more than twelve minutes and during that time the collie will have to drive his sheep over the entire course and pen them. During the performance of his dog the shepherd remains in one position, usually about the center of the course. A large part of the way he is out of hearing, but always in sight of his collie. He directs his course in various ways, some times by a shout or whistle, but more often merely by a motion of his hands.

FAVORS FEDERAL CONTROL

Wickersham Talks About Corporations in Address at Duluth.

Control of corporations by a federal commission instead of the present method wherein varying state laws make difficult obedience to the law was urged by Attorney General George W. Wickersham in an address before the Minnesota State Bar association at Duluth.

Mr. Wickersham pointed out the difficulties of the problem. He declared more regulation is necessary. He was not ready to say that the federal commission, for which he argued, should be given control over prices, although he pointed out that there is little difference between regulation of transportation charges and a reasonable supervision of commodity prices.

The laws of supply and demand, he declared, do not fix the price of staple articles in the United States. Those prices have been fixed too long by agreement of the producers, he said, leading him to the conclusion that in theory the creation of a federal commission to regulate prices is advisable, but that practical obstacles in the way of such procedure practically are insurmountable.

The attorney general declared himself in favor of federal incorporation as a step necessary to control the monopoly evil. He argued against incorporate stock holdings whereby one company is able to own a controlling interest in another and asserted that with federal incorporation and supervision business affairs could be conducted to the benefit of the public and the satisfaction of the commercial world.

BOOK COMPANY LOSES SUIT

St. Paul School Board May Change Text Books at Pleasure.

The St. Paul school board has won its fight with the American Book company in the matter of the change in geography text books made last January.

The state supreme court, in a decision written by Justice George L. Bunn, affirmed the decision made some months ago by Judge William Louis Kelly of the Ramsey county district court.

It is held that the statutes governing the actions of trustees of common and independent school districts do not apply to the St. Paul board of school inspectors, the state law being inconsistent with the provisions of the city charter.

The St. Paul school board is therefore not bound in its action by the state law providing that text books be adopted for a period of not less than three nor more than five years.

Roosevelt Writes on Retarding of Progress in Alaska.

New York, July 23.—Theodore Roosevelt has an article on the development of Alaska in the last issue of the Outlook. He declares two factors to be responsible for retarding progress in this direction: "Great capitalists who wished to 'develop' Alaska by making enormous fortunes for themselves outside of and in defiance of the law," and the congressmen who "under pretense of hostility to the corporations, decline to permit the passage of legislation which will enable them to do their work honestly and to develop the coal fields with a fair profit to themselves, while doing justice to others."

Chairman Dillingham Names Sub-Committee to Look Into Case.

Washington, July 23.—Chairman Dillingham of the senate committee on privileges and elections has appointed Senators Heyburn, Sutherland, Bradley, Bailey and Paynter as a sub-committee to suggest what recommendation shall be made to the senate on the request for an investigation of the election of Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin.

Senator Clapp, a Republican progressive member of the committee, asked to be excused from service on the sub-committee.

Labor Men Must Face Trial.

Washington, July 25.—Declaring that the attack made upon him before a congressional committee by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor left him no alternative but to proceed with the trial to the end Justice Wright of the District supreme court reiterated his refusal to certify the contempt cases of the three labor leaders, Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison, to some other member of the court.

FAMOUS CHORUS IS COMING

Upsala Male Singers to Give Limited Number of Concerts in the United States—Fourth of July Fittingly Celebrated at Christiania—Well Known Copenhagen Banker Goes to Jail for Defrauding Creditors.

SWEDEN.

The most interesting news that has reached Swedish-Americans for some time from the other side is the fact that the famous Upsala Male Chorus, "Orphei Drangar," considered to be the greatest in the world, will tour America and give a limited number of concerts in some of the largest cities in the United States. The tour will commence in December and will be under the leadership of the well known impressario, Gustaf Thalberg. The director of the chorus is Hugo Alfven, who some years ago succeeded Ivar Hedenblad as leader of the great Upsala chorus. He is justly regarded as one of Sweden's greatest song composers and has gained an international reputation. The Upsala Male Chorus has captured world prizes for its singing at Paris and Berlin and no one disputes their claim to being the world's leading male chorus. Their appearance in the United States will be an event which will interest Swedish-Americans especially and their concerts in New York, Chicago, Boston, Washington, D. C.; St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha and Seattle will undoubtedly be red letter events in the musical history of the Swedish people.

Dowager Queen Sofia celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday July 9. She spent the day quietly at Eriksberg, where she received a visit from the king and queen and all other members of the Swedish royal family who are in the country at present. Flags floated from all the public buildings in honor of her birthday and the cafes, restaurants and theaters were also decorated in the national colors. The "Sofiahemmet," which may be said to be her favorite institution and for which she has done so much in former years, was on her birthday remembered by a gift of 100,000 crowns. This money will be used for the establishment of a special medical clinic and department at the great hospital, where thousands of patients have received proper care and had their lives prolonged. Dowager Queen Sofia has given away several fortunes for worthy causes and is perhaps the most philanthropic royal personage in Europe. She is still enjoying fairly good health.

There is a society known as the Swedish Jerusalem society. As its name indicates it is especially active in the Holy Land. Its work is confined largely to Bethlehem and its immediate vicinity. The work was begun seven years ago and consists mostly in caring for the sick. Dr. Ribling is at the head of the mission and is assisted by three other helpers. He is overwhelmed with patients, having at times as many as 150 a day. His home is besieged with all kinds of sick people. It has become necessary to build a hospital and efforts are now being made to raise money for that purpose.

Some seventy members of the Evangelical Lutheran Mission society in Stockholm withdrew from the society and have organized a new one to be known as the Rosenius society. The organization is counting on at least 150 members from the old society. They are hoping to have also three of the board members of the old society unite with them. Axel B. Swensson is to be the pastor of the new organization. It is planning on building a new church in Stockholm, which is to be called the Rosenius church.

The American multimillionaire, Joseph Fels, from Philadelphia, recently paid a visit to Stockholm and while there delivered a lecture on Henry George and his tax system. "Wealth," said the American millionaire to his Swedish audience, "is the result of nothing but out and out thievery." A Swedish paper pertly asks why the American millionaire does not rid himself of all that he owns at once and be done with it.

Axel Hansson, one of the leading actors on the Stockholm stage, was drowned July 9 while bathing at a Danish watering place, known as Hornbeak, about two miles east of Halsingor. The deceased was born in 1869 and was regarded as one of Sweden's greatest actors of the modern school.

Sweden consumed liquor to the amount of 114,200,000 crowns during the year of 1904 is the statement of Professor Langer, a temperance leader of Gothenburg. Since that time, however, the amount of liquor consumed in the country has been considerably lessened.

Sweden's population has increased 44,077 during the year 1910. The total population in Sweden at present is 5,520,518. More than 27,000 persons emigrated to foreign countries last year.

NORWAY.

A Christiania correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal says: "It is not only in the States that it is called the "Glorious Fourth," for far away in Norway it has its glory, undiminished for all who have ever become American citizens; and here in Christiania it was celebrated in good style and without killing anybody either by fireworks or otherwise. In fact, the American club this year arranged the best festival in its history and the Fourth was celebrated by a banquet at the Holmenkollen hotel, where seventy persons assembled. The presence of the new American minister, Lauritz Swenson of Minnesota, lent much dignity to the gathering, and a toast of welcome was drank after a speech in his honor had been delivered by Harry Randall, also a former citizen of the state of Minnesota. Mr. Gade of Chicago, formerly Norwegian consul at that city, delivered the speech of the day, and afterwards Mr. Swenson spoke to the toast for Norway. After the banquet the orchestra started playing and the dancing continued until 2 a. m., when a special car took the whole party back to the city. Altogether this was the most pleasant affair which the American club in Christiania could have arranged and it promises fair to make the club a strong one in the future. The city at the present time is full of visiting Americans and many were present at the celebration."

Since the death of Alexander Kjelland there is perhaps no author in Norway who has so successfully pictured the animal life and nature as Sophus Aars. His recent work entitled, "Stories of Hunting and Fishing," is regarded by all who are fond of outdoor life as one of the best written and most comprehensively interesting books that has made its appearance for many a day in Norway. Any one who has been in Norway will enjoy his book and it ought to be found in every Norwegian home on both sides of the Atlantic.

O. A. Overland, the historian, is dead. Through his death Norway has lost its greatest historian of the present day. He was the author of the "History of Norway," a work which occupied his attention for over thirty years. He also has written numerous other historical works and biographical sketches of great men, which are standard works to be found in any well equipped Norwegian library of the present day.

Norway will be well represented at the Olympian games to be held at Stockholm next summer. There will be not less than 140 sportsmen and athletes to participate in the various contests. A great deal of interest is being evinced in all parts of the country and the representatives that will do the honors for Norway are leaving no stone unturned so far as active preparations are concerned.

A distressing drowning accident occurred about two weeks ago at Saltdalen when eighteen persons were on their way in a large rowboat to attend services in a country church. The boat struck a rock in the middle of the river and capsized. Only five out of the eighteen were saved. Those who drowned were women and children.

The two women who qualified for service on the police force in Christiania are not very well satisfied. One of the good ladies has retired from that kind of work completely, but the other one has been placed in charge of a woman's ward in the city prison.

The city of Drammen celebrated its 100th anniversary recently. Among the distinguished guests who participated in the festivities were King Haakon and Queen Maud.

A Norwegian meteorological station is to be erected at Spitsbergen. Work on the station is to commence during the latter part of August.

The well known Copenhagen banker, enthusiastic sportsman and automobilist, Hans Meyring, has been sentenced to jail for a period of ten months, and on "bread and water" at that, for having defrauded depositors in his bank of a sum of money amounting to over 20,000 crowns. The assistant cashier in the Meyring bank also has been arrested for a similar offense.

The national railways did not do quite as large a business during the month of May, 1910, as they did the year previous. The income of the railways in May this year was 3,670,000 crowns, as compared with 3,877,798 crowns in May, 1910.

From Copenhagen it is learned that Bishop van Euch of the Danish Catholic church has received permission from his holiness, the pope, to establish a Danish nunnery. The new order is to be officially dedicated and established Oct. 1.

It is rumored that the Nobel literary prize will be awarded to the Danish poet, Ernst von de Ricke, this year. In former years it has been given to such notables as Bjornsjerne Bjornson and Rudyard Kipling.

A prominent Copenhagen brewer, who donated a fine new spire for the Frue church in Copenhagen, has been informed by the pastor of that church that his congregation cannot accept his gift.

Author Rolf Harbo proposes a monument for the volunteers of '64 to be erected at some suitable place in the Danish capital.

FOREIGN NEWS.

While greater optimism prevails at the French capital it is admitted that negotiations with Germany regarding the Moroccan affair remain difficult. The statement of Premier Asquith in the British house of commons and Premier Caillaux's advice to the French to keep cool and be prudent, relieved the tension at a moment when relief was most needed and the discreet military preparations of the government were giving rise to the apprehension that war was not impossible.

Premier Laurier and the Liberal government of Canada have decided to place their political future in the hands of the electorate of the Dominion, to be decided almost entirely on the reciprocity issue. A general election will be called within two months and upon the result, which will be governed largely by the attitude of the people for or against reciprocity, will depend the continued political ascendency of the Liberal party.

The most pessimistic views regarding the acuteness of the Moroccan crisis were largely confirmed by the British prime minister in the house of commons when, with a manner as impressive as his words, he read from a manuscript which had been carefully prepared a warning to Germany that Great Britain proposed to stand for what she considered her rights and to maintain the balance of power in Europe.

The revolutionary crisis in Haiti, with the fall of President Simon's government apparently inevitable, caused the navy department to order the scout cruiser Salem, sister of the Chester and one of the swiftest boats in the navy, to Port au Prince to reinforce the American warships patrolling the coast of the republic.

The big Canadian Pacific liner Empress of China is fast on a submerged reef off Nojima Saki light, forty miles from Yokohama. Her passengers were transferred to the mainland in small boats from two Japanese cruisers, which were summoned by wireless.

After the most thrilling contest in the history of cross country aviation, Lieutenant Conneau, who races under the name of Andre Beaumont, won the $50,000 prize offered by the London Daily Mail for a successful flight around England and Scotland.

Scenes of wild disorder marked the session of the house of commons. Half a dozen times Premier Asquith rose to move consideration of the lords' amendments to the parliamentary bill and each time he was howled down by a terrific din.

"Permit a vote to be taken in parliament on reciprocity or we will take a vote of the Canadian people on it without delay," is the ultimatum Prime Minister Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed to the Conservative opposition in parliament.

The steamer John Irwin struck a rock and sank off Beaver Harbor, N. S. Willie McLeod of Halifax was washed ashore on a hatch and it is believed he is the only survivor of the dozen or more men in the steamer's crew.

The eleventh parliament of Canada has passed out of existence and upon the political complexion of the new one to be elected Sept. 21 will depend the fate of the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada.

The Haitian revolution is spreading in the south, where heretofore it has made little progress. The town of Jeremie has risen in favor of General Callisthene Fourchard, Haytian minister to Germany.

That a better day is dawning in China is forcefully shown in the report from one of the western provinces of the empire, where 1,000,000 acres formerly given over to opium culture are now growing wheat.

The small boy who has not seen the elephants and kangaroo in the big circus parade by the time he is ten or eleven years old has missed a legitimate part of his training, and his daddie is open to pretty severe criticism.

It's a mighty dry season when the crab grass cannot find moisture enough where the joints touch the earth to warrant its sending out roots. Yet luckily this is the pickle that a whole lot of this grass is in in many localities this year. Incidentally it makes the pulling job a whole lot easier.

The title of bird man has certainly been earned by Vedrines, a French aviator who recently covered a distance of seventy-seven miles at a speed of 155 miles per hour. This exceeds by a good deal the speed at which any human being has ever traveled and equals or surpasses the speed of the fleetest birds.

A Montana ranchman who was "baching it" mistook white arsenic for baking powder in preparing a batch of biscuits, ate of it and died. The incident points to the wisdom of plainly labeling cans containing powders and other substances used in cooking and of bachelors making early negotiations for competent and permanent housekeepers.

Figures for the first three months of the present year on certificates of pure breeding required by customs officials for the free entry into the country of animals intended for breeding purposes show that 710 horses were imported into the United States. Of this number 337 were Percheron, 252 Belgian draft, 65 Shire, 20 Shetland, 15 Clydesdale, 13 Welsh ponies, 6 Hackney and 1 thoroughbred (trotter).

Recent weeks have seen considerable discussion in the public press relative to the efficacy of prayer in bringing rain. While there is just about as much evidence to show that "effectual fervent prayer" will bring rain as there is that it will not, the prudent man will keep right on stirring his dust mulch and conserving the subsoil moisture along with his praying. Then if a rain does come he is just so much the better off.

Plowing the stubble as soon as the grain is cut is not only to be commended as a means of preventing myriads of weeds from seeding, but in sections where damage to wheat by the Hessian fly is possible it tends to reduce this pest to a minimum. If volunteer wheat appears in the field it should be disked under, and the seeding of the wheat should be deferred as late as will be consistent with the grain getting a good foothold before cold weather sets in.

The cottage cheese of our grandmothers that was cooked hard, a bit tough and made into round balls was good, but a much finer quality can be made of slightly soured milk by bringing it to a little above blood heat, say 110 degrees, allowing curd and whey to separate and then straining through fine sieve or cheesecloth. The cheese should then be salted and put in a cool place. As portions are desired for the table they should be dressed with butter or rich cream. Fixed in this manner cottage cheese is a most appetizing dish and nutritious as well.

The report of the condition of the cotton crop issued July 5 by the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture is a most encouraging one and indicates that all records will be broken if present favorable conditions continue. The report shows that on June 25, the time the last data was gathered, the condition of the cotton crop was 88.2 per cent of a normal as compared with 87.8 on May 25, 1911; 80.7 on June 25, 1910, 74.6 on June 25, 1909, and 80 per cent the June average for the past ten years. Not only is the condition of the crop the best this year but the acreage is larger by considerable than in any previous year.

The other day the writer ran across the following data relative to the success which one northern Mississippi valley farmer had achieved in the operation of a thirty-four acre farm. It will be of interest to those who are practicing an intensive type of agriculture and to those whose means do not justify the purchase of a quarter or half section farm. The farmer in question keeps twelve cows, from 100 to 125 hogs and eight head of horses. He buys all his oats and corn and rents grass land and puts up his own hay. He gets a revenue of from $50 to $60 per month from his cows and last year sold $2,000 worth of Duroc Jersey hogs, which we infer were pure bred. In his feeding operations he bought 1,500 bushels of grain which cost an average price of 32 cents. This farm owner figures that his thirty-four acres netted him $100 per acre last season.

The Germans use the following method of testing the age of eggs: A saturated solution of common salt forms the testing bath. If the egg is perfectly fresh it will lie in a horizontal position at the bottom of the vessel. An egg from three to five days old has an elevation of the flat end such that its long axis forms an angle of twenty degrees. With an egg eight days old the axis has an inclination of forty-five degrees. At three weeks old the angle increases to seventy-five degrees, while at a month old it floats vertically upon its pointed end. The above method of determining the age of eggs holds only with those that have been kept in the open air and not to those that have been pickled or preserved. Neither would the rule hold in a moist climate, as the rate of evaporation, to which the increase in the air space in the egg is due, would be considerably reduced.

If ever the Irish potato was justified in insisting on being called by its scientific botanical name it is this season, when it is on display on the markets at all the way from $2.50 to $3.50 per bushel. Solanum tuberosum is the fitting and proper designation, if you please, and no such crude or provincial appellation as "tater" or "Murphy" will pass muster.

The state of Pennsylvania is macadamizing her rural highways at a cost varying from $6,000 to $12,000 per mile and in the course of the next few years intends to devote $50,000,000 or more for this purpose. This is quite a sum of money; but, distributed and borne by a state tax, it would amount to much less per acre than the increased value of such lands which would result from the better roads.

With a ton of fresh barnyard manure worth $2.25, a value set as a result of practical field tests, a ton of corncobs would be worth a little less than a dollar from the standpoint of the fertilizing elements which they contain, which would be 4.6 pounds of nitrogen, an eighteenth of a pound of phosphorus and 3.8 pounds of potassium. Cobs contain some humus, but it requires some time to reduce them.

If reports can be credited the Pacific coast has experienced a potato shortage as well as states farther east. A lady living in Portland is said to have gone to a local grocer a short time ago and asked for 10 cents' worth of new potatoes. The clerk handed her two. She remarked that the price was too high and that she would take a quarter's worth of old ones. Thereupon the clerk handed her five. Just what she did or said at this juncture is not reported.

Owing to the fact that the roots of alfalfa plants penetrate the soil to a great depth, it is more than likely that in time they would clog any system of drain tile that might be laid within six or eight feet of the surface. Better is it to sow alfalfa on only that land that is naturally well drained.

It is the comparatively small number of weeds that mature their crop of seed unmolested after the crops in which they grow are laid by that furnish the supply of weed seed for the following year. A little work from this on will rid the garden of the weeds and greatly reduce the weed nuisance for another year.

The white grub, the larval stage of the familiar June bug, is a hard pest to contend with in a piece of ground which is devoted to a tilled crop. However, they can be very effectually cleaned out of a piece of ground which is being prepared for a crop by turning in a bunch of hogs that consider the grubs a juicy treat and will sometimes root the soil up to a depth of a couple of feet to get them.

The progressive sheep raisers of Australia have adopted a new method as a preliminary to shearing their sheep. Instead of clipping the wool, dirt, grease and all, as is the quite general practice, those who have plenty of water for the purpose scrub, wash and clean their sheep just before shearing. As a result they are saved paying freight on dirt and grease and also realize the highest prices for their fine, clean wool.

It is to be hoped that in the near future some broad minded and influential member of congress will secure favorable consideration for a bill which will protect migratory or interstate birds. That there is need of this is shown in the statement recently published that in the state of Georgia alone last year 75,000 of our northern meadow larks were slaughtered to satisfy the greed of a lot of pothunters, who probably realized from 8 to 10 cents a dozen for the birds.

THIEF RIVER FALLS

It is the same with quack grass and Canada thistles as with bad habits—a whole lot easier to be careless and let them get a foothold than to root them out afterward. The secret of eradication is the same with all—vigilance, persistence and perseverance.

That piece of ground which failed to give a stand of corn because of cutworms or which was too wet in the spring may be made to do duty yet by putting it to millet or buckwheat. Either will yield a paying crop and, besides this, will keep the weeds in subjection.

FAIR BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Largest Attendance and Most Exhibits in History of the Fair Association.

Pennington County Fair Promises to Be the Feature of Northern Minnesota.

Despite inclement weather, an aeroplane which refused to go up on scheduled time, and an exciting school election which proved a strong counter attraction, the first Pennington County Fair held last week was the most successful in many ways of any fair held by the local fair association. As the Pennington County Fair is to be an annual event, it is gratifying to see such a large attendance and such a wide interest in the exhibits this year, and it is planned to make the fair bigger and better every year until it becomes the chief attraction in the northern part of the state.

Wednesday, the first day of the fair, though always a poor one as regards to attendance, was the best in years, and the large number of exhibits that came passing in kept the fair officials busy ticketing and placing them. Thomas McGoey, the aviator did not make his promised two flights owing, as he said to a high wind, but in the evening made a short flight alighting in a meadow outside of the fair grounds. A ball game that afternoon between Red Lake Falls and the "Indians" resulted in a score of 10 to 2 in favor of the local team.

Thursday, though cloudy and threatening rain, was the big day of the fair. The trains coming into Thief River were packed to the doors and it is estimated that the attendance at the fair was between four and five thousand. Four races were ran in the afternoon which resulted in several close heats and exciting finishes. The grand stand was packed with pleasure seekers and the overflow extended on both sides of the grand stand and inside the track. The results of the Thursday races follow:

Gentlemen's Trotting Race

1—Erandale, McAndress	1-2-3
2—Moscow, Buse	2-1-1
3—Melrose, Whalen	3-3-2

2:30 Trot or Pace

1—Bonney Low, Buse	2-3-3-1
2—Friday, Ralston	1-2-1-2
3—Ben Butler, O'Conner	3-1-2-3

1—Nellie M., Blake	1-1-1
2—Blackford Jr., Ralston	2-2-2
3—Lothart, Scott	3-3-3

2:15 Trot or Pace

1—Red Van, O'Conner	3-3-3
2—Catherine S., O'Conner	2-2-2
3—Parkwood, Kimble	1-1-1

Owing to trouble with his engines, McGoey did not make a flight that afternoon although the weather conditions were alright. At 4:30 he was ordered by the fair officials to make an attempt but when the machine was brought out on the field a drizzling rain set in and the aviator preferred sitting under his machine to flying in the rain. The large crowd which was present were naturally disappointed, but the fault seemed to lie with the birdman who did not have his machine in order. A ball game between Warren and Thief River was called in the fourth inning on account of rain with a score of 5 to 0 in favor of Warren. The rain which continued all evening put somewhat of a damper on the festivities and the street shows failed to reap their expected harvest, though a large number were bent upon having a good time whether it rained or not.

Friday, the closing day, the judges were kept busy awarding the prizes and premiums.—The exhibits this year both in quantity and quality surpassed those of previous years and the officers of the association were greatly pleased over this feature. In the afternoon the first race of four scheduled, the farmers running race was held, when the crowd commenced leaving the grounds to vote at the school election. As but few returned the remaining races were called off and some of the free attractions postponed until evening. The aeroplane made its record flight of the fair at that time, though comparatively few were present to witness it. The machine rose to about 200 feet in the air and flew west about three miles when unable to turn around in the wind it lit and returned to the fair grounds in the evening.

The street shows remained in the city till Saturday evening, prolonging the fair one day for the residents of Thief River and getting some of the coin the rain beat them out of. Saturday evening a balloon ascension took place down town. This event was scheduled for the three nights of the fair—but was postponed on account of the weather.

When to Thresh.

The last sheaf of the harvest is hardly in shock before a number of farmers are anxious to thresh; and seldom a season passes that some farmer in the community doesn't find himself in a quandary to know when is the best time to thresh.

There are many things that may be said, both for and against shock-threshing and stack threshing; and, in deciding what to do, the farmer must be guided largely by his particular case and the conditions to be met.

Shock threshing appeals to many farmers, from the fact that when it is over there is nothing to hinder taking up the general fall work and hastening its completion without delay. Others are favorable to stack-threshing; but, having had variable successes in getting their grain well stacked in previous seasons, they are inclined to favor shock threshing.

If shock threshing is really practical, it will be found so upon either the large farm, where there is ample help to carry on the work, or where three or four farmers can co-operate and supply the necessary help. No attempt should be made to start a run of more than six to eight days of steady threshing; as this will usually occupy about two weeks, and possibly longer. A longer run would mean that the grain of the last farmer to be threshed for would be exposed to more or less rain; and, no matter how well shocked, some damage is bound to result. With shock threshing, the grain must sweat in the bin; and, where threshing is resumed too soon after rain, serious damage to its quality is bound to occur. The most satisfactory way to apportion the possible damage in shock threshing among a group of four or five farms is to start in and thresh a full day on each farm, and then complete the threshing on these farms, taking them in reverse order.

Stack threshing may appear a trifle more expensive than shock threshing; but it has in return several things that commend it to the small farmer, or to the farmer who is following diversified farming. Stack threshed grain usually brings a premium of one or two cents per bushel over the average of shock threshed grain, because of its better color and weight. The threshing usually takes place after many of the fall rains are over; and, as a consequence, the straw is saved in much better shape, and is far more useful for feeding.

Experience has shown that the chances of waste and damage are more numerous with shock threshing than with stack threshing, and as all cannot be first in shock threshing, it is well not to forget how to build a good grain stack.—O. M. Olson, Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

DITCH FIGHT NOT OVER YET

Supreme Court Issues Writ of Certiorari Upon Judge of 14th Judicial District.

Ditch Starts in Town of Numedal and Extends 50 Miles West to Red River.

The following clipping from the Crookston Times will be of interest to Pennington county farmers as it concerns judicial ditch No. 25 which has been established but not yet built. Many of the farmers in Pennington county are opposed to the ditch, claiming the assessments will be greater than the benefits received. The ditch starts in the town of Numedal in the northwestern part of the county and extends west to the Red River through Polk and Marshall counties. The clipping follows:

Friday Attorney W. E. Rowe returned from St. Paul and continued to Warren, where he served a writ of certiorari upon Judge Grindeland. The writ was issued by the Supreme court of the state and orders the judges of the 14th judicial district to certify all the proceedings thus far taken in Judicial Ditch No. 25 to the supreme court where the entire proceedings will be reviewed.

The ditch was established by Judge Grindeland and is about 50 miles long, beginning in Pennington county and running west to the Red river, mostly in Polk county, but about six miles in Marshall county.

Hundreds of farmers protested against the construction of the ditch in northern and western Polk, including many staunch friends of drainage, believing it will ruin their land by keeping overflow water thereon.

There is no provision for appeal where a judicial ditch is ordered, and the only means of securing the same end is a writ of certiorari, which is rather unusual and the result in effect is practically the same, as the matter comes before the supreme court in that manner instead of the usual appeal route.

Crookston Man Sells Patent.

It can be stated upon reliable authority today that A. O. Espe, of Crookston, has sold his patent rights to his last gasoline engine to the Avery Co., of Peoria, Ill., for $25,000 spot cash and a life position as machinist in the Avery factory at $200 per month. His family will leave Crookston in a short time for Peoria to reside permanently.

Mr. Espe left last Friday evening for Peoria to close the deal, following a visit to Crookston of the president of the Avery company last week, when Mr. Espe made a proposition for selling out. Mr. Espe last Friday received a telegram that his offer would be accepted and left that night for Peoria and the deal was definitely closed today.

Mr. Espe invented another engine for the manufacture of which the Universal Tractor Co. was organized and is manufacturing the engine at Stillwater now, Mr. Espe having been frozen out of the concern and other Crookston parties also lost money.

Many friends of Mr. Espe will rejoice in his good fortune, for while it is believed his invention is worth more than the amount he received, the $25,000 cash and $200 a month will give him an income which will keep him in comfort for the rest of his life very handily.

A plan was put on foot some time ago to organize a company here and put the engine on the market, but those who had the money were afraid of the cars and the Avery company realizing the value of the invention, secured the plum.—Crookston Times.

EXCITEMENT RAN HIGH

Dr. Mellby Elected to Board of Education over Mrs. Bishop by 296 Votes.

Men and Women Desert Fair to Vote —Polls Packed for Three Hours.

In one of the most exciting elections ever held in this city Dr. O. F. Mellby was elected as a member of the board of education over Mrs. J. M. Bishop at the special election held last Friday afternoon by a majority of over 296 votes. Dr. Mellby received 585 votes to Mrs. Bishop's 289, 894 votes being cast in all.

The election which was called for 3 o'clock in the afternoon proved a stronger attraction than the horse races and aeroplane flight at the fair and as the time for the polls to open drew near, the men and women interested in the outcome of the race went to the polling place at the Central school house in droves. Automobiles and teams did a rushing business and in a short time the school hall was jammed so tightly that no more could get in and those already in had a hard time getting out. Though it had been intended to keep the polls open only one hour, it was decided to keep them open to six when the size of the "angry mob" was seen. In that short time nearly 900 votes were cast, the judges working constantly to keep up with the number of voters.

After the election was over a large crowd waited near the school house to hear the result and there was much elation and disappointment when Dr. Melby was announced the victor. The interest in the election has been at a high level the week preceding, and considerable argument and electioneering for the opposing candidates took place. Dr. Melby was elected for a two year term and succeeds D. P. O'Neill whose election to the state legislature disqualified him for member of the school board.

Boys' Judging Contest at State Fair.

A new educational feature will be introduced at the Minnesota State Fair this year, in the form of a contest between boys, under 21 years of age, in judging live stock, wheat and corn. Eleven prizes will be awarded, in the form of scholarships in the Schools of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park, Crookston and Morris—the winner of each prize to choose the school. The prizes (to be paid in cash) amount in the aggregate to $600; ranging from $25 to $100 each.

On the ability of the farmer to correctly measure, by inspection, the comparative value of different individual horses, cattle or swine and to judge correctly of the quality of different samples of seed corn or wheat, depends in a large measure his success or failure in the conduct of his farm. Hence the importance attached by agricultural instructors to the cultivation of such ability, and the recognition the art now receives from the fair management. For full information as to terms of competition, address "Secretary of State Agricultural Society, Fair Grounds, St. Paul, Minn."

Progressives Organize.

At a meeting held last Thursday in the register of deeds office a number of Republicans organized a Pennington County Progressive League. Resolutions were passed endorsing the progressive movement in politics and the following officers elected:

President—Andrew Trovaten.
Secretary—E. L. Quist.
Executive committee—1st Dist., W. S. Hunt; 2d Dist., Harry E. Ives; 3d Dist., Emil Ness; 4th Dist., D. Patterson; 5th Dist., Peter Hedin.

Land Show at St. Paul.

As a result of a conference held in Duluth last week, Minnesota business interests have "gotten together" to collect the finest and most complete exhibit of the products of the state which has ever been brought together. The exhibit will first be shown at the Northwestern Land Products Show which is to be held in St. Paul December 12 to 23.

After the land show is over the exhibit may be installed in one of the large railroad centers of the state for permanent display. Those who have determined on securing such an exhibit are members of a committee named by Governor Eberhart some time ago to see that the state is properly represented at the coming land show when six states to the west of Minnesota will make exhibits.

George Welsh, commissioner of immigration has been instructed to assist in this work, it being the belief of the board of immigration of Minnesota that the state will derive much permanent good from exhibiting at land shows and that a complete exhibit of the state's products should be secured perhaps, for a permanent display.

Besides agricultural products of the state the exhibit will contain one of the finest mineral displays ever shown. This alone will cost a big sum and is to be furnished by the steel companies of the Duluth district. The timber display will be another feature and will show not only native woods but finished products of the timber in a hundred different forms. The forestry department is working on this display.

An aquarium full of native fish; an aviary containing specimens of wild birds, together with a few deer and moose, will add to the interest of the exhibit. Commissioner Welsh is desirous of receiving exhibits from any one who has high class samples of Minnesota products.

Wasted Eggs.

Two eggs out of every dozen laid by Minnesota hens may be said to drop through holes in the farmer's basket before they reach a market. In other words, while the hen sees to it that every egg she lays is worth taking care of, the farmer takes proper care of only ten. The aggregate loss from this cause reaches over a million dollars annually. Nearly all those eggs may be saved by a better arrangement of poultry houses, a better system in collecting eggs, and by co-operation in quick marketing. Several egg associations are showing us how to do it, and some day nearly all that million dollars will nestle in the farmer's pocket instead of going to waste.

Make Large Shocks.

An early fall seems to be coming. This means that the fodder corn will have to stand in the field and be subject to all the adverse conditions of the fall season. It will be necessary, therefore, to use care in setting up the shocks. Rather large shocks will expose less surface to the weather. The band should be placed high and drawn tight. If necessary to hold the stalks all firmly to the shock, two bands should be used. After the corn is field cured the shocks may be reset, combining two, three or more into one. This has been found practical, and it will add much to the value of the fodder.—C. P. Bull, Minn. College of Agriculture.

Head On Collision.

Saturday afternoon a head on collision took place on the Soo between Thief River Falls and Warren, and a large delegation of Warrenites at the fair, including the band, were compelled to return via Crookston, arriving there Sunday morning and going out on the G. N. Flyer Monday morning. No one was injured in the wreck, but the property loss was pretty heavy in smashed-in cars, etc.

SAVINGS BANK PLACED HERE

Postmaster Kratka Receives Notice That Local Office is Designated as Postal Savings Bank.

Bank Will Open August 25—Government Will Pay 2 Per Cent on Your Money.

Postmaster F. H. Kratka this week received notice from Washington that the Thief River Falls post office has been designated as a postal savings bank and will begin operations August 25. While it is not expected that the deposits will run to any great sum the location of a postal savings bank here is another indication of the city's growth and importance.

The establishing of postal savings banks by the government is a new departure and one that is proving very popular in some localities. The postal savings bill went into effect last January and the first postal savings bank designated in this state was located at Bemidji. At different intervals other post offices were named as depositories of funds and at the present time there are about 20 in the state and more being located every day. Thief River Falls is the first city to be designated as a postal bank in this section of the state.

As postal savings banks are operated at present any person a patron of the local postoffice may open an account. Not more than $100 may be deposited in any one month, and not more than $500 without converting the amount into a government bond. The government pays two per cent interest on the deposits but when $500 has been deposited, the depositor can purchase a government bond which pays two and a half per cent interest. The government reserves the right to pay off their bonds any time within a year. Deposits are made in units of a dollar, but special stamps for any sum under a dollar may be purchased, and deposited when a dollar is saved. Any further information concerning the operation of the bank may be had at the local office.

Owing to the stability of the local banks and the fact that this is a farming country is not expected to make the deposits here run very high.

Some Threshing.

A report from Germantown shows that the promise of bumper crops this year is being fulfilled in oats at least. Frank Kaiz a farmer living near Germantown recently threshed out 80 bushels of oats to the acre and a neighbor threshed out 90. This is certainly going some and is good news when threshing has just commenced.

The latest arguments put forward in favor of the skunk is that he is one of the best of rat catchers and a voracious consumer of cutworms, army worms, tobacco worms, white grubs and May beetles, as well as grasshoppers and crickets. Investigations which have been made as to the economic value of the skunk class it as an animal entitled to man's protection.

It is estimated that a circular barn can be built at from 30 to 40 per cent less than the common rectangular barn of like capacity. More than this, the circular barn is stronger and can be more conveniently arranged on the interior. About the only drawback with the circular structure is that not one man in ten knows how to put one up nor relishes the job even if he does know how.

Stockholm Bank Loses 31,000 Crowns, the Robbery Occurring in Broad Daylight—Norway Refuses to Accept the Minnesota "Rune Stone" as Genuine—Mysterious Suicide of a Young Finnish Woman in Copenhagen.

SWEDEN.

One of the biggest bank robberies on record occurred at the Stockholmsbank in Stockholm July 10. The thieves were three in number and made away with 31,000 crowns. The robbery took place at about 11:30 a. m., when people were coming and going on the commodious floor of the bank building. One of the assistants to the cashier, a woman, was at the cashier's window for a few moments and while stepping outside of the cashier's cage to bring a letter of credit to another window the package of bills, amounting to 31,000 crowns in all, was gone. All the woman knew was that she saw three men standing not far away from her window, but she had paid no particular attention to them. The following morning a man about fifty years old, who gave his name as James William Taylor, was arrested at Helsingborg, where he was about to board a boat for Copenhagen. He was followed by detectives from Stockholm, who traced him to a store which he entered and asked for something that was not for sale there. While he was asking the clerk in the store to look around for what he wanted, but which they did not have in stock, he attempted to hide something under his coat, which looked like a large roll of paper. The detectives placed him under arrest when he left the store and took him to the police station, where 11,000 crowns were found on his person. He confessed at once that he, together with two other companions, had stolen the money. On July 12 the Stockholm detectives arrested a second thief, who was also found in Helsingborg, giving his name as Alfred Dyprey, and claiming that his home was in Montreal, Canada. The third party has not yet been found.

It may be interesting for a number of Swedish-American readers to know that a marriage certificate from this country has up to this time not been legal in Sweden. In other words, if a Swedish couple has been married in this country by a pastor of the Augustana church or some other Swedish-American church organization and moved to Sweden to live their marriage has not been considered legal. The matter came to a point last year when the attention of the Swedish minister of justice was called to it and now Count Ehrensvard, the Swedish minister at Washington, D. C., has submitted a letter to the Swedish foreign department in which he suggests that marriages performed by pastors of the Augustana church, the "Evangeliska Missionsforbundet," the Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, as well as those belonging to the Protestant Episcopal church in this country, may be regarded legal in Sweden.

The Swedenborgians of Stockholm are about to erect a church of their own and the same will likely be erected in the beautiful Tegner park. Peculiarly enough the so called Swedenborg church has but few followers in Sweden, which was the home of Emanuel Swedenborg, the founder of that church. But in England and the United States there are many Swedenborgian churches and congregations. There is a Swedenborg congregation in Gothenburg, but with the one in Stockholm it is the only two in the entire country.

The Swedish-American Republican league of Illinois is taking the initiative in a widespread movement among Illinois Swedes to erect a monument in honor of Captain John Ericksson, inventor of the Monitor, the little "Yankee cheese box" which defeated the Merrimac in Hampton Roads during the Civil war. A number of architects have submitted models for the monument, which will be erected in a conspicuous place in Lincoln park, Chicago. The monument will cost at least $25,000.

King Gustaf and Queen Victoria have been invited by Emperor William to participate with him in the review of the Second Army corps of the German army, which will close its annual field maneuvers in Stettin Aug. 29. King Gustaf, who is chief of a Grenadier cavalry regiment, will lead his regiment in person.

NORWAY.

A recent cablegram from Christiania says: Norway refuses to accept as genuine the "rune stone" from Kensington, Minn., which has been on exhibition for a few days at Christiania university. Professor Hiegstad of the university, an expert in the runic letters and in old Norse language, took the floor after the lecture by H. R. Holand, who brought the stone here, and pointed out reasons why, he asserted, the stone could not be genuine. Dr. Hiegstad declared that it must have been made as late as 1865. The similar endings of the verbs in the singular and plural was unknown in the olden times, says Professor Hiegstad, but have resulted from the modernization of the language in the last century. The expression "opdagelses expedition" (expedition of discovery) was unknown 400 years ago, he declared, and had not been used earlier than the year 1700. For these and several other reasons Professor Hiegstad pronounced the stone a fraud. Other points were raised by Dr. Wallem in attacking claims made in regard to the stone and these points were not cleared by Mr. Holand to the satisfaction of the scientists attending the meeting. In his lecture Mr. Holand told of the discovery on a Minnesota farm and gave his reading of the inscription, which sets forth that a Norwegian expedition reached Minnesota from the old country in 1362. Mr. Holand has been the object of much interest here and has secured much publicity. He has visited the newspapers and given interview after interview about the stone, saying it has been accepted as genuine by the Minnesota State Historical society and by a large majority of American scientists. The press has treated Mr. Holand and the Kensington stone with skepticism from the start and it is now asserted that the story will never be accepted in this country. Mr. Holand did not lose courage and is returning to the United States with the stone, saying that his countrymen in Norway are prejudiced against him.

The Minneapolis Tidende published an item some time ago to the effect that ex-Premier Michelsen of Norway would come to the United States to make the dedicatory address at the laying of the new corner stone of the Sons of Norway building, which is under course of erection in Fargo at present. According to a Norwegian paper from Christiania this is not so and Mr. Michelsen has no intention of visiting America at present.

SENATOR NELSON MAY RETIRE

Minnesotan Seriously Considering Leaving Public Life.

A Washington dispatch says there is a possibility that Senator Nelson of Minnesota will not be a candidate for re-election next year. He has not yet made up his mind about it and probably will not do so for the present, but for six months he has felt that he has given sufficient time to public service and that he is entitled to spend his remaining years in the peace and quiet of his farm at Alexandria.

The senator will be seventy years of age at the expiration of his present term, March, 1913, which date will mark the close of eighteen years of consecutive service in the senate, prior to which he had served six years in the house, with the governorship coming in between.

EXAMINER PLACED IN CHARGE

First State Bank of Bowlus, Minn., Ordered Closed.

Another state bank closed, followed by the resignation of O. H. Havill, president of the Merchants National bank of St. Cloud, is the direct result of the closing recently of the State bank of Royalton, Morrison county. Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banks, closed the First State bank of Bowlus, in Morrison county, the ownership of which is closely allied to that of the State bank of Royalton. Examiner Regan has been placed in charge of the Royalton bank and Examiner Millard was sent to Bowlus to take charge.

O. H. Havill of St. Cloud was president of the First State bank of Bowlus and as soon as that institution was closed he tendered his resignation to the board of directors of the Merchants National bank of St. Cloud.

MOTIVE FOR CRIME UNKNOWN

Faribault (Minn.) Man Kills Wife and Himself.

Thomas K. Talbott, a resident of Faribault, shot his wife through the temple and neck, killing her instantly. Then, turning the gun on himself, he fired two shots, one taking effect in the temple and the other at the base of the neck, after which he took a razor and cut his throat from ear to ear.

Talbott was about fifty years old and his wife was about the same age. He had been in the land business in Iowa, but had returned and spent the past week at Faribault.

A little girl was in the room at the time of the shooting, but ran out. The man evidently intended to kill her also, as five shots were fired.

No motive for the crime is known, but it is said by the officers that Talbott had been drinking for a week.

WEALTHY LUMBERMAN DEAD

John A. Humbird of St. Paul Expires at Spokane.

John A. Humbird, millionaire lumberman of Minnesota, is dead at the home of his son at Spokane, Wash. The end came only after a brave fight for life in the last forty-eight hours of which he had been unconscious.

John A. Humbird, whose wealth is estimated at several million dollars, was perhaps less generally known than most of St. Paul's wealthy citizens. His erect, solid figure was often seen on the streets, but few persons knew him as a "lumber king" or "railroad builder," and his coming and going attracted little attention. He was born in Pennsylvania July 18, 1836.

WHAT GOOD ROADS DO COST

New York to Expend Over $5,000,000 This Year In Repair Work.

How few automobilists and tourists realize as they glide over the good or bad roads of New York state what the upkeep of these highways and byways is costing their town, county and state, and indirectly them. If they would stop to think of this there would be much less profanity when one chances upon a mud puddle difficult to dodge.

In the first place, the average, or, rather, the majority of tourists have no idea of the number of miles of roads in New York state which must be annually repaired, oftentimes semi-annually. Frank D. Lyon, the deputy commissioner of the state highway department, has furnished statistics and information on this subject which are not only startling and surprising, but vastly interesting to motorists.

There are in the Empire state 80,000 miles of roads, a greater mileage of which is improved highway than all the other eastern states put together, not including Massachusetts. There are now 2,000 miles of state roads and more under construction. There are macadam roads totaling in mileage 2,400, constructed by towns. There are more than 40,000 miles of earth roads, properly shaped and crowned, stones picked and removed, depressions filled, culverts and bridges repaired. Towns have constructed 8,000 miles of gravel roads, in first-class condition.

To keep these roads navigable, so to speak, shape means work, systematic, untiring labor on the part of a great corps of people. The state is divided into nine districts, with Mr. Lyon in actual charge of these. Each district has a superintendent, an assistant to Mr. Lyon. Then the state is again subdivided into forty-four counties under the supervision of fifty-four superintendents, who in turn are answerable to the nine assistants of Mr. Lyon. Then it is further subdivided into 934 towns, under 934 town superintendents. By this system Commissioner Lyon can reach within twenty-four hours after notification any road in the state in need of repair.

Work of construction and repair is now at its height, and Mr. Lyon's report of recent date showed that on one particular day there were 26,000 men and teams on the roads of the state.

Co-operation on the part of automobilists with the state authorities is urged by the state highway department. Mr. Lyon asks that tourists running across anything wrong with the roads immediately report the same to him. In this way tourists—those who are actually using the roads—will not only aid the state, but themselves, in keeping the highways in the best of condition.

"The upkeep of motor cars," says Mr. Lyon, "will this year be reduced 40 per cent. in my mind, on account of repairs to highways being made."

Towns are this year raising by taxes for highway improvement the sum of $2,504,675.23. The state is turning over to the towns to aid them in this work $1,593,070. Bridge work during the year 1911 is to cost $628,414.63. The amount to be paid out for new machinery is $180,011.25. Special road improvements in towns of the state are to cost $279,706.22, making in all $5,185,877.33 to be expended by towns this year.

The state is to bond itself for $19,000,000 for the construction of state roads. Towns and counties are to be called upon to provide as their share $5,000,000. The state legislature has appropriated $1,800,000 for the maintenance of state roads already constructed.

The sum of $21,985,877.33 is to be expended in one year for road construction and improvement throughout the great Empire state—that is, this amount is available for the work, and in all probability will be utilized by the state department of highways.

The Pink Marble Personal.

While the Japanese are rapidly assimilating western business notions, they have not yet entirely divested themselves of Oriental extravagance of expression in their advertisements, especially those of a personal nature, as the following, which some time ago appeared in a Tokio newspaper, will testify:

"I am a beautiful woman. My abundant, undulating hair envelops me as a cloud. Supple as a willow is my waist. Soft and brilliant is my visage as the satin of flowers. I am endowed with wealth sufficient to saunter through life hand in hand with my beloved. Were I to meet a gracious lord, kindly, intelligent, well educated and of good taste, I would unite myself with him for life, and later share with him the pleasure of being laid to rest eternal in a tomb of pink marble."

Oxygen As a Cutting Tool.

A jet of burning oxygen from a blowpipe may be successfully employed to cut sheet iron, iron tubes, and small bars. The cut made is almost as sharp and thin as that made by a saw. In earlier attempts difficulty was encountered in clearing the cut of liquid metal and in preventing the spread of the melting effect beyond the borders of the cut. In later processes two blowpipes were used. The first has an ordinary oxyhydrogen flame, which heats the iron to redness at the place where the cut is to be made. This is followed immediately by the second jet, composed of pure oxygen, which instantly burns the metal without melting. The liquidized iron is blown swiftly from the fissure, so that there is no serious spreading of the heat to surrounding parts.

GOOD ROADS BETTER COUNTRY

Highways Tell Tale of Profit or Loss and Spell Ruin for County That Neglects Them.

The plain people of the land are familiar with the truths of history. They know the past. They realize that often difference between good roads and bad roads is the difference between profit and loss. Good roads have a money value far beyond our ordinary conception. Bad roads constitute our greatest drawback to internal development and material progress. Good roads mean prosperous farmers; bad roads mean abandoned farms, sparsely settled country districts, and congested populated cities, where the poor are destined to become poorer. Good roads mean more cultivated farms and cheaper food products for the toilers in the towns; bad roads mean poor transportation, lack of communication, high prices for the necessaries of life, the loss of untold millions of wealth, and idle workmen seeking employment. Good roads will help those who cultivate the soil and feed the multitude, and whatever aids the producers of our country will increase our wealth and our greatness and benefit all the people. We cannot destroy our farms without final decay. They are today the heart of our national life and the chief source of our material greatness. Tear down every edifice in our cities and labor will rebuild them, but abandon the farms and our cities will disappear forever.

I take an abiding interest in this all-absorbing question for better highways by some plan it can be done honestly, economically and constitutionally. I am not committed to any pet scheme. I have no vanity in the matter. I care not who gets the glory so long as the people get the results.

I am for the cause and in the fight to stay. Good roads mean progress and prosperity, a benefit to the people who live in the cities, an advantage to the people who live in the country, and it will help every section of our vast domain. Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable; they enhance the value of farm lands, facilitate transportation, and add untold wealth to the producers and consumers of the country; they are the milestones marking the advance of civilization; they economize time, give labor a lift, and make millions in money; they save wear and tear and worry and waste; they beautify the country, bring it in touch with the city; they aid the social and the religious and the educational and the industrial progress of the people; they make better homes and happier hearth sides; they are the avenues of trade; the highways of commerce, and mail routes of information, and the agencies of speedy communication; they mean the economical transportation of marketable products—the maximum burden at the minimum cost; they are the ligaments that bind the country together in thrift and industry and intelligence and patriotism; they promote social intercourse, prevent intellectual stagnation and increase the happiness and the prosperity of our producing masses; they contribute to the glory of the country, give employment to our idle workmen, distribute the necessaries of life—the products of the fields and the forests and the factories—encourage energy and husbandry, inculcate love for our scenic wonders and make mankind better and greater and grander and broader.

Good roads are the arteries of industrial life of a great and powerful people. Good roads make a good country. In a government such as ours all sorts of men and women are more or less absolutely dependent upon the best and speediest means of communication and transportation. If you say that good roads will only help the farmer, I deny it. The farmer who produce the necessaries of life are less dependent than the millions and millions of people who live in our cities. The very lives of the latter depend on the farmers—the producers of the necessaries of life. The most superficial investigation of this subject will clearly prove that good roads are more important to the consumers than they are to the producers of the country.

The fathers of the republic wisely recognized the importance of this question. Washington and Jefferson advocated good roads and projected the construction of a great highway from the capital to the Mississippi valley. The farseeing statesmen of the early days of our national existence championed and passed measures to better the means of transportation. They knew that of all human agencies the one which has done most for civilization has been the building of good roads—the abridgment of distances, the shortening of time—in the facility of communication. They realized the necessity of good roads, how important they were to the country, to its growth and its development; and to mankind, morally, physically, intellectually and industrially.

WILLIAM SULZER.

Division Extraordinary.

At the Zoological park it became necessary to cut down a large tree. A log about twenty feet long was one of the results. Dr. Hornaday, the director, gave orders to one of the workmen, a stalwart Irishman, to split the log, with a small charge of dynamite, into two halves and scoop out each half for a trough to be used in feeding some of the animals. Later in the day the son of Erin appeared at the director's office, much excited, and stammered: "Th' dynamite has blowed that log into tree halves."

GOOD ROADS IN NORTHWEST

Washington State Alive to the Importance of Having Serviceable Highways.

The northwest is alive to the value of good roads. In a recent issue of the Seattle (Wash.) Intelligencer the statement is made that before the summer is over Seattle and Tacoma will be connected by a first-class macadamized highway. In King county, of which Seattle is the seat, there will be $320,000 available, including state aid, for road improvement this year. Much of this will be spent on a trunk line destined to connect Seattle and Everett. From Everett to Tacoma an improved road is a matter of the near future. This road work is part of a general plan to build a trunk line from the northern to the southern boundary of Washington, which in turn will become part of a highway from the Great Lakes to the ocean, through the northern tier of state, and this will connect with another trunk line from British Columbia down the coast to Mexico—a dream of that wide-awake country that is certain to be realized in the next few years.

TRY FERRO-CEMENT ROADS

Experiments With This Substance In France Have Been Highly Successful.

"Ferro-cement" roads are being experimented with in France. The substance is made of cement mixed with straw. To make a slab or block of ferro-cement, a mass of iron-straw is placed in the mold, and there is poured over it cement sufficiently fluid to penetrate into all the interstices of the iron and completely cover it. When the whole has set, the core of iron thus intimately incorporated gives to the block a great resistance to breakage and to traction, at the same time furnishing elasticity to compression which enables it to stand superficial shocks. A brick of ferro-cement 1 3-5 inches thick has supported during crushing tests, a pressure of about 65 tons to the square inch. In breakage tests, the resistance was quadruple that of ordinary cement. Resistance to wear was no less remarkable.

ELECTRIC MULES FOR PANAMA

Railroad to Be Built Along Panama for Drawing Ships From Ocean to Ocean.

The first shipment of steel has been made from New York for building a unique electric railway along the Panama canal for drawing great ships from ocean to ocean. The enormous volume of shipping across the isthmus will be drawn on the ancient towpath system, so that it will be unnecessary for steamers to proceed under their own steam. In place of the mules, on this curious towpath, powerful electric locomotives will draw the largest ships smoothly and swiftly across the continent. A steamer of, say 20,000 tons, which the canal will readily accommodate, is obviously a very heavy burden, and the electric locomotives will be geared to the tracks by a middle rail in the form of a rack. The canal commission has advertised for 2,000,000 pounds of steel ties, slots and covers and 1,300,000 pounds of steel channels. This rack railway will be built by the commission, and will be in working order in less than two years, in time for the opening of the canal.

Silver-Eyed Beefsteak.

The London cop calls his half-penny herring his silver-eyed beefsteak, and there are hundreds cooking every minute in London town where one is eaten here. Any time of the year a big part of this city would profit by eating fish for a spell instead of beef. With no open air exercise beef is a heap harder than fish for the body to get rid of, because there is a good deal more water in fish than in beef or pork. Fish are fat or lean. Eel, salmon, herring are more than five per cent. grease. Halibut and mackerel are two to five per cent. fat; cod, whiting, haddock, even less than two per cent.—New York Press.

It is the comparatively small number of weeds that mature their crop of seed unmolested after the crops in which they grow are laid by that furnish the supply of weed seed for the following year. A little work from this on will rid the garden of the weeds and greatly reduce the weed nuisance for another year.

The white grub, the larval stage of the familiar June bug, is a hard pest to contend with in a piece of ground which is devoted to a tilled crop. However, they can be very effectually cleaned out of a piece of ground which is being prepared for a crop by turning in a bunch of hogs that consider the grubs a juicy treat and will sometimes root the soil up to a depth of a couple of feet to get them.

The progressive sheep raisers of Australia have adopted a new method as a preliminary to shearing their sheep. Instead of clipping the wool, dirt, grease and all, as is the quite general practice, those who have plenty of water for the purpose scrub, wash and clean their sheep just before shearing. As a result they are saved paying freight on dirt and grease and also realize the highest prices for their fine, clean wool.

It is to be hoped that in the near future some broad minded and influential member of congress will secure favorable consideration for a bill which will protect migratory or interstate birds. That there is need of this is shown in the statement recently published that in the state of Georgia alone last year 75,000 of our northern meadow larks were slaughtered to satisfy the greed of a lot of pothunters, who probably realized from 8 to 10 cents a dozen for the birds.

THE MAN AND THE FARM.

Farming is, fortunately for the world, one of those occupations the satisfactions of which do not depend on the amount of money to be made in a year. There is, first, the satisfaction which comes from the ownership of a tract of land. It is the most stable of investments, and a safeguard against numberless anxieties. If, to the skill of the agriculturist, the farmer adds the taste of an artist, he may find a joy in so directing the forces of nature along the lines of beauty as to make of his farmstead and fields a series of pictures more alluring than can be found in any gallery. Not a few men have found in this indulgence of the art instinct an enjoyment which the millionaire might covet. Broad fields are better nurseries for high thought than contracted city offices. Nature-study uplifts the man as no other study save that of Divinity. Opportunities for scientific investigation offer themselves in every soil, plant, insect and type of animal life to be found on the land. The application of the results of such investigation to the practical work of the farm—yoking Science with Labor—dignifies the work while multiplying its rewards. The farmer it is, of all men, who can best afford to put aside all thought of mere money-getting and devote himself to large living. The money-getting instinct is, as a rule, belittling, and this belittlement the farmer can, the easiest of all, escape. The size of the farm does not limit the growth of the man. The man who, on eighty acres, gives himself to high thought and purposes, and large living, will easily outrank, in intellectual power and social influence, the mere money-seeker on a farm many times larger. It isn't the size of the farm, but the quality of the farmer's manhood, which determines his place in the community.—C. R. Barns, Extention Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

Saving by Co-Operation.

The saving effected by the Litchfield co operative live stock association in the marketing of hogs has averaged about 50 cents per hundred weight, as compared with sales effected outside the association. If all the live stock of the State were sold on a similar basis, it would mean a saving to the producers of about $1,500,000 annually. But this figure refers to the product of live stock under present conditions only. The business of stock raising is still in its infancy in Minnesota. Next to dairying it is destined to be, probably, the largest agricultural interest in our State. Destiny so writes in the fact that the grasses and feed crops, which are the basis of all successful animal husbandry, here find their natural home, their richest development. Therefore, efficient organization among stock raisers means the saving to them not merely of $1,500,000 annually, which now goes into the pockets of middlemen, but of many times that amount when as a stock growing region, Minnesota shall have "come to her own."

Violated the Game Laws.

Saturday Game Warden Munch of Crookston arrived in the city and arrested Arthur Williams and Mike Johnson upon the charge of attempting to hunt out of season. They were taken before Judge Bishop where they pleaded guilty and each was fined $11.50 which was paid. Four prominent citizens of Middle River were also arrested Saturday and fined $13.50 apiece and some of them lost their guns. According to the Crookston Times 17 game wardens have recently been appointed for this territory and it is understood a vigorous attempt will be made to prosecute all "sooners".

Newspaper at Holt.

The first issue of the Northern Light published at Holt by Charles Latta appeared Friday of last week. The Northern Light is a creditable looking paper and we wish Mr. Latta success in his new field. Mr. Latta was in the city Monday and Tuesday and stated that prospects look good in the newspaper field there.

It is the comparatively small number of weeds that mature their crop of seed unmolested after the crops in which they grow are laid by that furnish the supply of weed seed for the following year. A little work from this on will rid the garden of the weeds and greatly reduce the weed nuisance for another year.

The white grub, the larval stage of the familiar June bug, is a hard pest to contend with in a piece of ground which is devoted to a tilled crop. However, they can be very effectually cleaned out of a peice of ground which is being prepared for a crop by turning in a bunch of hogs that consider the grubs a juicy treat and will sometimes root the soil up to a depth of a couple of feet to get them.

HOW TO OBTAIN GOOD HIGHWAYS

Bond Issue Plan For Counties a Remedy For Present Evils.

QUICKER AND BETTER ROADS.

Direct Tax Method Might Do For the Time Being, but the Issuing of Bonds Will Insure Good Thoroughfares For Generations to Come. Many Southern Counties Using Plan.

A study of the problems connected with the development of our nation has shown that we take first rank in civil government, manufactures, commerce and in the world's affairs generally, yet improved public road construction, the one phase of our American life upon which depend more than any other the certain prosperity and social comfort of a large majority of our citizens, has been neglected to a degree that is almost beyond the power of conception, says Dr. J. H. Pratt, state geologist of North Carolina.

The old method of obtaining revenue for the construction of roads was by levying a labor tax, which required all ablebodied male residents of a state between certain ages to work on the public highways within their respective townships for a certain number of days per annum, but in lieu of this labor they could pay a certain amount for each day that they were required to work. While thousands of miles of public roads have been built by this means, there are but few miles of graded or improved roads constructed, and it is practically impossible to construct a system of good roads in this way. If it does not give good improved roads how can they be obtained?

Public roads are public necessities, and the benefits to be derived from their construction in the various counties composing the state are not only of great value to each county, but also to the state. Public roads are ready to serve all classes, they are common property of all the people, and all the people have the right and privilege to use them. Therefore why should not all the people bear some of the expense?

To carry out this work to the quickest and to the best advantage the county should issue bonds in order to secure the necessary funds.

It is a fair and equitable arrangement that future generations should pay for a portion of the improvements of our public roads, as they derive as great a benefit as the present generation. Too many have an idea that to bond their county will mean a very large increase in their taxes without their deriving any material benefits from their expenditures, not realizing that the increase in the value of property and the decrease in the cost of the maintenance of the roads and the wear and tear on horses, wagons and harness is so much money saved.

The issuing of bonds makes available funds in sufficient quantity to render possible the accomplishment of definite and desirable results.

They give almost immediately the benefit of good roads, while the payment for them is deferred for many years until the county has progressed in material wealth to enable it to pay the bonds without unnecessary inconvenience.

They obviate the necessity for a high road tax while accomplishing the results for which such a tax would be levied.

Let us consider briefly what a $100,000 bond issue would cost a county:

In the first place, I believe the bonds could be sold as bearing 4½ per cent interest. This will mean that the interest on the issue of $100,000 will be $4,500 per annum. It will also be necessary to put by a sinking fund to take care of these bonds on maturity. Such a sum as is necessary can be put by each year at 5 per cent interest and at the end of forty years will cover the bond issue. The amount that it will be necessary to put aside each year for this purpose will be $822. This makes a total of $5,422 that a county will have to raise each year to take care of this bond issue. This amount will not be as much as it would be necessary to raise by a high tax, 25 cents to 50 cents, which some counties have levied in providing the money for road construction. Suppose the assessed property valuation is $8,000,000, a tax of only 20 cents on the $100 would yield $16,000 annually, which would be sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds, create a sinking fund and leave enough money, $10,500, for the maintenance of the improved road and to keep in repair the roads in the county that are not being permanently improved.

This twenty cent tax is a small tax for good roads work and if this tax was levied without bond issue it would usually all be spent in maintenance of the roads without permanently improving any of them.

If a county or a township decides to try and raise the necessary revenue for good roads construction by a direct tax on the $100 worth of property it would require an exceedingly high tax to accomplish the desired result, unless there was situated in the county a large city whose accumulated wealth could be taxed for good road work in the county. Counties situated in this way could probably raise a revenue sufficient to construct improved roads throughout the county with a tax not running over 50 cents on the $100 worth of property. The counties, however, without large cities or towns should issue bonds for good roads construction.

Had Reason to Be Silent.

An ingenious young man once took his fiancee to church in a small country village, and when the time for "collection" came around he rather ostentatiously displayed a silver dollar. Presuming upon their engagement, the young woman placed a restraining hand upon the arm of her fiance.

"Don't be so extravagant, George!" she exclaimed.

"Oh, that's nothing," he replied. "I always make a point of giving a dollar when I go to a strange church."

Just then the deacon came with the plate, and George dropped a coin. Everything seemed favorable, and the young man beamed with a sense of generosity. Then the minister gave out the notices for the week and concluded with the wholly unexpected announcement of the day's collection.

"The collection today," said he, "amounted to 93 cents."

George hadn't much to say all the way to his fiancee's home.—Houston Chronicle.

The Origin of Dunce.

A dunce is named after Duns Scotus, the chief and leader of the schoolmen who were in opposition to what was called "the new learning" in the sixteenth century. It is easy to see how readily convertible the term would be. Any opponent of the new learning would be apt to be referred to as a Dunsman, or, more briefly, as a Duns, to indicate that he held the views of which Duns Scotus was the most eminent representative. But as the time went on and the new learning triumphed to call any one a Dunsman or a dunce would be equivalent to describing him not merely as opposed to a certain set of doctrines, but as incapable of learning and enlightenment. It is certainly hard upon Duns Scotus, as Archbishop Trench has remarked, that he, "the subtle doctor" by preeminence, the "wittiest of the school divines," as Hooker terms him, should have his name handed down to future ages as a synonym for invincible stupidity.

A Matter of Breed.

"Them fellers in the office of the Bee are what I call fresh," Deacon Ezra Bullock remarked to his wife at the supper table on his return from his monthly visit to the town of Balston.

"How so, father?" inquired Mrs. Bullock.

"Well," Mr. Bullock said, "one o' my errands was from Saba Mabel Briggs. She wanted I should find out why they hadn't punctuated her last poem. They sent a copy, an' she said it made her most sick the way they'd sp'iled her beautiful ideas.

"Well, when I'd got loaded up to come home I drove round to the Bee office an' composin' room an' beckoned a young feller in his shirt sleeves to come out.

"'Now,' I says, 'you'll do her a favor if you'll tell me why you didn't punctuate Saba Mabel Briggs' last poem?'

"'Cert'nly,' s's he. 'I'm not a pointer; I'm a setter.'"—Youth's Companion.

Molded by Circumstances.

Yoshio Markino in McClure's tells the following anecdote of his literal mindedness:

"At the grammar school I used to believe all that I was taught. But very often I made an awful misunderstanding. For instance, our readers said: 'The human nature is just like the water. If you put the water into a square vessel the water will become square, and if you put it into a round vessel it will have a round shape. Boys and girls, therefore you must choose your friends.'

"No sooner than the school hour was over I ran to my neighbor who had a newly born baby. I told the mother, 'Don't put your baby in a hard, flat bed; her figure will become flat.'"

I have arranged a complete and thorough course for you in roastology, bakeology, darnology, sewology, patchology, washology, ironology and general domesticology. Run along now and get on your working harness.—Chicago News.

An Old Testament Verse.

The twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra in the Old Testament contains all the letters of the alphabet. "And I, even I, Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra, the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."

Not the Same Meaning.

Princes at School.

Dr. Marks tells some amusing stories of the early days of the school in Burma of which he was for so many years the head. Shortly after the school was opened King Thebaw said, "Will you teach some of my sons?" "Certainly," said Dr. Marks. "What ages do you like them at?" Dr. Marks replied, "From twelve to fourteen." The king said, "Bring all my sons between twelve and fourteen to me." Nine princes came in. Four came to school the next day, each riding on an elephant and with two gold umbrellas. Each also was escorted by forty soldiers. Afterward the whole nine came, so there were nine princes, nine elephants, eighteen gold umbrellas and 360 soldiers. The elephants stayed outside, but when the princes came into the schoolroom all the other boys threw themselves flat down on their faces on the ground. It was forbidden for any one to stand or sit in the presence of princes. Dr. Marks found this state of things very inconvenient, and the royal etiquette at school was at his request considerably abated.—London Globe.

The Old Man Reformed.

"I've a sight o' sons—thirteen altogether," remarked a prosperous old farmer, "and all of 'em's done me credit save the three eldest, who sowed wild oats at a pretty rapid rate and then came home and saddled my shoulders with the harvest.

"Well, I own I was glad to see 'em back, and I feasted 'em and petted 'em and set 'em on their legs again, only to see 'em skedaddle off afresh when things had slowed down with all the cash they could lay hands on.

"That thereabouts sickened me, so I called the rest of 'em together and said:

"'There's ten of you left, and if any of you 'ud like to follow t'other three I won't try to stop you. But understand this, though there may be a few more prodigal sons there'll be no more fatted calves. I've killed the last of 'em.'

"And," continued the old man triumphantly, "I've had trouble wi' none of 'em since."

A Hasty Government.

"The postmaster here was removed the other day for incivility to the patrons of the office," said the landlord of the tavern. "You see, Lafe Stredder asked for his mail and none could be found, but the postmaster said he believed there had been a postcard, but what had become of it he'd be blamed if he knew. Lafe is a good deal of a crank and that didn't satisfy him, and they had some words, and the postmaster took a shot at Lafe that tore off half of one of his ears.

"Still, as the postmaster was able to remember just about what had been written on the postal card and told it to Lafe and then didn't shoot off enough of his ear to really affect the hearing it strikes me that the gov'ment was pretty considerable stringent, as you might say, about the matter."—Puck.

If ever the Irish potato was justified in insisting on being called by its scientific botanical name it is this season, when it is on display on the markets at all the way from $2.50 to $3.50 per bushel. Solanum tuberosum is the fitting and proper designation, if you please, and no such crude or provincial appellation as "tater" or "Murphy" will pass muster.

The state of Pennsylvania is macadamizing her rural highways at a cost varying from $6,000 to $12,000 per mile and in the course of the next few years intends to devote $50,000,000 or more for this purpose. This is quite a sum of money; but, distributed and borne by a state tax, it would amount to much less per acre than the increased value of such lands which would result from the better roads.

South of the city it is reported that black rust is doing some damage to the grain. CRUSHED STONE AND OIL ROADS

Found to Give Good Results In California.

MIXTURE IS WATERPROOF.

Better and Sounder Roads, Known as "Protected" Macadam, Result From This New Method of Construction. Dirt and Oil Roads Are Rapidly Being Abandoned.

For many years oil and liquid asphalt have been used for road construction in various localities throughout the United States, the most prominent, perhaps, being the state of California. There many hundreds of miles of roads have been treated with asphaltic oils of various gravities, varying according to the product of the different oil fields and applied according to ideas presented by various engineers and road builders, says P. E. Clark, former engineer of Los Angeles county.

The most prominent method has been to deposit the oil upon the surface of a dirt road which had been previously graded and harrowed, letting it stand from three to four days until some of the lighter portion had soaked into the soil as well as evaporated. The road was then gone over with a harrow so as to break up the oil cake and allow it to mix with the earth. In six or seven days after the first oiling the road was given a second application of oil. This in turn was allowed to stand as before, then harrowed. The road was then sprinkled with water, and after that had soaked in and the surface dried to a depth of about one inch it was thoroughly rolled with a light roller.

Where the climate is such that rains come only in a certain season of the year, and then only in meager quantities, it is needless to say that this has been an excellent method for keeping down the dust. But conditions, like everything else, are changing; traffic is increasing, and where it was at first believed that the oiled dirt road was to be one that would last for many years the anticipated results have not been realized.

In California, with all of its miles of oiled dirt roads, the method of mixing dirt and oil is rapidly being abandoned and in its place is appearing a new road having far better and sounder methods of construction. This class of road is not only appearing in the state of California from one end to the other, but in many of the states east of the Rocky mountains they are finding that asphaltic oil and various other products of the refineries have excellent cementing and waterproofing qualities when mixed with crushed stone, thus forming a modern road known as oiled or protected macadam.

ATOMIZING OIL MACHINE.

In Los Angeles county, Cal., many miles of these modern oil or protected macadam roads are being constructed. Like many other states, California has a law by which any county may obtain its own highway commission, under whose supervision the various highways selected may be improved from funds realized from the sale of bonds voted for that particular purpose.

The heavy asphaltic oil used in the construction of these highways is applied in a new way. After experimenting with various devices and methods that finally selected and adopted is to apply the heavy oil by forcing it on the road under pressure of not less than thirty pounds per square inch. For this purpose both the highway commission and the various contractors are using a new type of road oiling machine. Steel tank wagons holding between 1,000 and 1,100 gallons of heated oil are used to convey the oil from the oil pit to the road, where the atomizing machines, as they are called, are connected to the tank wagons.

The method of applying the hot oil or liquid binder with these machines consists in pumping the oil from the tank wagon and forcing it through the specially constructed nozzles of the distributer, where it is atomized and rapidly deposited on the stone. The work accomplished with these atomizing machines has been most satisfactory not only on account of the rapidity with which the oil is deposited, but from the fact that the distribution is so even.

Road Made of Leather.

After nearly a year a road made of leather waste treated with tar at Handsworth, Birmingham, England, shows practically no signs of wear. Heavy wheels make no impression on it, and it is a comfortable material for horses to tread on. Waste leather which was shredded until it virtually became a pulp was treated with bitumen and tar. It is stated that hitherto no real use has been found for leather waste.—London Daily Mail.

KEEP THE BOYS ON THE FARM

Exhibit at the State Fair Will Teach You How to Do This.

If you want to know how to build the best home for the farm and to make that home so attractive that it will be a pleasure to the adult members and keep the boys and girls on the farm you can learn all the details at the Minnesota State Fair.

A new and what will undoubtedly be a very popular and helpful exhibit of the 1911 fair will be a model farm home. This permanent exhibit is being prepared and will be shown under the auspices of the Minnesota State Art society. It is intended to give practical as well as artistic ideas to the prospective home builder. It will be helpful in many ways.

In all the details of construction in every variety of practical and artistic furnishing and in the best pictures and books the home will be a model and those in charge will give valuable information on all subjects that pertain to making a home attractive.

GREATEST FAIR CROWDS.

All Indications Point to a Half Million Attendance and Comfort Will Be Provided for All.

Every preparation is being made for the care and entertainment next September of a greater crowd than ever before attended the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. A large number of additional park seats, new drinking fountains, comfort stations, a rest hospital and nursery have already been provided for.

The sidewalks on the main avenues have been widened and a number of the streets and street corners have been so graded as to care for greater crowds. Additional ground has been given the street car company at their central terminals and this space will greatly increase the company's facilities for handling the immense crowds that are expected.

The Agricultural society has purchased nine lots adjoining their present railroad yards and unloading platform and these will be increased in number and convenience. Fences and buildings on the fair grounds are being repaired and painted. A new building is being erected that will connect the woman's building and annex. Several new structures for machinery exhibits are being built on Machinery hill.

SCOTCH SHEEP DOGS AT STATE FAIR

Combined Entertainment and Instruction by Champion Dogs and Sheep Farmers.

Brought Direct From Scotland for Their First Appearance in America at Minnesota Exhibition.

Real Scotch sheep dog trials, in which the competitors will be champion Scotch collies, and their owners, the United Kingdom's most famous sheep farmers, will be a big attraction of the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. Six dogs and three shepherds will be brought direct from Scotland for the occasion.

The trials, which are an important feature at all the big agricultural shows in England and Scotland, will be seen for the first time in America at Minnesota's big fair next September. The event will be a feature of the afternoon program every day during the fair and the announcement of it has already aroused more than unusual enthusiasm.

JOHN JOHNSTONE.

Appreciating the value as an attraction of the sheep dog trials Secretary J. C. Simpson, after much correspondence and continued efforts has succeeded in completing arrangements for bringing to the Minnesota State Fair, John Johnstone, James Scott and Mr. Robertson, three of the best known and most successful sheep farmers in the United Kingdom. These men with six dogs all of which have won many prizes for the handling of sheep, will start for this country next month and will be in Minnesota during the six days of the fair and perhaps longer. Two of the dogs are international prize winners.

The trials will be conducted every afternoon during the fair. They will be given over a course eight feet wide and about a half mile in length, to be laid out on the fair grounds. The starting point will be on the hill near the agricultural buildings and from there the course will lay across the track through gates, back and forth through the center field and will end in pens in front of the grandstand.

JAMES SCOTT AND KEP

Throughout its length the course will be marked only by short flags. Over this course a flock of sheep, probably three or four in number, will be driven by each dog in turn. The expired time of each trial will not be more than twelve minutes and during that time the collie will have to drive his sheep over the entire course and pen them. During the performance of his dog the shepherd remains in one position, usually about the center of the course. A large part of the way he is out of hearing, but always in sight of his collie. He directs his course in various ways, sometimes by a shout or whistle, but more often merely by a motion of his hands.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Sixteen new highway engineers and nine new road superintendents have been appointed by the state highway commission to take charge of the commission's work in different districts. With their appointment also has arisen a need for a reapportionment of the districts, the work being heavy in some and light in others, and this probably will be done at the meeting of engineers and road superintendents called by George W. Cooley, secretary of the commission, to be held in Litchfield, Aug. 15.

With $3,508,491.25 cash on hand and $17,989,019.79 invested in bonds and loans, the state on Aug. 1 opened a new set of books after closing the biggest fiscal year in its history. The books of State Treasurer Walter J. Smith showed that Minnesota for the year closing July 31, 1911, expended $16,364,789.21, or more than $3,000,000 above the disbursements of 1910. Of this sum, however, $1,100,000 was used in cancelling state capitol certificates.

Lieutenant Governor H. L. Nichols of Ohio has written to Fred B. Lynch of St. Paul, Democratic national committeeman for Minnesota, that he will be in the Twin Cities Sept. 15 to do some missionary work for Governor Judson Harmon. The friends of the Ohio governor are organizing in many states to bring about his nomination for president and expect to have a strong following in Minnesota.

It is estimated that approximately 90,000 tons of iron ore have been shipped to date by the Kennedy mine of the Rogers-Brown Ore company, at Cuyuna to the Soo docks at Superior, Wis. The stock pile contained about 110,000 tons and the steam shovel is now engaged in loading directly from this stock pile to the cars on the siding near by.

Charles E. Keller, state fire marshal, has sent out 2,000 placards offering $500 reward for the capture of Mike (Curly) Davis, the yeggman who recently figured in the holdup of the general store and postoffice at Puposky, which resulted in the arrest of Mayor D. T. Dumas of Cass Lake.

Alderman at Large H. J. Irwin of Two Harbors will not heed the election of July 25, when his Socialist brethren invoked the recall and chose Alfred Johnson for the office. He announces that he will not give up his seat in the council without a fight to a finish in the courts.

As a result of the meeting of the Southern Minnesota Valley Medical association at Rochester a new medical organization has been formed which will embrace the greater part of Southern Minnesota and be one of the largest and strongest societies of its kind in the state.

H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, has been appointed by Governor Eberhart the fifth member of the state tuberculosis commission. The commission was authorized by the last legislature to gather statistics on tuberculosis.

In the poll of editors of 4,000 Western newspapers on their attitude toward tariff revision, 222 Minnesota editors voted for revision, thirty-four were against it, nineteen favored revision by the tariff commission and eighteen gave qualified replies.

The 1911 Minneapolis city directory contains 147,980 names and indicates a population of 308,500. Advance sheets show an increase of 3,410 names over the 1910 directory. The United States census figures gave the city a little more than 301,000.

While fishing clams in the Mississippi river at Winona, Herbert Wahl of Faribault found a pearl valued at $1,000. It is a perfect gem, weighs thirty-six grains and is a creamy white color.

Sixty Italians employed by Butler Bros., stripping contractors at the Grant mine at Buhl, have struck for an advance of 25 cents a day in wages. They are now getting $1.75.

While patrolling the north shore of Clear lake, William Hardshell of Waseca was fortunate enough to find a pearl which it is estimated is worth between $2,000 and $3,000.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Armed with rifles and shotguns, citizens of Nicollet rallied to the call of Marshal A. H. Burg and prevented the robbery of the postoffice in that village. Two men who gave their names as Tom Hanlon and Andy Cimes were captured and now occupy cells in the Nicollet county jail.

Peni Dobreff, seventeen years old, one of the Greek laborers who was injured in the Burlington wreck at Cury July 19, is dead at St. Paul.

Otto Kriske, a young man of Olmsted county, was drowned while swimming in the Zumbro river between Jarretts Ford and Millville.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Charles Judkins of Baldwin is dead. He was a member of the board of county commissioners of Sherburne county several years and served one term on the state board of equalization.

Charles H. Bigelow, one of the prominent men in the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance company and well known in St. Paul business circles, is dead after an illness of several weeks.

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

REJECTED LOVER KILLS THREE

Enters Home of the Girl and Slays Her and Her Father and Then Ends His Own Life.

William Wolff, his daughter Cora and Edward Corey were shot dead at the Wolff residence at Olivia.

Young Corey, it appeared, was in love with the Wolff girl but had been rejected by her the day before the shooting. He called at the girl's home but was ordered by her father, William Wolff, to leave the place and not to return.

It is thought that Corey obtained a key to the Wolff house, for in the morning he went to the Wolff place while the family was asleep, removed his shoes at the door and went into the house and upstairs to Cora's room.

The intruder's entrance to the room caused the girl to scream and her father, who was sleeping down stairs, responded quickly to her cry.

As Wolff entered the bedroom Corey drew a revolver and shot him dead. Mrs. Wolff, who was the only other member of the family at home, then ran from the house to Sheriff Vicks' residence, two blocks distant, and notified the sheriff.

Vick and Marshal Sherin arrived at the Wolff residence in a few minutes, but when they attempted to enter the bedroom Corey threatened to shoot. A moment later two more shots were fired and when officers forced their way into the room they found Corey, Wolff and the daughter dead.

Corey had disrobed himself, evidently before the girl had awakened.

Both the Corey and Wolff families are among the oldest of Olivia.

MINNESOTA BANK CLOSES

Officers Refuse to Levy Assessment of Thirty Per Cent.

Rather than obey an order from Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banks, ordering them to levy an assessment of 30 per cent on the stockholders, the officers of the State Bank of Royalton closed the doors of that institution. Mr. Chase had warned the officers that unless immediate steps were taken to restore the impaired resources of the bank he would order the doors closed. The officers, anticipating the action of the state department, suspended business themselves and notified the state department.

Mr. Chase and W. J. Regan, an examiner in the bank, have taken possession. Every effort will be made to reorganize the institution and to protect the depositors, who have more than $100,000 on deposit.

CHARGES AWAIT DUMAS CASE

Accusations Against Minnesota Sheriff Will Be Held.

Charges against Sheriff A. B. Hazen of Beltrami county will not be returned, nor will their investigation by the attorney general of Minnesota be rushed, but rather will they be held pending the outcome of the Dumas case, as originally planned by the attorney general, according to the decision announced to have been reached in a conference between Mr. Simpson, who started the rumpus, State Fire Marshal Keller and his assistant, Sam F. Fullerton, to whom he passed it on, and Ralph W. Wheelock, secretary to the governor.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY

Two Unknown Men Kill Miner in Minnesota Pit.

Murder was committed in the Mace mine near Keewatin when two men went into the mine by an entrance not generally used and met Mike Hokovich, a trammer, thirty-five years old, killing him almost instantly.

Robbery was the motive, as the dead man is known to have had $290 in a belt about his person, which was taken. The murderers escaped and there appears to be no clue. The tragedy was enacted about seventy five feet below the surface.

$1,500 FIRE AT SANATORIUM

Implement and Tool Shed and Blacksmith Shop Burn.

The implement, tool shed and the blacksmith shop at the state sanatorium, three miles from Walker, were totally destroyed by fire at a loss of $1,500. The blaze was due to a redhot piece of iron breaking off and falling in a bale of hay. The $3,000 dairy barn, which is close to the implement building, was saved.

Rate Case Up in October.

Edward T. Young, former attorney general and one of the state's counsel in the Minnesota railroad rate cases, on his return from the St. Louis conference between attorneys general on rate litigation, received notice that the United States supreme court will be ready to hear the Minnesota cases Oct 23. It is believed that if the cases are submitted at that time an opinion can be looked for in the early part of next year.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Enraged by the dismissal of Emilio Vasquez Gomez from the post of secretary of the interior numerous former officers of the Mexican revolutionary army openly declared that they would recall their followers and lead them in a second rebellion. It is reported a few of the insurrecto ex-officers have left Mexico City to gather their forces.

The end of the Moroccan trouble between Germany and France is in sight. Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador to Berlin and Major von Kiderlen Waechter, the German foreign secretary, found a common ground of settlement on general lines, though the details remain to be worked out.

A three-day armistice has been agreed to in Haiti by President Simon and the leaders of the revolutionists investing Port au Prince. The temporary suspension of hostilities was arranged by the diplomatic corps in the Haitian capital at the request of President Simon, who now will resign.

A semi-official note issued at Paris states that the optimistic opinion emanating from London relative to the progress of the Franco-German negotiations are not borne out by the facts, as the German demands continue excessive.

General Acevedo, who endeavored to start a revolution at Reglia, Cuba, has surrendered to Governor Asbert in the town of Santa Maria del Rosario, a short distance south of Havana, in the vicinity of which he had been hiding.

At least eight lives were lost in a fire which destroyed one of the main buildings of the insane asylum on the side of the mountain southwest of Hamilton, Ont. There were 800 patients in the building when the fire was discovered.

Twelve thousand London dock laborers are on strike.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Right Rev. Oscar Penn Fitzgerald, a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is dead at Monteagle, Tenn., aged eighty-two years. In the early seventies he was state superintendent of public instruction in California and later edited the Pacific Methodist and Christian Spectator.

Rev. Dr. Willard Francis Mallalieu, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church and probably oldest minister in point of years of service in the denomination, died at his home at Auburndale, Mass., after a month's illness of old age and exhaustion. He was eighty-three years of age.

Colonel W. C. Greene, the former copper magnate, is dead at Cananea, Mex. He succumbed to acute pneumonia, which developed as a result of injuries he sustained in a runaway accident.

Former United States Senator Edward Murphy of Troy, N. Y., died at his summer home at Elberon, N. J., as the result of an operation. Mr. Murphy was seventy-six years old.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Three of the world's greatest nations, with the United States as the central figure and moving spirit, have joined hands in opening the way to the coveted goal of statesmen of modern times—universal peace. America and Great Britain, and America and France have signed general arbitration treaties for the peaceful settlement of all disputes that may be locked in the mystery of the future, even though they concern the national honor interests of the signatories, subjects invariably excepted in existing arbitration treaties.

It is the comparatively small number of weeds that mature their crop of seed unmolested after the crops in which they grow are laid by that furnish the supply of weed seed for the following year. A little work from this on will rid the garden of the weeds and greatly reduce the weed nuisance for another year.

The white grub, the larval stage of the familiar June bug, is a hard pest to contend with in a piece of ground which is devoted to a tilled crop. However, they can be very effectually cleaned out of a piece of ground which is being prepared for a crop by turning in a bunch of hogs that consider the grubs a juicy treat and will sometimes root the soil up to a depth of a couple of feet to get them.

The progressive sheep raisers of Australia have adopted a new method as a preliminary to shearing their sheep. Instead of clipping the wool, dirt, grease and all, as is the quite general practice, those who have plenty of water for the purpose scrub, wash and clean their sheep just before shearing. As a result they are saved paying freight on dirt and grease and also realize the highest prices for their fine, clean wool.

It is to be hoped that in the near future some broad minded and influential member of congress will secure favorable consideration for a bill which will protect migratory or interstate birds. That there is need of this is shown in the statement recently published that in the state of Georgia alone last year 75,000 of our northern meadow larks were slaughtered to satisfy the greed of a lot of pothunters, who probably realized from 8 to 10 cents a dozen for the birds.

Early Railroad Fibre.

When the first passenger railroad ever built was opened in England in 1825 the train traveled from one end of the line to the other, a distance of twelve miles, in two hours. And Wood, one of the best known writers on the subject of railroads at that day, wrote as follows:

"Nothing can do more harm to the adoption of railways than the promulgation of such nonsense as that we shall see locomotives traveling at the rate of twelve miles an hour."

Today, with locomotives traveling at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour, one can look at Wood's warning with a feeling of amusement. In 1829 a locomotive was introduced in this country, and in the following year Peter Cooper experimented with a locomotive on the B. and O. railroad. The flues of the boiler were made from gun barrels. The boiler was about the size of a flour barrel. Cooper related with considerable satisfaction how on the trial trip of this engine he passed a gray horse attached to a wagon.—New York World.

Big Poker Stakes.

Many stories of big poker games among the western cattlemen in the early days have been told, but this story of the game with probably the greatest stakes is really true. Two well known cattlemen of southwestern Kansas, one of whom is now a prominent business man in Kansas City, started to move their herds to the pastures of Wyoming. Each herd contained more than a thousand head of cattle. When they came to the crossing of the Arkansas river near Coolidge they found a flood on. They were unable to cross for two or three days. To while away the time the two men engaged in a poker game. When the flood finally subsided so that the cattle could proceed one of the cattlemen, said to his son, who was helping to drive, "Just turn my herd over to our neighbor and we will go back home." He had bet and lost not only all the money he had, but all of the herd of cattle.—Kansas City Journal.

Moving Troops by Rail.

"Let us suppose it became necessary to send the entire national guard of New York out of the state, how long would it take the railroads to handle them?" was asked a railroad official in New York.

"Twenty-four hours, easy," was the instant reply. "This is under war conditions, remember, which means that everything gives way to the movement of troops and their equipment. The railroads of America can handle men and war material of all kinds, including everything from horses and men to cannon and rations, much faster than they can be assembled and delivered to us. In fact, under war conditions the railroads are prepared to do their part quicker and better, with more certainty and better speed, than any other part of the machinery, commercial or military, in America."—Railroad Man's Magazine.

Black Fridays.

In England the term Black Friday was first applied to Dec. 6, 1745, the day on which news reached London that the pretender, Charles Edward, had reached Derby. Again on May 11, 1866, when the failure of a large English discounting institution brought on a most disastrous panic, the day was called Black Friday. On the day of the suspension the Bank of England raised the rate of discount 9 per cent. Wild speculation in gold in New York and other cities culminated in a monetary crash on Sept. 10, 1875, that swept thousands of firms and individuals into financial ruin and caused a commercial depression that extended into the eighties of the last century; hence the origin of the term Black Friday in the United States.

To Make Red Ink.

Red ink is easily made by amateurs who follow this recipe: Get a one ounce bottle and see that it is perfectly clean and dry. Place in it one teaspoonful of aqua ammonia, gum arabic the size of two peas and six grains of carmine. Fill up the bottle with clear soft water, and after standing a little while it will be fit for use.

She Thought of Him.

She—Oh, Mr. Borem, how do you do? I was talking to Mrs. Nexdore just now, and I couldn't help thinking of you. He—And was she discussing me? She—Not exactly. She was commenting on the weather and just asked me if I could imagine anything more tiresome and disagreeable.—Philadelphia Press.

One Advantage.

"So you have adopted a baby to raise," we ask of our friend. "Well, it may turn out all right, but don't you think you are taking chances?"

"Not a chance," he answers. "No matter how many bad habits the child may develop, my wife can't say he inherits any of them from my side of the house."—Life.

The Tie That Binds.

"I have a cook now that took a college course in domestic science last summer."

"You seem enthusiastic, Mabel."

"Yes; I find we belong to the same secret society."—Washington Herald.

Repartee.

He (during the spat)—Well, if you want to know it, I married you for your money. She—I wish I could tell as easily what I married you for.—Exchange.

If ignorance were only bliss the world would be much happier.—Mansfield.

The Whistling Jugs of Peru.

The potters of ancient Peru used to manufacture an ingenious musical instrument which may very properly be called a whistling jug. In collections of antiquities it is called a silvador or silvio. Specimens are obtained from the ancient burial places of Peru. One of these consists of two vases, whose bodies are joined one to the other, with a hole of opening between them. The neck of one of these vessels is closed, with the exception of a small opening in which a clay pipe is inserted, leading to the body of the whistle. The closed neck of this double vase is modeled into a representation of a bird's head. When a liquid is poured into the open necked vase the air is compressed in the other, and in escaping through the narrow opening is forced into the whistle, the vibration producing sounds. Many of these sounds represent the notes of birds; one in the collection at the British museum imitates the notes of the robin or some other member of the thrush tribe, peculiar to Peru.—Harper's Weekly.

A Shave In China.

The Rev. Louis Byrde, a missionary, gives an interesting account in a London paper of a shave in China. He writes: "The greatest treat which I only give on special occasions is a midday shave in public. In the early morning a Chinese inn is terribly dark, and at night bed soon claims one. I select a table at the street front (the whole front is formed of movable doors, which are entirely taken away during the day) and, provided with the necessaries, commence operations. Fifty or sixty people stand round in ranks, the innermost circles consisting of children and the outer rings of men and mothers with their babes. Not a word is uttered; all eyes are fixed first on the shaving brush as the soap is lathered on the face, and then on the razor as the stubble falls. The Chinese never shave themselves, and possibly to see a man handling a razor on himself may suggest that he is about to commit harakiri in their village."

Bucked the Tiger.

The forest land of southern India possesses a breed of buffaloes vastly superior to the ungainly creatures of the plains. They are shaggy haired and massive, with thick, short horns, and possess immense strength. A herd of these buffaloes was grazing when a tiger came out of the forest near by. The herdsman shouted, beat his staff on the ground and tried to scare away the brute, but it would not be scared and sprang upon him, knocked him down and stood over him snarling. He gave himself up for lost when the bull of the herd charged savagely upon the tiger and knocked him fully twenty feet. The attack was so sudden and the shock so great that it took all the fight out of the tiger. He gathered himself up in a dazed way and actually slunk off into the forest. The bull shook himself, bellowed, pursued his enemy a few yards and then went quietly to feeding as if vanquishing a tiger were an everyday occurrence.

The Seismograph.

The seismograph is a most interesting instrument. It is kept in a subbasement room, far from disturbing influences. There it records upon a strip of paper such earthquakes as may happen anywhere. The scientists then study the strip of paper and herald to the world the news that the tremor which shook down several cities was duly registered.

The seismograph is a remarkable contrivance, though in just what way is not yet determined. However, in the interests of science, it is as valuable as would be the imprint of the hoof upon the seat of the trousers of a man who had been kicked by a mule. After the event he could study the imprint and assure himself that he had been kicked.—Life.

Ample Apology.

An Irish lawyer once addressed the court as "gentlemen" instead of "your honors." After he had concluded a brother of the bar reminded him of his error. He immediately arose and apologized thus: "May it please the court, in the heat of debate I called yer honors gentlemen. I made a mistake, yer honors." Then he sat down, and if the court was not satisfied it did not disclose the fact.—Case and Comment.

Monkey Bread.

African baobabs (also called monkey bread, sour gourd and lalo plant) were computed by Adamson, noted traveler, to have endured for 5,150 years. Natives use the hollowed out trunks of these enormous trees as places of deposit for executed criminals whom the law denies the rights of burial.

A Glum Prospect.

"We who ride in trolley cars today may ride in automobiles tomorrow," said the optimist.

"And in hearses the following day," said the pessimist.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Rise a Little Higher.

Those who live on the mountains have a longer day than those who live in the valley. Sometimes all we need to brighten our day is to rise a little higher.

Good Scheme.

"How do Jack and Jeanne ever manage to make a living?"

"Why, he makes the money first and she makes it last."

Philosophy.

"Pa, what is philosophy?"

"Philosophy, my boy, is the gentle art of letting your creditors do all the worrying."

A Wise Provision.

Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntarily, like winking. The man cannot help it. The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt—and it doesn't take a very hard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do—by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

French Humor.

A man who possessed much land and had many younger brothers was asked why he did not go out hunting, as his brothers did.

"Well," said he, "it is because it frequently happens that the guns of younger brothers go off accidentally when pointed at the eldest, but it is seldom that the guns of the eldest behave in a similar manner toward the younger brothers."—French Joke Book.

Her Compliment.

A popular English comedian and music hall singer, asked what his funniest experience was, said: "One time I drove up to the theater in Dublin and was humming a tune when I got out. An old Irishwoman who had failed to get in the theater heard me and said, 'Begorra, if that is how he sings I am glad I didn't go in.'"—London Mail.

Here and on the Moon.

Things are six times heavier on the earth than they would be in the moon. A man weighing 150 pounds on the earth would weigh only twenty-five pounds on the moon. A player throws a baseball 100 yards here, but with the same exertion in the moon he would throw it 600 yards.

Spoiling It.

Wife—What a darling you are to admit that you are in the wrong! Hubby—Yes; my mother taught me that it was easier in the long run to give in to a woman than to argue.—Toledo Blade.

Just the Opposite.

"He appears to love his wife very much?" "Yes." "She must be a charming talker?" "No, she is a charming keep stiller."—Houston Post.

The last horse bus has disappeared in London. The service rendered by an army of these outfits in the days gone by is now performed by 1,500 motorbusses.

Ice cold drinks are refreshing from the standpoint of immediate physical comfort, but taken in large quantities there is no getting around the fact that they are a tax on one's digestive apparatus.

That a better day is dawning in China is forcefully shown in the report from one of the western provinces of the empire, where 1,000,000 acres formerly given over to opium culture are now growing wheat.

The small boy who has not seen the elephants and kangaroo in the big circus parade by the time he is ten or eleven years old has missed a legitimate part of his training, and his daddie is open to pretty severe criticism.

It's a mighty dry season when the crab grass cannot find moisture enough where the joints touch the earth to warrant its sending out roots. Yet luckily this is the pickle that a whole lot of this grass is in in many localities this year. Incidentally it makes the pulling job a whole lot easier.

The title of bird man has certainly been earned by Vedrines, a French aviator who recently covered a distance of seventy-seven miles at a speed of 155 miles per hour. This exceeds by a good deal the speed at which any human being has ever traveled and equals or surpasses the speed of the fleetest birds.

A Montana ranchman who was "baching it" mistook white arsenic for baking powder in preparing a batch of biscuits, ate of it and died. The incident points to the wisdom of plainly labeling cans containing powders and other substances used in cooking and of bachelors making early negotiations for competent and permanent housekeepers.

Figures for the first three months of the present year on certificates of pure breeding required by customs officials for the free entry into the country of animals intended for breeding purposes show that 710 horses were imported into the United States. Of this number 337 were Percheron, 252 Belgian draft, 65 Shire, 20 Shetland, 15 Clydesdale, 13 Welsh ponies, 6 Hackney and 1 thoroughbred (trotter).

Recent weeks have seen considerable discussion in the public press relative to the efficacy of prayer in bringing rain. While there is just about as much evidence to show that "effectual fervent prayer" will bring rain as there is that it will not, the prudent man will keep right on stirring his dust mulch and conserving the subsoil moisture along with his praying. Then if a rain does come he is just so much the better off.

Plowing the stubble as soon as the grain is cut is not only to be commended as a means of preventing myriads of weeds from seeding, but in sections where damage to wheat by the Hessian fly is possible it tends to reduce this pest to a minimum. If volunteer wheat appears in the field it should be disked under, and the seeding of the wheat should be deferred as late as will be consistent with the grain getting a good foothold before cold weather sets in.

The cottage cheese of our grandmothers that was cooked hard, a bit tough and made into round balls was good, but a much finer quality can be made of slightly soured milk by bringing it to a little above blood heat, say 110 degrees, allowing curd and whey to separate and then straining through fine sieve or cheesecloth. The cheese should then be salted and put in a cool place. As portions are desired for the table they should be dressed with butter or rich cream. Fixed in this manner cottage cheese is a most appetizing dish and nutritious as well.

The report of the condition of the cotton crop issued July 5 by the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture is a most encouraging one and indicates that all records will be broken if present favorable conditions continue. The report shows that on June 25, the time the last data was gathered, the condition of the cotton crop was 88.2 per cent of a normal as compared with 87.8 on May 25, 1911; 80.7 on June 25, 1910; 74.6 on June 25, 1909, and 80 per cent the June average for the past ten years. Not only is the condition of the crop the best this year, but the acreage is larger by considerable than in any previous year.

A pound of raisins, cured with special reference to eating out of hand, costs at retail 15 cents. Not only are they an appetizing ration, but from the standpoint of nutritive elements they compare favorably pound for pound with meat and eggs at the same price.

A Vermont farmer who has tested the method for twenty years, reports in an eastern farm journal that he has successfully killed willow trees, root and top, by removing a two foot girdle of bark the latter part of August. For many readers who have had trouble killing these hardy trees this suggestion is worth remembering.

Good profits may be made in dairying and fruit raising; but, if reports are to be credited, the easiest money is made by a big army of sharks and grafters who make a business of farming suckers, the class of folks who are always hotfoot to get something for nothing, the crop of which seems perennial, like quack grass, mumps and peas.

The low form of vegetable life that makes the green scum in water tanks may be done away with by dissolving copper sulphate in the tank at the rate of one two-hundredths of a pound of the chemical to a hundred gallons of water. This chemical is poisonous and used in larger quantities than this would be injurious to the stock drinking it.

Conditions point to a record breaking cotton crop for the year. The area planted is 35,004,000 acres, as compared with 33,418,000 last year, while the condition of the crop as reported June 1 was 87.8 of a normal as compared with 82 per cent for the corresponding period in 1910 and 80.9 per cent, the average condition for the past ten years.

While the growth of timber of the hardwood varieties is usually a mark of a fertile soil, it cannot always be relied upon as indicative of the character of the surface soil, as the roots of many trees penetrate deep. But where one finds clover growing naturally the evidence is quite conclusive that the soil is rich and also that it is sweet and does not need liming.

An experiment made recently by the department of agriculture for the purpose of testing the shrinkage in corn in storage showed that 28,000 pounds of shelled corn kept under ordinary conditions for a period of 147 days lost 1,070 pounds, or about 7 per cent, as a result of evaporation of moisture. Weighings made at frequent intervals showed that the corn gained in weight in wet weather and shrank correspondingly in dry.

A lot of farmers who do not live in territory usually termed semi-arid have been confronted with a pretty stiff dry farming proposition this year and out of it all may learn something that will stand them in good stead in the years to come. One of these lessons is the advantage of a very thorough preparation of the seed bed for small grain, also the harrowing of small grain to break the crust after it is up; secondly, the distinct advantage of a frequent and careful tillage of such crops as corn and potatoes.

The writer has seen some pretty effective execution done within the past few weeks with one of the guillotine or terror rat traps. Cheese, grain or a piece of meat makes excellent bait, but a small piece of bone with gristle attached and tied to the tongue of the trap is perhaps the best bait of all. Care should be used in setting the trap, for a blow that will break a rat's back or crush its skull is apt to break the bone of one's finger. While the campaign is being waged the traps should be attended to daily, baited at night and emptied in the morning. Moreover, the traps should be placed so that neither kittens, chickens nor children can have access to them.

A number of state experiment stations are now offering courses in poultry management especially designed to fit men who desire to go into poultry farming for themselves. Among practical lines taken up are feeding, the use of incubators and brooders, anatomy and physiology of poultry, marketing various poultry products and poultry judging. There is little question that it would be time and money well spent for those planning to take up poultry raising on an extensive scale and possessing no previous experience to take just such a course. They would be able to secure instruction from experts and acquire experience in the business without the heavy losses that often accompany the early efforts of novices who take up the poultry business.

July and August are pre-eminently the two months in which that joint rooting, drought defying pest, crab grass, gets in its work, often counteracting and rendering futile most of the good hoe and cultivator work done during May and June. It is fortunate that crab grass is an annual. This means that the root does not live through the winter and that to exterminate it all one needs to do is to keep it from going to seed. It is hard to overcome, for the reason that it makes most of its growth in corn, potatoes and other cultivated crops after they have been laid by; hence to get rid of it one must wage a persistent fight from now on by pulling and hoeing so as to keep any seed from maturing. This will require a lot of persevering work when the sun beats down hard, but the reward will be a clean garden next season.

A WORD TO THE GIRLS.

A little while ago there was a paragraph in this department directed to the class of young men who are interested in nice girls and have a hazy idea of some day asking them to share homes with them, yet who have not sensed the fact that it takes money to furnish a home. This week we have a suggestion or two for some of these same girls and others who may not have realized the fact that it takes something besides a stunning dress, a nicely adjusted rat or a popular air indifferently played or sung and moonshine to adequately meet the responsibilities which a young woman assumes when she becomes mistress of a home. The girl of today is not supposed to spin and weave, as did her great-grandmother, but she should know how to do neatly and well the plainer kinds of sewing. She should know how to make as good a loaf of bread as her mother (if her mother's bread is sour and soggy it should be a good deal better) and a pie with a light crust; should also know how to broil a steak and cook a roast or a boil. She should know something of the care of the sick and how to keep a little child well in hot weather. Then, too, she should realize that any man who is worthy of the name of husband takes just as much pride in seeing his wife neatly attired as when she was his sweetheart and, lastly, that a neatly kept home is the comfort and delight of a decent man, even if he does do a good deal now and then toward getting it out of order. In general it may be said that any girl who is a real help and comfort to her mother and who is serious and unselfish will in the course of things acquire a knowledge of these and other things which she most needs to know. On the other hand, the young man is to be pitied who, drawn to a girl by exterior and surface qualities, finds after they have set up housekeeping that she is lazy, careless, indifferent and sloppy in the way she gets herself up and in the care of the house. Homemaking in the best sense is a wholesome and delightful yet serious business. It requires the best that two young people can put into it, both the young man and the young woman.

SILOS IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

The Kansas Agricultural college directors have come to the conclusion that silos would be a real boon to the farmers in the western part of the state and with this idea in view will next winter build a silo on the state farm at Hays, Kan. A half section of land will be devoted to the experiment, and a practical farmer will be put in charge of the work with a view to demonstrating its feasibility for other farmers in the territory mentioned. Kaffir corn, milo maize, Indian corn and sorghum will be given a trial in the experiment. Some idea of the results to be expected may be gathered from some feeding tests with Kaffir corn ensilage last winter at the state farm at Eureka. Ten steers fed Kaffir corn ensilage, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made an average gain of 127 pounds each in a period of fifty-nine days, while another group fed the same length of time on dry shock corn fodder, cottonseed cake and alfalfa hay made a gain of but 114 pounds each. Not only did the Kaffir corn ensilage cost less than the dry shock fodder, but the steers which were fed on the former went on to pasture in the spring in much better condition. The silo will not only provide a succulent ration during the period of drought and short pasture, but it will make possible the securing of corn, sorghum or milo maize that is about to be burned up with hot south winds. The full results of this Kansas silo experiment will be watched with a great deal of interest.

FIRES REGULATED BY LAW.

The state of Connecticut has a law which in times of drought prevents a good many destructive fires. This provides first that no person shall kindle a fire upon public land without authority so do so nor upon the premises of another without permission of the owner or his agent. It also provides that no person shall kindle or authorize another to kindle a fire in his woodland unless all combustible materials for the space of six feet surrounding the place where said fire is kindled have been removed, nor shall any such fire be left until extinguished or safely covered. As is natural, perhaps, some farmers of the state think the law is an insult to their intelligence, others that the law is wisely drawn and tends to reduce loss from runaway fires.

ABOUT FISH.

Figures which have lately been collected show that one out of every 400 people in the United States fishes for a living; that the annual catch of this quarter million fishermen is 1,000,000,000 pounds, worth about $50,000,000. Capital to the amount of $75,000,000 is devoted to the fishing business, and of this amount $22,000,000 is tied up in vessels. In the production of fish Virginia leads with a catch of 378,183,358 pounds. New York is second with 228,002,285 pounds, while Alaska stands third with 165,226,000 pounds. In the matter of number of people occupied with the fishing business Maryland leads with 42,812. Virginia comes next with 29,376, Maine 16,956 and Massachusetts 14,263.

NEW POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

St. Paul and Minneapolis to Have Them Sept. 1.

After weeks of speculation and unofficial reports fixing various dates, St. Paul, together with Minneapolis and eight other cities of the large class, will get their much talked of postal savings bank Sept. 1, according to an order signed by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

Encouraged by the success of the postal banking system in the hundreds of smaller cities where it already is in operation the postmaster general decided to install them in ten cities of the United States, known in the postal service as group B of the first class. They include in addition to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Wilmington, Del., and Long Island City. All of these cities rank high as industrial and commercial centers and all have a large foreign born population.

Oklahoman Has Solution of White Earth Difficulties.

Major J. R. Howard, superintendent of the White Earth Indian agency in Minnesota, was the only witness before the committee on expenditures in the interior department, which is investigating the Indian administration in Minnesota.

Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, a member of the committee, made a suggestion in the hearing which failed to find sympathy with Representative Graham of Illinois, the chairman. Mr. Ferris gave it as his belief that the crux of the situation was the necessity for the repeal of the Clapp amendment. The whole matter, he declared, should be referred to the committee on Indian affairs, with a recommendation for legislation providing for the repeal of the Clapp law, which permits the mixed bloods to alienate their allotments.

WHITE EARTH PROBE STARTED

Alleged Frauds Practiced on Indians Explained to Committee.

Alleged frauds practiced upon the Chippewa Indians of the White Earth reservation in Minnesota by whites, who have secured their lands, were detailed before the house committee on interior department expenditures by W. C. Burch of the department of justice, in answer to charges of misuse of money in connection with government investigation of these matters. Numerous suits growing out of these frauds are pending in the federal courts in Minnesota.

Mr. Burch declared that the most valuable pine land on the reservation had been allotted to the mixed bloods who are legally competent to dispose of it. He said that "speculators and grafters" rushed in and took land conveyances indiscriminately from children and others legally incompetent.

VOTE BONDS NEXT WEEK

Special Election to be Held August 25 to Vote Bonds for Steam Plant.

No Opposition Has Developed to City Bonding Itself—Registration Day Tomorrow.

One week from tomorrow, August, 25 the special election called by the city council to see whether the citizens of Thief River Falls are willing to bond themselves to the amount of $40,000 to build an auxiliary steam plant to be used in connection with the water power for the municipal light and power station, will be held.

The ballot upon which the voter will mark a cross after "yes" or "no" states that bonds up to the value of $40,000 may be issued by the city. The full amount may not be issued, depending upon how much is needed to build the steam plant, but the city fathers thought it wise to be on the safe side and make the bond issue large enough so that no more issues would be needed to complete the work.

It will be remembered that several weeks ago when the lighting plant was forced to shut down owing to the low stage of water in the river, a mass meeting was held at which it was unanimously agreed that an auxiliary plant should be built and the council was instructed to go ahead with the work. The council has accordingly done considerable investigating and practically made all plans for the work. The actual advertising for bids will not be done, however, until after the election. Everyone at the mass meeting was heartily in favor of a steam plant just as soon as it could be built and the sentiment has apparently not changed any at the present time. The specifications which are being prepared by the Minneapolis Steam Machinery Co. call for a plant of 450 horse power which ought to be ample for several years. The plant will be built so that more horse power can be added with out changing the building.

The polls will be open from 9 in the morning till 9 in the evening tomorrow for registration purposes. On the 25th, the day of the election, they will be open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Minnesota Will Exhibit.

Minnesota will show from 150,000 to 200,000 people a big exhibit of her products at the land show in St. Paul December 12 to 23.

Governor Eberhart has received word from the officers of the Northwestern Development League that the business interests of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth have agreed to a deal whereby this state will be furnished exhibit space without cost at the land show. The show to be given under the auspices of the league is the only one in the country which is not a private enterprise and will be managed in such a way as to furnish space for official exhibits.

At a cost of ten thousand dollars the business interests of the three Minnesota cities have bought from the league 3,500 square feet or preferred space at the show. Each of the seven states will have a space of fifty feet long and ten feet wide for their official exhibit.

The governor has been asked to confer with officers of the league in this state and secure the interest of those necessary to put in an exhibit which will be credit to the state. Under this plan no one community or city will have an advantage over others in the state. Any city county or land company desiring to make an independent exhibit will be able to secure a limited amount of space near the state exhibit on reasonable terms, but it is the desire of the league officers for this state that the best possible exhibit be made in the name of the state as it is from such an exhibit that results are to be obtained.

The seven states which are to be thus represented are Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota. No other states will have exhibits and Canadian exhibits will be barred, the whole idea of the show being "an exposition by the seven states for the benefit of the seven states alone."

Noxious Weeds.

To all those who own, occupy or control land in the City of Thief River Falls, Minn.

No person owning, occupying, or controlling land shall permit:

Any wild mustard, wild oats, cockleburr, burdock or tumble mustard to go to seed thereon.

Any Canada thistle, oxeye daisy or quack grass to go to seed thereon, or, for more than two successive years, to reproduce itself thereon by crowns, underground stems, or buds.

Any French weed to produce seeds thereon for more than four successive years.

Any Russian thistle to grow or remain thereon at all. For the purpose of this law, the half of any road or street lying next to the lands abutting thereon shall be considered a part of such land.

No person owning, occupying or controlling land shall permit any noxious weed, or any white daisy, snapdragon, or toad flax, sow thistle, sour dock or other weeds or grasses, to produce seed upon such adjoining half of the highway.

We adopt this means of calling attention to the law; and hereby request that all weeds above mentioned, within said city, be destroyed on or before August 25th., 1911.

A failure to comply with this request will result in an enforcement of the law and the taxation of costs as provided by law.

Dated August 14, 1911.

KILLED IN RUNAWAY

A. Welo, a Prominent Farmer Met Tragic Death Monday Afternoon.

Team Became Frightened and Dragged Victim Considerable Distance.

A. Welo a prominent farmer of Pennington county living 4 miles south of the city, met a tragic death late Monday afternoon when his team ran away just outside of the city. No one witnessed the accident, but it is thought that he had been dragged some distance before the team was stopped. Death resulted from a fracture of the skull, though his head, chest and arms were also badly bruised.

After buying goods in town and transacting business at the creamery, Mr. Welo left for home about 5:30 in the afternoon. Though no one is known to have seen the tragedy it is supposed that the team became frightened at some object and started to run away, throwing Mr. Welo out of the wagon. His foot caught in the reins and he was dragged along the ground by the team.

Just how far they went is not known but about a mile from the city they caught up with another team, the driver of which stopped the horses and brought the dead body back to the city. Mr. Welo has lived on his farm for many years past and is well known and respected throughout the county. His untimely death which comes as a shock to his many friends will be deeply regretted by all. He is survived by a wife and six children.

Hailstones Did Immense Damage.

Williston, N. D. August 12.—Reports from the Squires district of Williams County are that the hailstorm there this week worked tremendous damage. The storm was from a mile and half to two miles and a half wide, and it stretched from the eastern edge of the Little Muddy valley in North Dakota to the Big Muddy valley in Montana, and in that section the crops were practically knocked entirely out.

John Slind and J. K. Hansen drove from Squires with the report that hail fell to a depth of several inches on the prairie, and that the grass and ground was pounded out of sight. On the whole the farmers in the district have prospects for a crop of about ten bushels an acre.

In the path of this unusually hard storm several small buildings and barns were extensively damaged. The North Dakota territory that has been struck lies about seven to eleven miles north of Williston, this city only having a slight sprinkle during the heavy storm in that section.

No Damage From Hail.

Sunday night a slight hail storm passed over the city and the next morning there were several reports that the crops in the vicinity of Greenbush and other places near here were badly damaged. Investigation proved, however, that no damage was done to the crops and that the hail storm was local. The grain harvest is practically completed now although there are no reports of any wheat threshing as yet.

LAND CONTEST AT CROOKSTON

First Squabble Over Opening of New Red Lake Lands Comes off at Crookston.

Pete Olson and W. J. Lee, Contestants For Valuable Piece of Timber Land East of City.

The first contest case to come up as a result of the conflict between the act and the ruling of the interior department of the U. S. Land office in regard to the opening of the Red Lake Indian reservation which was thrown open to settlement this spring, came up before the Crookston Land Office Wednesday of last week.

Pete Olson, who acted on the advice of the opening act, and so established residence prior to April 15, the date designated by the secretary of the interior as the date for the opening of these lands, and W. J. Lee who acted in accordance with the department's ruling and made settlement on the claim on the 15th, are the parties in the case.

The land is located two miles and a half east of this city and is conceded to be a valuable piece of property, and the outcome of the case will be watched with considerable interest.

The bill for the opening of the remaining lands on the Eleven Towns which was passed by the House of Representatives on February 15 provided that all remaining lands should there after be subject to homestead entry, while the secretary of the interior designated the 15th of April as the date for the opening of these lands, and the case at hand will go far towards testing the validity of the order.

P. Roark, J. Dablow and Gus Bergren went down as witnesses for Lee, while Fred Lindgren, Halvor Listol and A. Trovaton appeared for Olson.

Mrs. Krohn Dies.

Mrs. Ragna Krohn, wife of Charston Krohn, died at her home at 12 o'clock Sunday night of cancer of the stomach. Mrs. Krohn had been suffering for some time from the disease and last week she was taken to the hospital at Crookston where an operation was performed. The disease was too far advanced, however, and she was brought back to her home the latter part of the week where she passed away Sunday night. Besides her husband she is survived by four children. The funeral services were held yesterday. Mrs. Krohn's death will be mourned by her many friends who will extend their sympathy to their surviving family.

Returns From the West.

George Lipscomb returned on Friday from the Coast for which place he left the early part of this spring. During his absence, Mr. Lipscomb visited at points in the states of Montana, Idaho and Washington and reports that he was not as favorably impressed with the western states as he expected to be. He says that while absent he met quite a number of former Thief Riverites, and reports as having had an enjoyable trip, but returns more pleased with his home state than ever. His family, which has, during the course of his absence, visited with relatives at Lake City are expected to return to this city some time in September.

Child Died

Alice Stenberg, the ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Stenberg of the East Side, died last Thursday at 3 p. m. Consumption is given as the cause of death, although the deceased had been suffering from different diseases for the past year.

Crookston Fair Plans.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 12.—The directors of the Northwestern Minnesota Agricultural association have let the contract for the erection of an exhibition hall, 78 by 78, which will have over 6,000 square feet of floor space. It will be well lighted with an immense light tower in the center, which will make every inch of the space light and desirable. A large crew of workmen are rushing the construction and the building is to be completed and turned over to the fair association by Sept. 5, in ample time for preparations for the annual fair here Sept. 12, 13, 14 and 15. Because of the ideal crop conditions, Secretary Hitchcock is at work on the greatest agricultural exhibit Northwestern Minnesota has ever attempted. There will be immense showings of growing and thrashed wheat, oats, rye, flax and other grains, and a grand corn exhibit, the details of the latter being worked out at the present time.

The grass exhibit, both tame and wild, will also be a very important feature. Clover, alfalfa, millet, timothy, red top, etc., and wild grass will be shown in abundance, and the growth has been so luxuriant this year that this exhibit will be specially attractive because of the marked contrast with such large areas of agricultural country elsewhere where the hay crop has been practically a failure.

The stock exhibit will also by far exceed anything ever before seen here. Many dairymen and beef cattle raisers will have entire herds here to show the progress that has been made in stock raising in the past few years and the important factor the industry is to the tendency toward diversified farming.

The horse breeders will also have a very large exhibit. The farmers have been getting into pure strains, replacing the scrub stock formerly raised and this will be another special feature of the fair as showing great progress.

Wheat Comes Back.

(Albert Lea Tribune.)

Quite a number of farmers through the dairy districts, where but little wheat has been raised during the past ten to twenty years, sowed anywhere from ten to thirty acres of wheat this season, attracted by the high price which it was bringing. They have not had wheat on their farms for years, and were surprised with the result. Many have threshed as high as from thirty to thirty-five bushels per acre, and in some instances more. The result shows the benefits which come from dairying and a rotation of crops. From less than one third of the ground which they devoted to wheat growing previous to the time they dropped the crop they have this year harvested a crop which exceeded their entire crop at that time.

WILL INSPECT DITCH WORK

Governor Eberhart and Party Expected Here Saturday Upon Tour of Inspection.

Will Go to Grygla in Automobiles Where They Will Look Over Ditch Work and Lands.

Governor Adolph O. Eberhart, accompanied by a number of state and railroad officials are expected to arrive in the city Saturday for a three days stay in Thief River and vicinity. The main purpose of the parties' visit is to inspect the drainage work now being done on a large scale in eastern Marshall and western Beltrami county from twenty to fifty miles northeast of the city in the vicinity of Grygla.

Rapid progress has been made the past year in reclaiming this land, so rapid and wonderful that an invitation was extended the governor by the Commercial Club of this city to view the transformation personally. A year ago the country in the neighborhood was noted for its excessive moisture as well as its rich soil. The ground was so damp that no teams with difficulty could traverse it, although it was more of a lowland than swamp. The soil was so rich, however, that drainage work on a large scale was started and the land now promises to be one of the most productive parts of the state. The Northwestern Drainage Co. now has nine large dredges at work in this territory.

Another feature of the drainage work there is the excellent roads that are being built in connection with the ditches. When the soil is excavated for ditch work it is thrown to one side and rounded up into a first class road. The governor and his party will be taken over many miles of this road and it is expected that many miles more will be built in the next year. Much of this land belongs to the government and to the state and a rush of settlers to this newly developed territory is expected as soon as it is opened. The governor's party is expected to arrive on the Soo Flyer at 3 o'clock Saturday morning and will be taken in autos to Grygla that morning. It is possible that the governor may return to St Paul that night, but most of the party will remain over till Monday. While in the city they will be the guests of the Commercial Club.

Rust Does Some Damage.

While in the city last week O. G. Hanson, who resides on the Andrew Trovaton farm east of this city, reported that in all likelihood the black rust has done more damage then had been expected. He states that on his farm in places where the rust is most apparent, he thinks, the wheat crop will yield only about one third crop, and the places where prospects were good of about twenty-five bushels to the acre the early part of the summer, the yield will be in the neighborhood of 15 or 16 bushels.

Red Lake Fair in Sept.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 19, 20 and 21, are the days on which the first Red Lake County Fair is to be given. The fair directors are planning to make the first fair a "hummer". Between $1200 and $1500 is offered in premiums for exhibits. The premium list is now in the hands of the printer and will be ready for circulation in a few days. Excellent prizes are offered for exhibits of live stock, grains, vegetables, dairy products, woman's work and most anything that may be exhibited. With such an excellent crop as is now being harvested there ought to be excellent exhibits at the first fair. —Red Lake Falls Gazette.

SWEDEN.

The Bethlehem Steel company in Philadelphia, Pa., has made arrangements for the purchase of a large amount of Swedish iron ore, according to reports more than 3,000,000 tons. The time set aside for delivering the same is four years and the price per ton will be $4.50. The ore will be shipped from Narvik to Philadelphia, which will thus be the greatest destination in the world for Swedish iron ore, including such important points as Rotterdam and Middleborough, to which points so many million tons of Swedish iron ore have already been shipped. For the transportation of more than 700,000 tons of iron ore yearly will require the use of at least twelve great freight steamers. The annual freight expenditure for this ore from Narvik to Philadelphia will involve an expenditure amounting to not less than 5,000,000 crowns.

The Swedish-American Patriotic society is planning the erection of a Swedish building at the Panama-Pacific exposition, which is to be held in San Francisco in 1915. A committee has been appointed for the purpose of soliciting $25,000. Consul William Mattson has already subscribed $1,000, Mr. E. O. Lindblom, a prominent mine owner, has subscribed another $1,000 and other prominent Swedish-Americans on the west coast have promised to subscribe large sums of money. Six honorary members have already been appointed by the society—Count Ehrensvard, Swedish minister at Washington, D. C.; Consul William Mattson, Erik O. Lindblom, Dr. Philip Andreen, Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst and Governor Hiram Johnson.

A colony of 300 Swedes will soon occupy about 15,000 acres of irrigable land near Sunnyside, Wash., recently purchased by Karl A. Muhlenfeld. The Swedes will come from Minnesota and North Dakota. Should the colony succeed a larger one of foreigners direct from Sweden will be brought over and located. Muhlenfeld has been engaged for a year in locating Scandinavians in the West. He has formed colonies in California, Oregon and Washington, and was instrumental in getting a large tract of land on Vancouver island, B. C., for a colony of people from Sweden.

Grand naval maneuvers will take place near Gothenburg about Sept. 1. The coast squadron is to consist of six ironclads, two torpedo cruisers, one gunboat, one mining vessel, four torpedo chasers, five first class torpedo boats and three submarines. Among the places to be touched will be Gothenburg, Harstrand, Lysekil, Uddevalla, Fjallbacka and Stromstad. A great number of conscripts will take part in the movements.

The so called "Dance palace" at Karlavagen will be closed if protests continue to pour into the city council the way they have done of late. The citizens in the section of the city where the dance hall is located are up in arms against it and want it closed. Hundreds of young men and women have patronized the place and it is claimed that many girls, far too young to be out without a guardian, have frequented the place.

The lockout established by the carpenters of the country involves some 30,000 men, who are now out of employment. One attempt after another has been made to unite the carpenters and the building contractors, but thus far all efforts in this direction have proven fruitless. New difficulties are arising and there is no telling at this time how long it will take to settle the present conflict.

Mayor Harrison of Chicago has appointed John Ericsson, the well known Swedish engineer, president of a commission which will have charge of the building of an underground traffic system in that city. Mr. Ericsson is considered one of the best engineers in the country and has been city engineer for the city of Chicago since 1897. He will receive a salary of $12,000 a year.

The old Katarina "hiss" (elevator) is about to be discontinued. A provision was made, however, when it was built that the city should stand good for it to the amount of 175,000 crowns. If a new elevator is built the city will have to use this money for that purpose. The restaurant on top of the old Katarina will also be discontinued.

NORWAY.

Bringing the news of a strange phenomenon which was witnessed at midnight on June 12, in latitude 16, the Norwegian ship Mathilda, Captain Kjerland, arrived at Seattle Aug. 5 from the west coast South America ports. Captain Kjerland reports that for two hours the vessel steamed over an apparently boiling sea, which emitted so strong a yellow light as to make it possible for the officers of the ship to read their watches as clearly as by daylight. The water was creamy yellow and the phenomenon was accompanied by great heat. Some of the water hauled aboard by Captain Kjerland possessed a temperature of 110 degrees, but almost as soon as examined it lost its milky appearance. It is believed by the captain that his vessel passed over the crater of a volcano.

It is characteristic of our modern internationalism to find the Samtiden, a Norwegin periodical, printing the report by a Russian writer of a conversation with the late Count Tolstoy about the present struggle of the Finnish people for national self-preservation. The writer in question signs himself merely "Adler." He visited the venerable sage of Yasnaya Polyana about a year ago, having come there straight from Helsingfors. The interview brought from Tolstoy some characteristic expressions, showing at once his heartfelt sympathy for a people in distress and his absolute unwillingness to countenance any violent resistance.

The Roros copper works, which have been operating for 267 years, are about to close up. This is the startling news given by the Aftenbladet (Christiania) in one of its recent issues. The entire city of Roros is dependent on the copper plant for its existence and the good people in that little city will now miss the only opportunity they have of making a living. That the last strike helped much to close up the plant is reported by the director of the works, who reluctantly admitted that there will be nothing doing there after Sept. 1.

At Graesholmen, Christiania, a number of visitors conducted themselves in such a brutal manner that the restaurant keeper was compelled to get his gun and commenced firing a few shots in the ground to scare the intruders away. It appears, however, that some of the bullets must have taken effect, for one person was killed and another one seriously wounded in the leg. The police department is investigating the matter.

Great preparations are being made for the quadrennial field maneuvers of the Norwegian army, which will be held this fall at Stange, Loiten and Romedal. About 20,000 soldiers will participate in the maneuvers and King Haakon will be present to review the troops. The maneuvers will be held Sept. 4 to 9, inclusive.

Norway's import and export business during the past year shows an increase of over 75,000,000 crowns. The imports amounted to 402,000,000 crowns and the exports were 283,000,000 crowns. Norwegian freight steamers during the past twelve months have earned an aggregate sum of 130,000,000 crowns.

Following a rich discovery of gold on the Spitzbergen group of islands in the Arctic ocean Norwegian geologists are said to have reported to their government immense coal fields on the islands. Norway, it is said, is preparing to perfect its title to Spitzbergen.

During the course of one year Christiania citizens consume 48,000 steers, 3,600 hogs and 49,000 sheep, besides a large amount of fish and water and land fowl.

DENMARK.

Judging from the following there is at least one hard-headed preacher in Denmark, who does not believe that newspaper men are eligible to pass through the golden gates: "Rev. Ricord, a well known preacher, stated at a recent religious meeting in Hillerod that, according to his opinion, Christ is to return to this earth twice. The first time he will take the faithful with him, and the rest will be left behind for a time. Commenting on this peculiar situation he said, among other things: 'We may easily imagine that the next morning's papers will contain a list of the names of the departed, for it may be taken for granted that very few newspaper men will be included in the first call.'"

Danes are this year seeking recognition for one of their favorites from the Nobel committee. A number of the professors of the University of Copenhagen have been writing letters to the Swedish academy recommending Dr. Ernst von Recke for the Nobel prize in literature. Others, again, have recommended Dr. Karl Gjellerup, who is an author of note in Denmark.

According to the Folkets Avis the world known Dr. Cook, alleged discoverer of the North pole, has been seen in Copenhagen recently. He arrived on the Hans Egede from Greenland the other day, a fact which proves that he still has designs on the North pole. What the "doctor" has been doing in Greenland is not known.

The fourth annual reunion of the Danish American association was held in Copenhagen from Aug. 4 to Aug. 9 inclusive and was attended by a large number of home visiting Danish Americans and their friends. Among the speakers were Charles Wagner of Des Moines, Ia., and Peter Sorenson of Aarhus, Denmark, and others.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

WHITTIER ON THE STAND

Superintendent of the State Training School at Red Wing Testifies in His Own Behalf.

Superintendent Frank A. Whittier of the Red Wing state training school revealed two lines of defense in the opening of his side of the case before the board of control at Red Wing.

He made headway by documentary evidence toward establishing his contention that corporal punishment as administered under his direction at the state training school was given with the full knowledge and consent of the board of control. He also introduced a great mass of records on file to show that the corporal punishment administered was made necessary by repeated misconduct on the part of unruly inmates. His records showed that one girl, who has already testified under the charges brought by Ralph Wheelock, secretary to Governor Eberhart, was reported as many as ninety-eight times for violations of the rules, without receiving corporal punishment; that another girl, now married, received only three whippings for sixty-eight reports of misconduct.

In the course of his testimony Superintendent Whittier admitted that he knew a hose and a harness tug were used in punishing girls at Red Wing and that this form of chastisement was inflicted with his approval.

The plaintiff's attorney went after the witness hard as to the record kept of corporal punishment inflicted. Mr. Whittier said that in some cases entries as to the number of blows were made in the permanent books of the institution, but that in general the records of whippings were kept in individual envelopes. In regard to several whippings of girls, Mr. Whittier said he had approved the record of punishment, but had no knowledge of the merits of the case other than that conveyed by the formal record. It was brought out that the records of two whippings to which Mr. Whittier testified in direct examination either were not made out or have been lost.

DETECTIVE FRASER IS DEAD

St. Paul Officer Victim of Bandit's Bullet.

Frank Fraser, said by Chief O'Connor of the St. Paul police department to be the best detective in the Northwest, is dead.

The attempt of Peter Juhl, an escaped convict, to kill his captor has proved successful and instead of facing a return to prison to finish a twelve-year sentence Juhl is now locked up at police headquarters with the charge of murder hanging over him.

Juhl is the fourth member of the gang that operated in Minneapolis in connection with the Central State bank robbery and was a "pal" of Jerry McCarthy, who was killed recently in a duel with a Minneapolis policeman.

HOLDS INDICTMENTS VALID

Judge Overrules Demurrer In White Earth Land Fraud Cases.

Judge Willard, at the conclusion of an all day argument in the United States district court at Fergus Falls, overruled demurrers in the White Earth land fraud cases and held that the indictments are valid.

The indictments charge Gus H. Beaulieu and a number of other prominent citizens of White Earth and vicinity with conspiracy to defraud the government by inducing government officers to issue patents to full blood Indians and mixed blood minors by procuring affidavits that they were of mixed blood. The charge of conspiracy was the only method by which the government was able to reach the accused parties criminally.

BURNS OVER THREE ACRES

Fire Destroys Box and Lumber Plant at St. Paul.

Fighting desperately to quench flames that fairly leaped from one section to another of the three acres occupied by the Minnesota Box and Lumber company the fire department of St. Paul was unable to hold the loss under $75,000. Fifty thousand dollars of this amount was in lumber, $15,000 in machinery and the remainder covers the damage to the office building. The insurance does not exceed $40,000. Fifty men are without employment as a result of the blaze. The origin of the fire is unknown.

SAY ACCUSER WAS SLAYER

Young Negro Boy Alleged to Have Confessed Murder.

Hall Green, aged seventeen, a mulatto, son of John Green of Le Sueur, who accused first a tramp, Masterson, and then Fred Felber of Le Sueur of the murder of the harvest hand, Harry Rugg, on July 29, has made full confession that he alone, without aid, murdered Rugg, the authorities allege. Masterson and Felber were released from jail.

INDIANS SECURING LIQUOR

Pussyfoot Johnson Again In Northern Minnesota.

Chief Special Agent Johnson of the Indian service was in Walker for the first time since last year looking up the liquor question with reference to furnishing intoxicants to persons of Indian blood. He went from there to Akeley, where it is alleged bootlegging is being carried on.

While Walker, the nearest town to the reservation, has successfully put the lid on Indian booze the fact remains that the reds are getting liquor. Most of the bootlegging is done by Indians who go to other towns and obtain a supply of whisky which they take on the reservation. Owing to the demand for the liquor they have no trouble in obtaining a dollar a pint for it.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL

Minnesota State Bar Association Will Draft One.

An employers' liability act having the endorsement of the Minnesota State Bar association will be presented at the next legislature as the result of action taken at a meeting of the board of governors of the state bar at the Minnesota club, St. Paul, following luncheon at which the members were the guests of C. A. Severance, president of the association. A resolution providing for the appointment of a special employes' compensation bill committee was passed and the personnel of it, although tentatively arranged, will be definitely determined within a few days by President Severance and Secretary C. W. Farnham.

CASHIER IS ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLEMENT

Examiners Close State Bank at Cobden, Minn.

Charging Rollin F. West, cashier of the Cobden State bank, with the embezzlement of $9,787.04, State Bank Superintendent Kelsey M. Chase had West arrested.

The act was due to the findings of Deputy Examiners Brandvold and Snyder, who made an examination of the bank's condition Saturday.

The bank was closed for business and is in the hands of Deputy Brandvold.

From the results of the investigation it is said that funds have been systematically taken from the bank for a year.

Mr. West's predicament is said to be due to the fact that he was an extensive dealer in automobiles. It is charged that in his capacity as cashier of the bank he used the funds of the institution to keep up the automobile business and carry the notes which he had accumulated as a result of sales.

West's hearing was held and he waived examination and was bound over to the December grand jury.

West has been cashier of the bank for three years, has a wide acquaintance in the vicinity and has generally been popular.

All of the depositors of the closed bank will receive their deposits in full and the bank will be reopened as soon as the state officials complete their examination and make their final reports.

FATHER AND CHILD KILLED

Mother Seriously Injured When Car Strikes Buggy.

Frank J. Klingelhutz, thirty-five years old, of Minneapolis, was instantly killed, his eleven-months-old daughter Marion so badly injured that she died a few hours later and Mrs. Anna Klingelhutz, his wife, so seriously hurt that she may die, as the result of a collision between a Minnetonka street car and the buggy in which they were riding at Glenn lake three miles beyond Hopkins. Helen Streich, fourteen years old, sister of Mrs. Klingelhutz, was in the back seat and escaped uninjured. The buggy was smashed and the horse severely hurt.

The accident occurred at the crossing where the view of the tracks in both directions is obstructed by high banks.

Following a romantic courtship Miss Florence Hopwood, a Minneapolis girl, is to become the wife of Charles G. Gates, who will inherit the greater part of the estate of his father, John W. Gates, American millionaire, who died a few days ago in Paris. The engagement took place early in the summer before Charles G. Gates was called to Paris by the serious illness of his father and, when he left, Miss Hopwood and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hopwood, accompanied him. Mr. Hopwood has returned, but his wife and daughter are still in Paris.

NATIONAL RACE FOR GOOD ROADS

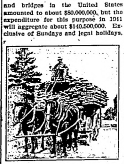
Every State Aroused to the Benefits of Improved Highways.

$140,500,000 TO BE SPENT.

Recent Good Road Laws Are Making the Future Look Bright For This Country In the Way of Good Transportation—New York Spending More Than Any Other State.

One million dollars a day is the record that will be established throughout the United States as the expenditure for improving and maintaining public roads. Never before in the history of the country has there been such interest in the improvement of highways, and, with the legislatures of the states appropriating millions of dollars for this purpose, the good roads movement has received its greatest impetus since the foundation of the republic.

The money that will be expended on the roads of this country during the next six months will be more than ever before in the same period of time. In 1904 the total expenditure for the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges in the United States amounted to about $80,000,000, but the expenditure for this purpose in 1911 will aggregate about $140,500,000. Exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, the outlay for roads will amount to $1,000,000 a day during the present road building season.

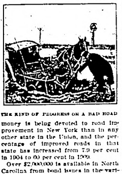


HOW THE FARMER GETS TO TOWN ON A GOOD ROAD.

"The prospect for a complete system of public roads throughout the United States is better now than ever before in the history of the country, and a uniformity of recent good road laws gives promise that this country will eventually take its place with France in having the most sensible system of road supervision and maintenance," says L. W. Page, director of the office of public roads.

In California the state has issued $18,000,000 in bonds with which to build a system of state highways. This work will begin during the present season. In the state of Connecticut about $2,250,000 will be expended this year out of the state treasury for trunk line and state aid roads. Of the $5,000,000 bond issue recently authorized in Maryland over $1,250,000 will be available this year for trunk line and state aid roads. Massachusetts will expend from state revenues over $1,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of state roads.

It is expected that at least $5,000,000 will be expended on state aid roads and on trunk line systems in the state of New York in addition to $7,000,000 already raised by local taxation. More money is being devoted to road improvement in New York than in any other state in the Union, and the percentage of improved roads in that state has increased from 7.9 per cent in 1904 to 60 per cent in 1909.



THE KIND OF PROGRESS ON A BAD ROAD

Over $2,000,000 is available in North Carolina from bond issues in the various counties for road improvement this year, and the legislature has authorized the construction of a road from the Atlantic ocean to the Tennessee line, a distance of 425 miles.

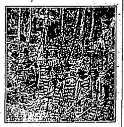
In 1910 thirty counties in Ohio voted $2,500,000 in bonds to be expended this year. Ohio will also expend about $500,000 from state revenues for road improvement. In Pennsylvania the state aid appropriation will probably amount to over $1,000,000, and a $50,000,000 bond issue is being considered. Various counties in Tennessee will expend $1,500,000 from bond issues. Over $1,500,000 will be expended from bond issues in various counties in Texas. In Virginia $2,500,000 has been authorized by various counties to be expended this year, while over $250,000 has been appropriated in the state of Wisconsin in accordance with the state aid system.

GOOD ROADS BEING BUILT IN COLORADO BY CONVICTS

State Saving at Least $100,000 by Making Criminals Do Work.

By putting its convicted criminals "on honor" and allowing them to do road building—such service to the state gaining them commutation of sentence—Colorado seems to have gone a long way toward solving the highway problem and the problem of the unemployed convict at one and the same time.

About half the convicts in the Colorado state penitentiary at Canyon City are employed in road work. The prison population varies from 700 to 750, and it is estimated that the labor thus secured to the state means an actual cash value of at least $100,000 per year, not to speak of solving the vexing question of keeping criminals employed without conflicting with free labor.



CONVICTS AT WORK ON COLORADO ROADS.

It costs about 36 cents a day to keep a convict in a road camp as against 12 cents a day in the penitentiary. The men must have better food when engaged in such hard manual labor, and this forms the chief item of added expense. But even this expense has been saved to the general taxpayers of Colorado, as the counties through which the roads are built contribute the extra 24 cents per day per man. This tax is gladly borne by the counties, as they receive most of the benefit from the construction of the roads.

TAFT INTERESTED IN GOOD ROADS.

In a recent letter President Taft expresses his interest in good roads as follows:

"I have a very intense interest in the development of good roads the country over, and I am very glad to know that the movement in favor of this improvement has taken such national form as to indicate the widespread feeling of the necessity for giving to the residents of the country as distinguished from the city a facility for intercommunication that will greatly add to the comfort of living in the country and will increase the profit of the producer and farmer by reducing the cost of his initial transportation.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

Two North Carolina Farmers Are Constantly Dragging Roads.

An example worthy of emulation is that set by Grimes Bros., farmers and millers, of Lexington, N. C. These gentlemen own a big farm north of the city, touching the city limits. A short stretch of the road through this farm has been macadamized, but so well is the whole kept that it is impossible to tell without very close attention just where the nine foot strip of macadam ends and the clay begins. The road for more than a mile north of the city is almost perfect, smooth, level and dry in all sorts of weather, and the secret of its fine condition is the road drag. After every hard rain a team and drag go over the road, and it is thereby kept in almost perfect condition.

In striking contrast to this road is the road just beyond the farm of these good citizens. Ruts and holes abound, and travel ceases to be a pleasure and becomes a positive discomfort to man and beast. The road drag did it all.

All of this work has never cost the county or township a penny. These gentlemen have furnished the labor and teams and have done the work "without reward or hope of reward." It is their hope that the example which they have set will spread.—Southern Good Roads.

Roads In a Small Town.

In the southwest corner of Reno county, Kan., is the town of Turon, which the 1910 census report gives a population of 612. Some eighteen months ago a commercial club was organized in Turon, says the Kansas City Star. Its roll now numbers 103 members. Since its organization four miles of four foot cement sidewalks have been built in Turon.

A sidewalk on both sides of the street extends from the Missouri Pacific depot to the Rock Island depot, a distance of half a mile. All the side streets are improved with similar walks. Some time ago Turon built a new schoolhouse. It was located about nine blocks from the business section, and as soon as it was finished cement walks were laid from the business part of the town. That's the way they do things in Turon and may in part explain why Turon has increased in population 62 per cent since the last census was taken.

BRANDENBURG (KY.) WOMEN SUBSCRIBE FOR A GOOD ROAD

Feminine Club Wakes Up to Situation First and Makes Travel Easier.

Everybody is in favor of good roads as an abstract proposition, but when it comes down to the concrete—that is to say, to sand and gravel—there are differences of opinion. Some Kentuckians there are who declare themselves strongly for good roads, but say they do not know how to go about getting them.

One way to go about it has been exemplified recently by the Federated Woman's club of Brandenburg, Ky. The members of that live organization felt the need of a good road from Brandenburg to Weldon, a station on the Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis railroad. Brandenburg has no railroad, and when the citizens of that town go traveling they either take a steamboat or drive over to Weldon to take the train.

Meade county mud possibly is a few degrees worse than the mud anywhere else in Kentucky. The male citizens of Meade have been handling the road question in the same way that many other Kentucky counties have been handling it. Mud multiplied by mud produces more mud, but the male citizens of Meade didn't seem to know it.

The women woke up to the situation first, and they determined to "pike" the road from Brandenburg to Weldon. They raised more than $1,200 by private subscription, and they asked the fiscal court to do the rest. The court came across with an appropriation of $3,000 as an evidence of good faith. The road will be completed by the end of summer. Next winter it will be possible to travel from Brandenburg to Weldon without breaking a hamestring or straining a singletree. A wagon will not be a load for a four horse team, and walking will not be an impossibility when a big thaw comes.

A TIP FOR COUNTIES.

The bond plan is the economical, equitable and intelligent method to provide permanent municipal improvements, and the same can be said of good roads construction. The county which is building roads by special taxes is making a mistake by doing it in a piecemeal fashion when a bond issue by the entire county will provide a lump sum for systematic road building. The plan of voting road bonds by townships is nearly equally as bad, for roads should be constructed by counties in accordance with systematic plans, taking care of all townships and making it decidedly more economical for them than for each township to maintain its own expensive road building service and equipment. This is on the side, but the opportunity is too fine for us to let it slip by without making known the truth to counties which are going to build good roads by some hook or crook. There is the slipshod way and the right way. Don't piddle.—Wilmington (N. C.) Star.

MODERN ROADMAKING.

Efforts In England to Meet Motor and Trolley Car Traffic.

The following illustrates the efforts in England to meet in roadmaking the conditions imposed by motor and trolley car traffic:

A new and direct roadway is proposed between West Hartlepool and Middlesbrough, near Newcastle, in the county of Northumberland, a direct line of seven and three-fourth miles. In designing the roadway the engineer in charge has given attention to the possible development in both heavy, slow and fast vehicular and motor traffic, each of which demands separate consideration and possibly different methods of road surface treatment.

The plan accordingly provides for a center footpath nine feet in width, on the east side of the footpath a road for motor and light, fast traffic twenty-four feet in width and on the west side of the footpath a road for heavy, slow traffic twenty-two feet in width. This gives a width for highway purposes of fifty-five feet. The plan further shows on the westernmost side of the footpath a width of fourteen feet reserved for light railway or trolley purposes making a total width of land to be acquired of sixty-nine feet.

A scheme similar to this will doubtless control future roadmaking in England, and existing roads may be reconstructed on a corresponding plan. One of the chief advantages in separating the several kinds of traffic would be in permitting different methods of surfacing the roads to be used and those best adapted to the traffic accommodated. Another advantage would be the lessening of the chances of accidents. A third advantage would be the greater speed permissible to fast traveling.—Consul Walter C. Hamm, Hull, England.

ALL READ THIS.

Any one having stone he desires to have tested for road building purposes should write to the office of public roads, Washington, for necessary instructions as to how to proceed to secure such tests. The sender will be required to pay all transportation charges, but aside from this tests are made without further cost to the party desiring them.

Literary Cure For Snoring.

To the snorers who ask for the cure let the cause be announced. Snoring is the result of stomachic repletion and mental vacuity. A correspondent who has suffered from both prescribes the cure—a light supper or none, to avoid repletion, and the frequent repetition of some literary phrase to provide occupation for the mind during sleeping hours. Go to bed and think of some short literary phrase to occupy your mind. The combination of the two prescriptions against snoring—the abstention from food and the meditation upon a literary phrase—may be found in Ecclesiasticus, the ninetieth verse of the thirty-first chapter. "How sufficient to a well mannered man is a very little, and he doth not breathe hard upon his bed."—London Spectator.

Dead Man's Teeth.

Before artificial teeth were created deficiencies had to be made good by the real article, so body snatchers ravaged the cemeteries at night, breaking up the jaws of the dead to extract their teeth to sell to dentists for insertion in live men's mouths. An army of these ghouls followed Wellington's army. They were licensed as sutlers, but once night fell out came their nippers and they prowled over the battlefield extracting the teeth of the dead or dying.

THE BOND ELECTION.

In the special election to be held August 25, for the purpose of voting bonds to build an auxiliary steam plant, every citizen and tax payer should express his opinion at the polls. After last fall and this summer, there can be little doubt that water power can not be depended upon and that a steam plant is an absolute necessity.

It is the opinion of experts that the proposed plant will not only earn enough to pay the interest on the bonds, but also will establish a sinking fund which will liquidate the entire obligation. The municipal lighting plant is the most valuable possesion of the city and one that a private corporation would gladly buy. The citizens in general appreciate this fact and there is little doubt that the bond issue will carry by a large majority.

Held Court In Station.

Persons who happened to be at the Great Northern Station Tuesday afternoon were treated to a unique sight when Judge Watts of the district court held court between trains. Judge Watts, who was passing through the city from the north, had the train held a few minutes while he heard the arguments in habeas corpus proceedings to release Knute Flakne from the county jail. Flakne was committed to the county bastile for 30 days August 8 upon the charge of drunkeness. Owing to some fault alleged to exist in the service of the warrant, proceedings were started by the prisoner's attorney, of Crookston. The attorney was not present Tuesday but Judge Watts reviewed the case and stated that he would announce his decision later. After the trial was over the prisoner was returned to the jail to await the judge's order.

Invite Taft Here.

The local Commercial Club has extended an invitation to President Taft to visit Thief River Falls in his proposed tour of the northwestern states. According to his present plans Mr. Taft intends to visit the northwest this fall and explain his stand upon Canadian reciprocity, and if he does he is very likely to include this city in his journey. A dispatch from Washington states that the president has taken the invitation under consideration.

It is the variation in the quality of cow's milk from less than 2 per cent of butter fat to 7 or more that makes it absolutely necessary to apply the Babcock test to all cows which are to have a place in the successful dairy. Quantity counts, of course, but this is but one half the story. The other half is whether it is good for anything after it is in the pail.

It is an interesting fact in connection with those countries that have attained the highest degree of agricultural development and achieved the greatest prosperity that invariably this condition has resulted from dairying and stock raising. It should also be added that it is under these same conditions that the fertility of the soil has been in largest measure preserved.

The past few weeks have been an eye opener as to the drought resisting powers of tomato plants. Not only have they got along without rain for weeks at a time, but have set lots of fruit without being watered artificially. They have demonstrated beyond question their semitropical nature and the further fact that, above all, they require lots of hot weather.

The difference in feeding value between corn and wheat is not so great as one would naturally suppose. Chemical analysis shows that in 100 pounds of the former grain there are 7.8 pounds of muscle forming elements and 770.4 pounds of heat and fat formers. In the latter there are 8.8 pounds of muscle formers and 70.9 pounds of fat formers. These figures show that corn has slightly the better of it as a ration to fit stock for market, with wheat preferable as a ration for growing things.

That race horses, like professional athletes, live the pace that kills was shown a few days ago at Grand Rapids, Mich., when the promising little mare Penisa Maid, a daughter of Pennant and Seneca Maid, died after an illness of but a few hours. Penisa Maid had made an official record of 2:04¼, and it was expected she would reach the two minute mark before the end of the season. The little mare was "discovered" at Sheldon, Ia., in 1908, sold at that time for $1,500, and about a year ago was bought by a Canadian horseman for $25,000.

Many of the ailments from which poultry, calves and swine suffer might be largely averted were greater pains taken to keep their quarters sweet and clean. Filth of one kind and another is the stuff in which germs breed, and without exception the serious diseases from which animals suffer are of germ origin. Fumigation, disinfection and whitewashing are all valuable aids in securing the desired results. Another condition tending to help greatly in preserving the health of both poultry and animals is keeping them dry. This should always be kept in mind.

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

So severe has the drought been in the vicinity of De Smet, S. D., that a number of settlers have shot their emaciated live stock to put them out of misery rather than allow them to starve to death.

In nine cases out of ten the fellow who cannot "afford" to buy clothes for himself and his wife good enough so that they would feel justified in attending church spends yearly more than the amount needed for this purpose on booze and tobacco.

The average peaty soil contains an excess of humus, but is deficient in phosphoric acid. This can be supplied in the form of barnyard manure or even more effectively in the shape of the commercial phosphates. This can be got at about $55 per ton, and its application gives a generous return.

The artificial leg of a farmer we read of the other day got overheated and exploded with a sound like a battleship gun, going into a thousand pieces in the midst of a cloud of smoke. This should be a solemn warning to the careless to keep shy of mower sickles and railroad tracks or to buy legs guaranteed all cork.

It is a commendable precaution to tie horses when one has to go some distance from them. True, one may leave them without tying fifty times without harm resulting. Yet the next time something may happen to frighten them, and a runaway is the result, in which vehicle or machinery may not only be damaged, but the team seriously injured. Insurance against such a fracas is worth the time required to make a team secure.

What is considered a rather unusual market incident was the sale of 280 American sheep on the Toronto (Canada) market a short time since at $5.50 per hundredweight. A duty of 88 cents a head was paid on these sheep, and they sold for 16 cents per hundredweight more than the Canadian animals. If conditions with reference to other commodities are at all like this, the new reciprocity agreement bids fair to be a boon rather than a detriment to the farmer on this side the line.

It has been quite generally supposed that seed of most any kind brought from a distance would produce better and larger crops than that grown near home. Some experiments recently concluded by the Missouri experiment station prove quite conclusively that, while this principle seems to work out all right in the case of seed potatoes, it does not hold in the case of imported seed corn. In fact, the best results have been secured with seed which was acclimated to the conditions under which it is grown.

A cheese factory at Appleton, Wis., has been awarded the contract of manufacturing a 12,000 pound cheese, which is said to be three times the size of any cheese on record. To make this cheese, which is to be exhibited at the national dairy show in Chicago, will require the milk of 6,500 cows for the day, or 130,000 pounds of milk. The making of the cheese will be in charge of eighteen expert cheesemakers and twenty-five helpers. It is to be made on a special flat car, and a refrigerator will have to be built around it in order to keep it until the time of the dairy show.

While the adoption of the Canadian reciprocity measure may have some slight effect in reducing the price of wheat at points near the Canadian border, it is apparent that it will greatly stimulate the demand for American horses by the removal of the $40 per head duty. A friend who lives at Outlook, Saskatchewan, tells us there is a great demand for horses in the Canadian northwest and that at present horses which he can buy at $250 per pair in the states he can ship to Saskatchewan and get $500 for. This price would cover the $40 duty and a handsome profit over and above transportation charges.

Whether one be a grower of grain, vegetables or fruit, it would be to his advantage to have his name entered on the mailing list for the crop bulletins which are issued simultaneously every month by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture. These reports not only give the conditions of any given crop at the time issued, but also give the figures for the same time for the year preceding and for a period of ten years. They enable one to determine in what states there is a crop shortage and where the best market for produce is likely to be. Uncle Sam sends them out for the benefit of his folks and is glad to put on his list the names of those who would like them.

When the tomatoes have attained their size and are two-thirds colored, the ripening process can be hastened considerably if they are carefully picked and put stem side up in the bright sunshine, where one's own or the neighbor's chickens cannot get at them.

In times of severe drought, such as has existed during the past two or three months, one cannot help but be impressed with the pitiful inadequacy of artificial means of watering lawn or garden, especially when effected through the average nozzle. It is such a puny, pygmy performance as to be well nigh ridiculous.

There seems to be good ground for believing that a seeding of clover made at once on meadows where the spring seeding died out because of the dry weather would get sufficient root to withstand the cold weather of winter. Alfalfa sown at this time lives through, as a rule, and there seems to be no reason why clover should not.

Kentucky has been dry along with several other states the past few weeks—so much so that in one county, Fleming, it has been found necessary to import 10,000 barrels of water to meet the immediate needs of men, animals and growing crops, and in a very true sense this was only a drop in the bucket as compared with what was really needed.

A move is on in the poultry world looking to the adoption of standards of judging in poultry contests which will lay greater stress on performance in egg production rather than fancy points which only please the eye. This problem, which is up to the poultry fancier, is very much like the one which the Jersey cattle breeders are struggling with—points in the show ring versus performance at the pail.

Professor Hunter, entomologist of the Kansas experiment station, who has been studying the grasshopper problem, recommends a spring disking of alfalfa fields to reduce the pest. The eggs are deposited in clusters, or pods, just beneath the surface of the ground, and stirring the soil in the manner mentioned breaks them up and destroys them. The disking suggested is also to be commended, in that it will kill many weeds just starting.

In most instances of the "bad" boy the trouble likely is not half so much due to any inherent badness as to a lack of sympathy and real interest in parent or guardian and to a failure to properly direct the outgo of his physical and nervous energy. An engine is a mighty dangerous proposition with steam up and a broken rail ahead; so, too, a team of horses in a runaway with a mower. The bad boy is like both when off the track or lacking wise guidance and restraint.

The old fashioned potato beetle has got in its work with telling effect in a good many sections this season. This chap is striped like his common relative, twice as long, and not only feeds on potato, wonderberry and clematis vines, but tackles beans, beets and most anything else that happens to be growing in the garden. It seems to be rather migratory in habit and may play smash with one garden and not touch the one over the fence. Information about this pest is more profitably got by reading than by experience.

A suggestion made a short time since in these notes is worth repetition—to the effect that any feeder who is so fixed that he can finish cattle, hogs or sheep for market during the next eight or nine months is sure to be well paid for his efforts. As a result of widespread drought many sections have been virtually depopulated of the kinds of stock mentioned. This has meant in the past a glutting of markets with underfed stuff in poor condition, which has tended to demoralize prices on all grades. Now, however, with most of this emergency stock sold, prices are improving, and they give promise of reaching very satisfactory levels.

Many a husbandman who has leveled land for purposes of irrigation has been surprised at the fact that the growth of crops was slight on soil from which the surface had been scraped, he naturally supposing that such soil, being new, would also be rich and cause plant growth. The meager growth noted is due not to a lack of fertility in the soil so much as to an improper physical condition and lack of humus or decaying vegetable matter. Such soil should be fertilized with barnyard manure and should be sown to some legume, such as vetch, soy beans or peas, and this growth turned under. Such treatment will give the necessary humus and make the soil productive.

Just as the cotton boll weevil was a blessing in disguise to the cotton grower, in that it showed him the benefits of a diversified agriculture, so the present droughty season, following on the heels of that of last year, bids fair to be a godsend to the corn belt farmer, for in the absence of sufficient hay it has practically forced him to erect silos in order to realize a maximum value from his corn crop. Hundreds of farmers are installing these fodder savers, and silo companies are swamped with orders. One season will be enough to prove their worth, and hereafter they will be filled whether the season be wet or dry. It is likely that in years to come many farmers will look back and thank the drought of 1911 for forcing them to erect silos.

TWO HIRED MEN.

We have in mind two hired men who in a way are fairly representative of two types to be found in most every neighborhood in the country. Some facts about them and the way they do their work may be instructive. One gets $37.50 per month and board and is known as the best hired man in the township. He can not only load a manure spreader and curry horses when it is necessary, but he has an intelligent idea of the planning and execution of the farm work and operations. In the spring he talks matters over with his employer as to the general plans for the season, and this is about all the directions he gets. Quite naturally he is steady, absolutely reliable as well as honest. More than this, he makes his employer's interest and welfare his own. Carrying out this idea, he sees that the stock is carefully handled, that the machinery is kept in good repair and put under cover when he is through using it. All in all he's a gem and, notwithstanding the wages he receives, is cheap at the price. The other man gets $22.50 and board, and he's an expensive proposition at that figure. In charity to him it may be said that his heredity and environment were not the best. However, he has done nothing whatever to pick up and improve. His employer has to give him directions at the beginning of most every half day's work, and there are mighty few days when he does not get balled up in the scenery in one way or another. He is careless and rough with the horses and machinery, is mighty careful not to work overtime and shows practically no interest in his work or the welfare of his employer. He pounds and cusses the cows on occasion and is worse than a drought and flies as a milk shrinker. For this reason the employer does most of the milking. Semi-occasionally he gets jagged up on trips to town and is worse than nothing for a day following these functions. He kicks on the wages paid him and doesn't seem to understand why he is not worth $10 a month more than he is getting. But nearby farmers have him spotted and would not hire him except in direct extremity. The truth is, he's a punk proposition and a blot on the agricultural landscape. Readers may think these two hired men are extremes. They are, but in every farming community are hired men who approach the one type or the other. There are never enough of the first class to supply the demand, while the cheap kind seldom stay four months with one man and are a drug on the market. The boy who plans to hire out in later years would do well to read this hired man story twice.

THE MARKETING OF PRODUCE.

It's too bad it is so, but producing a crop is only a little more than half of the job. The other important part is getting rid of it at a price that will pay expenses and give a margin of profit. Many a grower gives his crop—vegetables or fruits—every attention it requires, only to be caught in the windup and skinned because of an ignorance of market conditions. The writer has found it advisable some three weeks before the time to market a given crop to write to several nearby market centers and get quotations from commission men for one's stuff. The replies will indicate the hungry market and where it is likely the best prices can be obtained. It is far better for the novice who is not on to the tricks of the commission men to sell f. o. b. shipping station rather than to ship on consignment. The latter plan is followed very satisfactorily by some, but it should be adopted only by those who have had experience with market methods and who know beyond question that the firms to which they consign produce are reliable.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

An interesting contest was pulled off near Dekalb, Ill., early last month. The gathering was in the nature of an old settlers' meeting, a leading feature of which was the use of old time tools in the harvesting of grain as compared with the modern reaper. Men of ninety years and over who swung cradles in their earlier years were there and cradled grain with them. Next a self rake reaper was called into service, operated by graybeards who used them years ago; then a Marsh harvester, driven by the inventor himself, made a round or two, and, last, a modern reaper, with no one near it but the man driving the horses, concluded the interesting contest. Those who were privileged to witness these doings had placed before their eyes the march of seventy-five years of progress in agricultural methods. It was a day they will remember.

DIVORCED AT SIXTY.

It is well nigh beyond comprehension on any rational basis how two people who have lived together thirty or forty years—reared children, shared joy and sorrow, stood together in adversity and prosperity—can bring themselves to the point of severing their marital bonds in a divorce court. Life may have had little for such a pair that was wholesome and bright, but separation would seem to offer less. At such an age it is too late to start life over again. Far better is it to arbitrate differences, which are in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred traceable to selfishness, make the best of what may in a sense have been a bad bargain and finish the journey together.

Steam Plant on City's Ground.

At a regular meeting of the city council held last evening it was decided to build the proposed steam plant on the city's own ground near the pumping station on the west side of the river. As the steam plant is to be a permanent institution, it was thought best to locate it on ground that belonged to the city instead of rented or leased ground. This decision was reached after a careful investigation by the council of all the available sites.

At the meeting last evening the report of committee which was appointed to investigate oil engines was submitted. The report said in brief that these engines were unreliable unless situated in the oil belt where oil of the same test from one well could be secured. The report also stated that the cost of electricity per kilowatt would be about the same with a steam plant with coal at $3.85 a ton.

Good Hunting Coming.

Predictions are that the prarie chickens are unusually thick thick this year and the hunter who starts out September 1 ought to come back with a full bag. It is said in some portions of the county a person can almost catch them with his hands and a stout club will do as much damage as a shot gun. Game Warden Cook is on the lookout for "sooners" and promises to keep the game well preserved until Sept. 1.

What Will Our Rate Be?

A passenger rate of one fare for the round trip on all roads excepting the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo Line during state fair week has been agreed upon by the Western Passenger Association, according to A. B. Cutts, general passenger agent of the Minneapolis and St. Louis road. Mr. Cutts has returned from a meeting in Chicago. It was decided at that meeting to make the rate good from all points in Minnesota and in other states within 150 miles of the Twin Cities. This will make the rate lower than under the two-cent fare law.

Passenger agents of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo Line have not yet announced what rates they will grant. According to Mr. Cutts, indications are that travel to Minneapolis during fair week will be large.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Norwegians Hold Great "Folkesfest".

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 14.—Perhaps the greatest gathering of Norwegians ever held in the Twin Cities was the "Folkefest" in which probably 8,000 sons and daughters of the Vikings participated at the state fair grounds Sunday afternoon. While these gatherings have been an annual affair, added interest was given this year because of the movement for the raising of a memorial fund to be presented to the mother country in 1914, when it celebrates the centennial of its independence from Denmark.

The movement which has been in progress nearly two years, has so far been devoted largely to organization, but this work is well in hand and from now on, according to leaders of the movement, the collection of funds will go ahead rapidly and the committee is hopeful that by May 17, 1914, when the fund is to be turned over, they will have close to $1,000,000 which amount they originally made their goal.

Addresses were made by Governor Eberhart, Prof. Olson of the University of Wisconsin; L. O. Thorpe, Willmar, national president of the organization and others. All of the speakers were interrupted time and again by applause, but it became louder when Prof. Olson declared that the fact that the women of Norway had a voice in the deliberations of the parliament, was proof that this nation had reached the highest stage of civilization.

"While England is pampering with militant suffragists Norway has already given women the right to sit in the Storthing and help make the laws of the land," said Prof. Olson. "When the first woman took her seat in that body the president made a cordial and dignified speech welcoming her, which was received with great applause by the other members."

KEEP THE BOYS ON THE FARM

Exhibit at the State Fair Will Teach You How to Do This.

If you want to know how to build the best home for the farm and to make that home so attractive that it will be a pleasure to the adult members and keep the boys and girls on the farm you can learn all the details at the Minnesota State Fair.

A new and what will undoubtedly be a very popular and helpful exhibit of the 1911 fair will be a model farm home. This permanent exhibit is being prepared and will be shown under the auspices of the Minnesota State Art society. It is intended to give practical as well as artistic ideas to the prospective home builder. It will be helpful in many ways.

In all the details of construction, in every variety of practical and artistic furnishing and in the best pictures and books the home will be a model and those in charge will give valuable information on all subjects that pertain to making a home attractive.

GREATEST FAIR CROWDS.

All Indications Point to a Half Million Attendance and Comfort Will Be Provided for All.

Every preparation is being made for the care and entertainment next September of a greater crowd than ever before attended the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. A large number of additional park seats, new drinking fountains, comfort stations, a rest hospital and nursery have already been provided for.

The sidewalks on the main avenues have been widened and a number of the streets and street corners have been so graded as to care for greater crowds. Additional ground has been given the street car company at their central terminals and this space will greatly increase the company's facilities for handling the immense crowds that are expected.

The Agricultural society has purchased nine lots adjoining their present railroad yards and unloading platform and these will be increased in number and convenience. Fences and buildings on the fair grounds are being repaired and painted. A new building is being erected that will connect the woman's building and annex. Several new structures for machinery exhibits are being built on Machinery hill.

SCOTCH SHEEP DOGS AT STATE FAIR

Combined Entertainment and Instruction by Champion Dogs and Sheep Farmers.

Brought Direct From Scotland for Their First Appearance in America at Minnesota Exhibition.

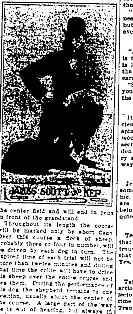
Real Scotch sheep dog trials, in which the competitors will be champion Scotch collies, and their owners, the United Kingdom's most famous sheep farmers, will be a big attraction of the 1911 Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. Six dogs and three shepherds will be brought direct from Scotland for the occasion.

The trials, which are an important feature at all the big agricultural shows in England and Scotland, will be seen for the first time in America at Minnesota's big fair next September. The event will be a feature of the afternoon program every day during the fair and the announcement of it has already aroused more than unusual enthusiasm.

JOHN JOHNSTONE.

Appreciating the value as an attraction of the sheep dog trials Secretary J. C. Simpson, after much correspondence and continued efforts, has succeeded in completing arrangements for bringing to the Minnesota State Fair, John Johnstone, James Scott and Mr. Robertson, three of the best known and most successful sheep farmers in the United Kingdom. These men with six dogs all of which have won many prizes for the handling of sheep, will start for this country next month and will be in Minnesota during the six days of the fair and perhaps longer. Two of the dogs are international prize winners.

The trials will be conducted every afternoon during the fair. They will be given over a course eight feet wide and about a half mile in length, to be laid out on the fair grounds. The starting point will be on the hill near the agricultural buildings and from there the course will lay across the track through gates, back and forth through the center field and will end in pens in front of the grandstand.



JAMES SCOTT AND KEP

Throughout its length the course will be marked only by short flags. Over this course a flock of sheep, probably three or four in number, will be driven by each dog in turn. The expired time of each trial will not be more than twelve minutes and during that time the collie will have to drive his sheep over the entire course and pen them. During the performance of his dog the shepherd remains in one position, usually about the center of the course. A large part of the way he is out of hearing, but always in sight of his collie. He directs his course in various ways, some times by a shout or whistle, but more often merely by a motion of his hands.

Value of Fat.

The popular view of the close connection between fat and good nature and weight and balance is not wholly without rational foundation. Fat, unpleasant and stodgy as it is, is one of the most valuable tissues in the human body, and any man who reduces his share of it below a certain reasonable level not only takes the smooth edge off his temper and balance off his powers of judgment, but exposes all of his higher tissues, notably the muscular, nervous and secreting, to danger of both starvation and disease. A moderate cushion of fat is one of the best buffers and bucklers against the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," whether in the form of disease germs or in strains upon endurance. The man who makes himself into a lean and hungry Cassius even with the best of intentions is very apt to get himself into a state of both mind and body where he is more fit for treason, stratagem and spoils than for comfort, wholesomeness and a long, happy life. —Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Outing.

A West Indian Fish Dish.

A novelty to the jaded palate and a delightful luncheon or supper dish is made of equal quantities of potatoes and fish, halibut or cod preferred. Butter well a deep baking dish and first put in a layer of breadcrumbs, then a layer of sliced onions, then a layer of the fish. Cut in fairly small pieces and entirely free from skin and bones. Season well and repeat until the dish is nearly filled. Sprinkle each layer with small bits of butter. Now pour over it all a pint of tomato ketchup and finish with a layer of buttered breadcrumbs. A layer of sliced tomatoes may be put in and will improve the flavor. Bake in a very slow oven for at least four hours and baste three or four times with a mixture of vinegar, flour and water, watching it carefully to prevent scorching. This dish has an unpronounceable and decidedly unspellable name, but it is very good and decidedly out of the ordinary. —Philadelphia Press.

The Absolute Zero.

What is the absolute zero of temperature? The zero of thermometers is purely conventional. The inventor of the centigrade simply took for zero the coldest temperature known in his day, while Fahrenheit had even less ground for his selection. Absolute zero is a point fixed by nature and may be arrived at in a variety of ways. All gases expand or contract equal amounts for every degree of heat. The amount of 1-273 of their volume for each degree centigrade. If, then, a gas is cooled down continuously it must reach a point at which further contraction is impossible. If a gas loses 1-273 of its volume at each downward degree of centigrade then in 273 degrees it would exhaust this power and become a solid; hence (minus) 273 C. is the absolute zero of temperature. This answers to 461 F. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Belief in Ghosts.

In most of the Oriental countries, notably in China and in many quarters in Europe, the belief in ghosts is still active, quite as much so as it was a thousand years ago. The peasantry of Russia, and especially of Siberia, are in constant dread of ghosts, and much of their time is taken up with devising ways and means of safeguarding themselves against their visitations. Not even in the United States of America is the ancient superstition defunct. The negroes are notorious believers in ghosts, and thousands of white people, remote from the center of intelligence, are still the victims of the old idea.—New York American.

Able, but Not Willing.

"Come, now," persisted the lawyer, "are you not able to say of your own knowledge that the defendant was in the room at the time and objected to the whole proceeding?"

"Yes, sir," savagely replied the witness. "I am able to say it, I reckon, but I'd be telling the biggest lie you ever heard of if I did."

Sensitive.

"Ah," he protested, "my love for you is the greatest thing in the world. It is larger than the world. It is wider than the sea. Let me pour it into your ears."

"Sir," ejaculated the fair maid, "do you mean to insinuate anything about the size or shape of my ears?"

An Old Superstition.

It was a common superstition in ancient Italy that if a woman were found spinning on a highroad the crops would be ruined for that year. In most sections of Italy a woman was forbidden by law thus to spin or even to carry an uncovered spindle on the highway.

Some Sacrifice.

Jenny — Jack, you ought to make some sacrifice to prove that you love me. What will you give up when we are married? Jack—I'll—I'll give up being a bachelor. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Transparent.

Teacher—Now, remember, Nellie, that anything you can see through is transparent. Can you name something that is transparent? Small Nellie—Yes, ma'am; a keyhole.

Strenuous Action.

Tailor—Has Mr. Owens taken any action on that bill of his yet? Collector—Yes; he kicked me out the last time I called to collect it.—Boston Transcript.

Virtue alone outbuilds the pyramids; her monuments shall last when Egypt's fall.—Young.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Analysis of drill cores taken to Duluth from the property of the Nameuken Iron company in township 68-19, have convinced many Duluth men that another iron range, perhaps equal to the Vermillion and Mesaba ranges, has been discovered there. The deposits appear to be in the form of a low phosphorus, high grade hard hematite ore, similar to that found in Clinton county, N. Y. The Lake Champlain deposits have heretofore been the only ones of this kind known of in the country, though there are similar deposits to be found in Sweden and Cuba.

The state of Minnesota is going to sue the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Suburban Railway company, the corporation operating all lines of the Twin City Rapid Transit company outside of the Twin Cities, for $30,882.69 in gross earnings taxes not reported for the years 1909 and 1910, and for the 5 per cent statutory penalty, amounting to $1,544.13, or $32,426.82 in all. This amount represents the 4 per cent gross earnings tax on the 5-cent fare received from each passenger of the ride within the city limits.

The Bay State Milling company of Winona has awarded to the Barnett & Record company of Minneapolis the contract for erecting a new eight-story, fire-proof mill, to take the place of the structure destroyed by fire several weeks ago. Work is to commence next week and the building is to be finished by Jan. 1. The machinery contracts have not been let. Steam handling derricks from Duluth are clearing away the debris.

Teaching of agriculture and allied subjects in the normal schools of the state was heartily approved by a conference of normal school presidents at St. Paul. The meeting was called by C. C. Schulz, superintendent of public instruction, to discuss plans for furnishing the increased number of superior teachers required to fill the demand occasioned by the consolidation and improvement of rural schools.

The state high school board last week distributed $567,000 to graded and high schools of the state. The three large counties get $41,750, Hennepin county, $14,000; Ramsey county, $12,000, and St. Louis county, $15,750. Each high school in the state gets $1,750. Aid to graded schools ranges from $600 to $1,100.

Captain W. H. Harris of Caledonia, secretary of the board of soldiers' home trustees for the past four years, was elected commandant of the home at the annual meeting of the board. He will change places Sept. 1 with S. H. Barnard, the present commandant, who will become secretary of the board.

Bishop James J. Keane of Cheyenne, Wyo., who has been nominated by Pope Pius X. to become archbishop of Dubuque, was for twelve years pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Minneapolis.

Herb Hunt, a farmer residing near Austin, delivered a load of timothy seed to the elevator at Rose Creek. The load was drawn by two horses and brought $666.

The apple crop in Minnesota, according to dealers, is going to be the best in years.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Jacob Meyer, a farmer living two miles southwest of Goodhue, was perhaps fatally injured by being trampled on and gored by a young steer. Mr. Meyer was attacked while in the barnyard looking after some stock. A small dog which accompanied him barked at and fought the steer and prevented more serious injuries.

John M. Harris was sentenced to four years in prison at Stillwater by Judge Ensign at Duluth. He was convicted of fraud in a horse deal with John Runquist, a contractor, and it was alleged the latter was swindled to the extent of $900. Harris resisted extradition from Iowa.

Henry Knoll, a sixteen-year-old son of Herman Knoll, residing near St. James, was killed while working in the hay field. The team was pulling a heavy hayloader when a whiffletree broke, striking the boy in the abdomen. He lived only a few hours.

W. L. Manyon, a conductor of an ore train for the Great Northern road, was severely injured, perhaps fatally, in a wreck twenty miles west of Hibbing. Carl Johnson, brakeman on the same train, also was injured.

David Blanchard of Minneapolis is charged with murder in the first degree in a complaint and warrant following the death of Blanchard's wife. Blanchard denies having any quarrel with the woman.

An unidentified man, while attempting to board No. 6 southbound Great Northern train at Crookston, was killed instantly. His head was crushed between the vestibules of the baggage cars.

Mrs. Augusta Mackedanz, an aged widow, committed suicide at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ferd Schmaeling, at Hutchinson, with whom she lived, by throwing herself in the cistern.

Ward A. Gordon, a sailor of Flint, Mich., was accidentally killed on the steamer Strathcona at Two Harbors. He fell down a hatchway. Gordon was but nineteen years old.

At central markets the best grades of cattle are $7.60 and going up. There ought to be a suggestion in this for the fellow who has a good corn crop in sight.

The odor of putrid meat is said by an Englishman who has tried it to have cured him of consumption. It is not stated how long the cure had to be used, but in the minds of some the query will arise whether the game was worth the candle.

A simple precaution which should be taken by those who have the care of milk is that of cooling new milk at once in a tank or dish of water before it is put in the cellar or refrigerator. This will greatly increase the period in which it will keep sweet.

A meteorological phenomenon of decidedly rare occurrence was a thirty-six hours' rainstorm in the Salt river valley in southern Arizona a few weeks ago. This is one of the most arid sections of the entire country, having an annual rainfall of but eight or ten inches a year, yet in the time mentioned 5.49 inches of water fell.

The freedom of the garden from weeds next season will depend quite largely on whether those now bringing a crop of seeds to maturity in the garden patch are swatted or not swatted. Good work with hoe or cultivator earlier in the season will count for little if the finish is weak and the weeds are allowed to get the upper hand.

It does not require prophetic powers to predict that young men or women who will take the pains to qualify themselves for the teaching of agriculture and domestic science in the schools of the country will have no trouble getting a job when ready to take up their teaching work. The two branches mentioned are bound to receive increased recognition, as both touch, in a special way, the everyday life of our people.

A reader of these notes told us the other day that he was doing a little experimenting this year in the cultivation of his field of corn—namely, continuing deep cultivation throughout the growing season, and this on a rather light subsoil. It is not husking time, but he has already discovered the error of this way of cultivation, the fault of which lies in the fact that, continued in the later cultivation, it disturbs, and therefore harms the root systems.

It would pay most any gathered cream creamery to churn by itself "smelly" cream from sloppy or dirty patrons, rather than to mix their product in with the wholesome cream of the other patrons. This would serve two purposes—keep the major portion of the creamery output free from taint, and, on the other hand, enable the manager or buttermaker to credit dirty patrons with the low returns which their "loud" butter would fetch.

Within a few months there has been patented a grain shocker which can be attached to any standard reaper. It takes the bundles of grain as they leave the machine, assembles them in a given number, heads up, puts on a cap sheaf and deposits them on the ground without disturbing their arrangement. This is the last step in the elimination of hand labor from the harvesting process. It has been a long time in coming, but it will fill a long felt need if it comes up to expectations.

A wise plan that has been put into operation by a family we know might be adopted by many another that has seemed to have difficulty in saving something for a rainy day out of the husband's wage. Briefly, this plan consists in putting on deposit in the bank $20 per month just as soon as the month's check is received. If any of the balance is left after expenses are met it is also put in the savings fund, but under no circumstances is the amount set aside touched. This plan insures the saving of a definite amount and so far has worked out admirably.

There are some simple facts connected with the handling of milk utensils that it is well for those having the care of it to keep in mind. One of these is that in washing milk dishes they should first be thoroughly rinsed with cold water. Following this they should be washed with warm water and washing powder or soap. They should then be rinsed with fresh water and given a thorough scalding and allowed to dry without wiping. When possible the utensils should then be turned up so that the direct rays of the sun will have access to them. In the case of pails which have seams, especial care should be taken to keep these free from stale milk or cream.

[illegible]ING OF PEACHES.

[illegible] in Georgia, who signs h[illegible] Lombard, contributed a [illegible] to the Fruit Grower, [illegible] St. Joseph, Mo., on pre[illegible] which is of a most [illegible] practical nature. Several [illegible] general directions we [illegible] for the benefit of [illegible] who may not be acquainted [illegible] a great deal of study [illegible] she recommends [illegible] peaches in a lye solution as [illegible] method of removing the skins. The solution is made by dissolving one pound of 90 per cent lye in three gallons of water, which should be brought to a boil and kept there while the fruit is being dipped. It is best to put the peaches in a wire basket, and they should be kept in the solution just half a minute, the basket being moved gently up and down to secure even action on all the fruit. The kettle in which the lye solution is boiled should be of ample size, as the solution is likely to boil over while the fruit is being dipped. At the close of the half minute the peaches should be dipped quickly into clean cool water enough times to thoroughly cleanse from the lye solution. If the fruit is perfect very little paring will be necessary. If half peaches are desired they should be cut and the pit removed at this point. If desired whole they are all ready for the next step. This is the cooking, and, in the opinion of this contributor, this is one of the real secrets of successful canning. She found that cooking in a thin sirup in half gallon jars placed in a wash boiler for an hour and a half at 190 degrees gave a peach that was tender, yet firm. Another most important step she found to be the complete cooling of the fruit before repacking in the jars in which it was to be kept. She found that when cooked in this manner and thoroughly cooled she could pack ten whole peaches in a quart jar without crushing those at the bottom. The final step after repacking is covering the peaches with the sirup, putting on covers, placing in cold water in boiler, bringing quickly to a boil and removing a moment afterward. This lady put her peaches up in a sirup testing 32 degrees on a Baume sugar gauge or scale, made by dissolving two cups of sugar in one cup of hot water.

SAVE THE STRAW.

Perhaps not in a dozen years has the shortage of hay been so acute as now. This is due to two dry seasons, which in many sections has reduced the yield per acre a half or more. It is true that this shortage will in part be made up by the securing of an unusually large amount of corn ensilage, but this will not nearly equalize things. At the time of writing this paragraph (Aug. 4) we note that on the Kansas City market choice timothy is quoted at $19.50, alfalfa $17 and straw $4.75. On the Chicago market choice timothy is quoted at $26, rye straw $7.50 to $8 and oat straw $6.50 to $7. At a time in the season when the volume of the hay crop should be pretty definitely known these quotations will be construed by the thoughtful producer as sufficient argument for putting all new straw in the best possible shape to withstand damage from wet weather. Much of the supply saved can be used advantageously on the home place for roughage for horses not working and stock to be wintered, while in many sections owners of baling outfits will be offering good prices for clean, bright straw. In many seasons the straw pile is too often viewed as a nuisance and incumbrance. If properly managed this year it should prove a source of profit.

THE COST OF POOR ROADS.

The interstate commerce commission has lately compiled some statistics relative to public highways in the United States that should be of interest not only to road builders but to all producers of transportable commodities. The investigators have found that there are 2,150,000 miles of public highway, of which but 8 per cent, or 176,000 miles, could be classed as improved—that is, treated in some way with stone or gravel—and that if all highways were made as good as this 8 per cent it would cost $3,000,000,000. The commission finds that 265,000,000 tons of agricultural, forest and miscellaneous products are hauled to depots by wagon in the course of a year at an average cost of 23 cents per ton per mile, or $432,400,000. If the cost of hauling could be reduced to one-half the present average, or 11½ cents per ton—the cost of hauling on the improved roads of France—the saving effected would be more than $200,000,000. This economy would seem well worth while.

USING THE ROAD DRAG.

In several states laws have been passed within the past few years making the use of the King road drag a compulsory feature of road work. The requirement is a most excellent one, but the good got from the use of the drag will depend in great measure upon using it at the right time following a rain. While there is naturally some variation as between different soils, it may be said in a general way that the right time to use the drag is when the earth is in a rather mellow condition, as it then will not stick to the scraper. Sometimes, if the ruts to be filled are quite deep, it is well to give the road a treatment within a short time after a rain, following this with a second dragging after it has arrived at the mealy stage.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Great Britian appears to be confronted by a grave labor movement, compared with which the London strike just ended would be a small affair. Together with street battles in Liverpool of a most furious description and serious riots at Glasgow comes the news of meetings of the railway employes at Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Bristol, Sheffield and other large cities at which threats were made of a general strike of all railway men, transport workers and dockers unless existing disputes are settled promptly and satisfactorily.

Premier Asquith's government, which claims to represent the democracy of Great Britain, enforced its will on the peerage by the narrow vote of 131 to 114. By this vote the house of lords decided to accept what the Liberals contend is the will of the people and adopted Viscount Morley's motion not to insist on the lords' amendments to the parliamentary bill, which practically limits the power of the house of lords to a two-year suspensory veto and vastly increases the prerogatives of the house of commons.

James Lee Finney, the American actor, perished in a fire which destroyed a portion of the Carlton hotel at London. The Carlton is one of London's most fashionable resorts and many Americans are among its guests. Of the 200 persons stopping at the hotel when the fire broke out many were from the United States and while all had narrow escapes none except Finney suffered any injury.

The French steamer Emir foundered five miles east of Tarifa, Spain, in the Straits of Gibraltar. Ninety-three persons were drowned. In a dense fog the steamer collided with the British steamer Silverton, from Newport, Eng., for Taranto, Italy. The Emir floated only a few minutes after the collision. Sixty-nine passengers and twenty-four of the crew went down with the ship.

A vote of censure of the government for having obtained from the king a pledge to create, if necessary, sufficient peers to pass the veto bill was rejected by the house of commons by a majority of 119. The motion was introduced by Arthur J. Balfour, leader of the opposition, and its defeat is regarded as having failed to improve the Unionist cause.

The Alfaro government in Ecuador has been overthrown by a revolution organized by supporters of President Elect Estrada. Few casualties occurred and a provisional government headed by the president of the senate was formed.

A boat overloaded with natives who were on their way to a fair at Desuk, Egypt, foundered in the Nile. Nearly one hundred persons were drowned.

THE DEATH RECORD.

Maine lost its senior United States senator and an almost lifelong faithful servant when William Pierce Frye died at the home of his daughter at Lewiston, Me. Although he had been ill for a long time death came suddenly. A general breakdown, due to his age and his extremely arduous career, is described by Senator Frye's physicians as the cause of death. Senator Frye had served in congress since 1869, six terms in the house of representatives being followed in 1881 by his election to the senate when James G. Blaine resigned to become secretary of state.

A report recently issued by New Zealand dairy authorities places the value of an acre of pasturage when sold in the form of butter at from $15 to $45. The difference here indicated is directly due to the ability of the individual cow to convert grass into butter.

A little fine road dust sprinkled on young pear trees, cherry trees or rosebushes early in the morning when the dew is on will put a finish on the slugs that so often skeletonize the leaves. The dust is tough on their gizzards and sweat glands. The writer has tried this slug remedy and knows it does the business.

There is no more sly and brutal enemy of the birds than the spry and graceful small red squirrels that frequent the lawns and parks of almost every town and city. It may be tough treatment, but the writer favors shooting these wretches on sight, for they perform no service that in any way compensates for their ruthless destruction of eggs and young birds.

Reading For the Sick.

"And now a word about patients who may feel like reading," said the house physician to the nurse. "When they ask for something to read be sure to give them continued stories—always continued stories."

"Is that wise?" she ventured to remonstrate. "Won't the excitement over what is going to happen in the next number have a bad effect?"

"No. Even if it does it will be counteracted by the encouragement. Sick people have queer fancies. One of the queerest pertains to literature. Feed a patient's mind with nothing but short stories and he will certainly get into his head that he is going to die so soon that it isn't worth while to start him on a long one, and he will droop accordingly. But give him only yarns of the to-be-continued-in-our-next variety and he will take it for granted that you expect him to get well so he can finish the story, and he will perk up amazingly. Just try it."

The nurse did try it and found that the doctor's theory was built on a sure foundation.—New York Times.

Lion Signs In England.

In the middle ages the country houses of the nobility in England when the owners were absent were used as hostels for travelers. The family arms always hung in front of the house and gave it a popular name among travelers, who called a lion "gules" or azure simply "red" or "blue." As these mere intimations of good cheer and entertainment innkeepers adopted the idea. Lions have always been and are now very favorite signs in England—lions white, black, red, brown, golden, yellow—red being the most common. Probably the Red Lion originated with the badge of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who married the daughter of Don Pedro, king of Leon and Castile, and who adopted the lion rampant gules of Leon to represent his claim to the throne. Under Richard and John lions became the settled arms of England and were generally used by those who could find any claim.

Rook and Gull.

The rook appears to have become the bird whose name stands for swindlers in a distinctly unfair way, the London Chronicle says. At first "rook" meant a dupe, then the verb "to rook" came to mean to cheat, and out of this was evolved "rook," a cheater—a complete topsy turvy process. It is curious that the same thing has not happened to "gull." Here also the verb came from the substantive meaning a dupe, and, as the gull strikes one as rather a knowing bird, one might have expected the same evolution as in the case of the rook. It should be observed, however, that "gull," a dupe, did not refer specially to the seagull, the word having formerly meant a young bird of any kind. In Elizabethan English it signified a callow youngster who wished to be thought smart.

SENATOR BANKHEAD IS LIVING UP TO HIS PLEDGES.

Good Roads Advocate of Alabama Has Bill For Better Highways.

Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama, one of the leading good roads advocates of the nation, fought his way into the United States senate on a platform pledging him to work for good roads and river and harbor improvement, and he is standing true to all of his pre-election pledges. Recently he introduced in the senate of the United States the following bill:

"To provide for an experiment in the improvement of certain highways by the secretary of agriculture, in co-operation with the postmaster general, and for other purposes.

"Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled that there is hereby appropriated out of the treasury the sum of $500,000, not otherwise appropriated, to be expended by the secretary of agriculture, in co-operation with the postmaster general, in improving the condition of the roads over which rural delivery is or may hereafter be established, to be selected by them for the purpose of ascertaining the possible increase in the territory which could be served by one carrier and the possible increase of the number of delivery days each year, the amount required for proper maintenance in excess of local expenditure for rural delivery routes and the relative saving to the government in the maintenance of rural delivery routes by reason of such improvements and also the relative saving in the cost of the transportation of agricultural and other products from the farms or other points of production to the usual market place by reason of such improvements, provided that the state or county or counties which may be selected for improvement or rural delivery routes therein under this provision shall furnish an equal amount of money for the improvement of the rural route or routes so selected."

GOOD ROADS.

Good roads contribute to the glory of the country, give employment to idle workmen, distribute the necessaries of life, the products of the fields, the forests and factories, encourage energy and make mankind better, greater and grander.

ROAD BUILDING IN OHIO.

"Boosters" Successful In Getting Legislature to Pass Bills.

The Ohio Good Roads federation has won part of the fight which it started in January, when it proposed the following legislative plans:

First.—The reorganization of the highway department and creation of the bureaus of construction, maintenance and repair and bridges.

Second.—State supervision of all roads constructed in whole or in part by state aid money.

Third.—The perpetual maintenance of state aid roads by the highway department.

Fourth.—The inauguration of the inter-county system of roads connecting important commercial centers in the state and making all necessary surveys and estimates for the same.

Fifth.—A levy of one-half mill on the taxable property of the state to create a fund available in 1913 to construct the inter-county system.

All of the above, with the exception of the latter, are provided for in senate bill 103 by Senator McGuire, which is now a law.

The road enthusiasts will now go forth with renewed energy in a state wide campaign for the proper construction and maintenance of roads, for the economical expenditure of all moneys appropriated for road purposes, and will present to the constitutional convention which will assemble next January a plan to raise money necessary to complete the inter-county system, which plan will equitably distribute the cost of the same on all the taxpayers of the state.

Cart System For County Pikes.

The cart system of taking care of the roads in Knox county, Tenn., will first be tried upon the Tazewell and Jacksboro pikes, according to the action of the Knox county road commission at a recent meeting. If it works successfully it will be placed on other pikes.

NATIONAL RACE FOR GOOD ROADS

Every State Aroused to the Benefits of Improved Highways.

$140,500,000 TO BE SPENT.

Recent Good Road Laws Are Making the Future Look Bright For This Country In the Way of Good Transportation—New York Spending More Than Any Other State.

One million dollars a day is the record that will be established throughout the United States as the expenditure for improving and maintaining public roads. Never before in the history of the country has there been such interest in the improvement of highways, and, with the legislatures of the states appropriating millions of dollars for this purpose, the good roads movement has received its greatest impetus since the foundation of the republic.

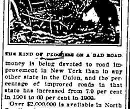
The money that will be expended on the roads of this country during the next six months will be more than ever before in the same period of time. In 1904 the total expenditure for the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges in the United States amounted to about $80,000,000, but the expenditure for this purpose in 1911 will aggregate about $140,500,000. Exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, the outlay for roads will amount to $1,000,000 a day during the present road building season.

HOW THE FARMER GETS TO TOWN ON A GOOD ROAD.

"The prospect for a complete system of public roads throughout the United States is better now than ever before in the history of the country, and a uniformity of recent good road laws gives promise that this country will eventually take its place with France in having the most sensible system of road supervision and maintenance," says L. W. Page, director of the office of public roads.

In California the state has issued $18,000,000 in bonds with which to build a system of state highways. This work will begin during the present season. In the state of Connecticut about $2,250,000 will be expended this year out of the state treasury for trunk line and state aid roads. Of the $5,000,000 bond issue recently authorized in Maryland over $1,250,000 will be available this year for trunk line and state aid roads. Massachusetts will expend from state revenues over $1,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of state roads.

It is expected that at least $5,000,000 will be expended on state aid roads and on trunk line systems in the state of New York in addition to $7,000,000 already raised by local taxation. More money is being devoted to road improvement in New York than in any other state in the Union, and the percentage of improved roads in that state has increased from 7.9 per cent in 1904 to 00 per cent in 1900.



THE KIND OF PROGRESS ON A BAD ROAD.

Over $2,000,000 is available in North Carolina from bond issues in the various counties for road improvement this year, and the legislature has authorized the construction of a road from the Atlantic ocean to the Tennessee line, a distance of 425 miles.

In 1910 thirty counties in Ohio voted $2,500,000 in bonds to be expended this year. Ohio will also expend about $500,000 from state revenues for road improvement. In Pennsylvania the state aid appropriation will probably amount to over $1,000,000, and a $50,000,000 bond issue is being considered. Various counties in Tennessee will expend $1,500,000 from bond issues. Over $1,500,000 will be expended from bond issues in various counties in Texas. In Virginia $2,500,000 has been authorized by various counties to be expended this year, while over $250,000 has been appropriated in the state of Wisconsin in accordance with the state aid system.

MOVE INTO COURT HOUSE

Pennington County Court House Complete and Officials Move Into New Home.

Structure Which Cost $6,500 Will be Good for Several Years.

The work of remodeling the old city hall into the new Pennington County Court House is practically completed and the county officials are planning on moving into new quarters Saturday and the first of next week.

On the north side of the building downstairs is a large room for the county commissioners which is reached by a doorway from the front. Another doorway from the front opens into a large room which is intended for the county auditor, the county treasurer and the clerk of court. A counter extends across the length of the room forming a lobby and the offices are divided from one another by railings. In the rear of the room are rooms intended for the register of deeds and judge of probate. To the north of these offices are two vaults, one of which is divided in two parts for the filing of the county records. These vaults are of steel and concrete structure and are guaranteed fire proof. At the rear of the building is the office of the sheriff reached by a door on the south side and the stairway to the upstairs. Upstairs are grand and petit jury rooms, one of which may be used as the office of the county attorney, the court room and rooms for the judges and lawyers.

The court house presents a very attractive and neat appearance as all will testify who have seen it and is finished inside with hardwood floors. The best thing about the court house to the minds of many of the taxpayers however, is the fact that the cost will not exceed $6,500. This structure will last the county for 10 or more years and when replaced a structure can be built that will be a pride to Pennington County for many years to come.

Hunch From Munch.

"Some hunters seem somewhat confused as to just when the prairie chicken shooting season begins this year," said Game Warden Munch.

"The fact that the law provides that from August 15 to Sept. 1 dogs may be taken out hunting but that guns cannot be used and that from September 1 to to September 7, guns may be used by using blank cartridges, seems to be a stumbling block for many of the hunters.

The chicken shooting season does not open until September 7, and as both chickens and partridges are plentiful this year they will be hunted more than usual.

"Another stumbling block, so far as the huntsman is concerned, is the law which provides that the partridge hunting season does not open until October 1st, nearly a month later than the chicken season opens."—Crookston Times.

Released from Jail.

Knute Flakne whose habeas corpus proceedings were heard before Judge Watts Aug. 15 was released Friday from the county jail, according to a decision rendered by the judge. Flakne was sentenced Aug. 8 to 30 days for drunkeness and had served one-third of his sentence when released. The proceedings were granted upon a technicality in the papers.

The Milwaukee to Winnipeg.

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway is believed to be contemplating an invasion of Canada for the purpose of placing itself in a position to handle some of the increase in traffic moving between the two countries as the result of the possible Canadian reciprocity agreement.

This is reported to be the object of a trip now being made to the North west by A. J. Earling, president of the St. Paul road, and William Rockefeller, one of the directors. Mr. Earling has been away from his office for more than a week, and, although his representatives decline to discuss his whereabouts or the purpose of the trip, it is understood that he and Mr. Rockefeller are inspecting a possible route from Fargo, N. D. to Winnipeg. This route would require an extension one hundred and sixty miles long of the branch, from Ortonville, Minn., to Fargo.

Reports have been made in the past of this project, but they have been as often denied by the St. Paul office. If the line should be built the St. Paul road would be again brought into sharp competition with the lines controlled by James J. Hill.

Crookston Agricultural School.

Crookston State Agricultural School opens Oct. 3, 1911, for its sixth year. By that time various improvements will be completed, making the equipment, buildings and grounds better than ever. Two new specialists have been added to the faculty. Prof. Robert B. Baxter, a graduate of Iowa Agricultural College, takes the position of Animal Husbandry, and Prof. Thomas Sewall, of Minnesota Agricultural College, the position of instructor in Farm Drawings and Plans. The school catalog explains to anyone interested in attending a school of this kind the courses, expenses, etc. No tuition is charged as the school is a state institution provided for the young men and women of northwestern Minnesota. Already a large number have registered. For a copy of the school catalog address C. G. Selvig, Superintendent, State Farm, Crookston, Minn.

Died.

Erick Edvin Anderson, one of the old settlers in this vicinity, died at his home Wednesday Aug. 17, at the age of nearly seventy-two years. He has been in poor health all summer, but only a few days sick in bed. He was born at Foglo, Finland, in 1840; came to America in 1882, and settled in section 35 of Rocksbury in 1883, where he has lived until a few years ago when he moved to St. Hilaire. He leaves a wife to whom he has been married since 1865, and five children.

The funeral will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. from the Swedish Lutheran church of which he has been an active member from its organization.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Savings Bank Opens Tomorrow.

The government postal savings bank which has been designated for Thief River Falls will open for business tomorrow morning. The hours of transacting business there will coincide with that of the registry and money order windows. While the deposits are not expected to be large at first, the bank will in time be a valuable institution for the city and the county.

PLEASED WITH DITCH WORK.

Minneapolis, Warren and Local Parties Made Tour of Inspection to Grygla Saturday.

Vast Territory Being Reclaimed Which Will be Garden Spot of the State.

A party of men interested in drainage and good roads and particularly in the great reclamation work which is being on in eastern Marshall and western Beltrami counties made an automobile trip to Grygla, 40 miles northeast of this city Saturday, and inspected Judicial Ditch No. 11. Governor Eberhart and some of the state officials were unable to make the trip as had been planned, but those present were greatly interested in what they saw and expressed themselves as very well pleased with the country.

Among those making the trip were Senator James T. Elwell of Minneapolis, author of the "Elwell Good Roads Bill" passed by the last legislature; Judge Andrew Grindeland of Warren, on whose order the ditch was established; William J. Brown of Warren, attorney for the petitioners, Engineer Hoag of Minneapolis, who has general charge of the work; Engineer Hamre of Crookston; Lynden Green of Minneapolis; A. M. Arpin of the Northwestern Drainage Company; County Attorney E. M. Stanton, Prof. J. H. Hay, Math Barzen, C. L. Hanson, of this city and newspaper men from the Twin Cities, Warren and Thief River Falls. The party left here Sunday morning at 9:30 and returned Sunday afternoon.

Grygla, a small bustling town on the western edge of Marshall county is in about the center of the drainage district and was the headquarters of the party during their stay. It is planned that 1000 square miles will be reclaimed as follows:

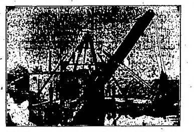
Thief river is to be enlarged from its source, in Thief lake, to a point a few miles above Thief River Falls, where it enters Red Lake river. This will cost about $125,000 and will be divided among three sub-drainage districts in the ratio of their use of the river as an outlet for each subsystem. These subsystems are known as state system No. 83, comprising about one tenth of the area, and situated mostly on the west side of the river near its head waters.

The second subsystem of this area is known as county ditch No. 20. It comprises about two-tenths of the watershed and is located on the east side of the river, along the southern boundary of the Thief river area, and is in charge of Engineer Hamre of Crookston.

The remaining seven-tenths, or about 700 square miles, comprises the central northern and eastern portions of the Thief river area and is known as judicial ditch No. 11.

The system provides for 497 miles of ditches and the same number of miles of highways to be so located that each of the 2,000 quarter sections of land has a ditch and a road along at least one of its half-mile sides. No such complete system of drainage has been attempted in this state to cover any considerable area.

Work was started on the system in the fall of 1910 and it has been in full swing all summer. It is expected that next year will see its completion. Already much of the land in the vicinity of Grygla has been drained and only needs settlers to raise banner crops. The soil is equal to any in the Red River Valley and considering the comparatively low price of the land an influx of settlers will probably come in this fall and next spring and raise bumper crops on what was lowlands and swamps two years ago. The extension of the Soo line from International Falls to Thief River is expected to be built through this country within two years and it is understood the Great Northern also contemplates tapping this rich region.



FLOATING DREDGE AT WORK NEAR GRYGLA.

Without a doubt in five or ten years this region will be thickly settled and of the most productive regions of the northwest.

The land is level with occasional groves, and in many places a furrow a mile long could be plowed without taking the plow from the soil. There is no waste level and practically every inch except that needed for roads, ditches etc. can be cultivated.

Hand in hand with the ditch work goes the building of good roads. As the dirt from the ditches is excavated it is piled on one side and later rounded into a highway by the contractor. On the journey out much of the way was over these so-called ditch roads and though just built this year and still in rough shape, they were better than the original dirt roads by far. On the other side of Germantown, for instance, an excellent ditch road extends for several miles, which was built this summer.

Saturday afternoon and evening was spent by the party inspecting the ditch and road work near Grygla, on the main ditch. Three large floating dredges are now employed on this work, one of which is opposite Grygla at the present time. These dredges are kept working day and night and it is worth while going a long way to see these monster machines scooping the dirt out and piling alongside of the ditch for road ways with almost human intelligence. Sunday morning the party went east of Grygla into Beltrami county and inspected the work being done there where the walking dredges are used.

The following was written by W. H. Frazier of the state superintendent station who has made a special study of this region and shows the excellent quality of the soil.

"The organic matter varies from twelve inches to three feet in depth, underlaid with clay slightly sandy. In some places pockets of gravel were discovered which came within about two or three feet of the surface. The vegetable or organic matter of the soils which are under cultivation and as a rule are partially drained, shows a good degree of disintegration and by comparison of adjoining lower tracts which have not been drained at all, water standing at the surface, prove that a few years of good drainage and plowing or loosening up yearly will bring about good results.

"The clay underlying this organic matter is not a fact to be lost sight of. If the water level is lowered several feet below the surface of the ground, the clay is one of the best types of soil to help raise this water to the roots of growing plants (as kerosene raises in a lamp wick). Where the particles are large as a sandy subsoil or gravel, the underground water will not rise nearly so rapidly nor so high as with clay. The larger the particles, the less the height to which the water will rise and the more easily it will drain. The slight amount of sand will drain much more quickly than a subsoil of pure clay.

"As to the fertility of the soil of this locality, there cannot help but be plenty of the plant food elements, namely, nitrogen, potash and phosphorus, present. It being a new soil, alluvial deposit formation, as cited above, overlaying glacial till or highly disintegrated rock particles, leaves little or no doubt as to the question of amount of plant food.

Killed By a Bull.

Last Tuesday morning at six o'clock while Riley Kezar, who was employed on the farm of Tom Thomson four and a half miles south of Argyle, was in the act of leading a three-year old bull out of the barn he was attacked by the animal and killed before help could reach him.

Mr. Thomson had warned Kezar to be very careful of the animal, because he had attacked a hired man a week previous, but Kezar, who had known the animal before, replied that he knew more about the bull than Thomson did. He had just untied the animal when Thomson heard calls for help and when he got to the scene Kezar was on the ground and the bull was standing over him and pressing him to the ground with his head. Mr. Kezars son, Albert, who will be remembered as having been employed in the First National Bank of this city a couple of months ago, was a witness to the awful accident.

Coroner Biederman was immediately summoned and pronounced it a deplorable accident.

The remains were taken to Warren, the home of Mr. Kezar, for burial.

Mr. Thomson had the bull killed the same day.

Mr. Kezar was an old settler and at one time one of the best and most prosperous farmers in this section, having owned the farm on which he was killed. He later moved to Warren and engaged in the hardware business. He met with reverses and was at the time of his death engaged as a farm hand. Many of the old timers were grieved to hear of his death and sympathize deeply with the family.—Marshall County Banner.

AIRMAN FROM ST. HILAIRE

Jimmy Ward, Aviator at Chicago, Sued by Wife, is From This County.

His Father Operates a Restaurant —Sent Many Trophies Home.

Considerable interest is taken in James Ward, the Chicago birdman who recently had papers served on him by his wife for non-support of herself and child, owing to the fact that the man's real name is James Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Wilson, of St. Hilaire, where they run a restaurant.

Ward, or Wilson's wife, recognized Ward when his picture was published in connection with some of his aviation feats. He had changed his name from Ward to Wilson in Chicago because he had been barred from work as a chauffeur under the name of Wilson, for exceeding the speed limits and so secured a license under the name of Ward.

His parents at St. Hilaire have all manner of cups and trophies he has been awarded as an aviator and the people of St. Hilaire are very proud of his record as a birdman.

He is also quite well known in Crookston, Thief River Falls and other surrounding places.

Narrow Escape.

John Clotier who is employed on the repair work at the dam had a narrow escape from death Friday morning when a large rock struck him on the head and rendered him unconscious. He was working at the foot of the dam when a fellow workman with a wheelbarrow load of rocks passed above him. One of the rocks, the size of a man's head, slipped from the load and falling fifteen feet struck Clotier on the head. He was knocked down unconsious and for a time it was feared the injury was fatal, but aside from severe bruises he fortunately escaped serious injury.

Lake Bed Now a Garden.

It seems almost incredible that a place which a year ago was the bottom of a large lake, covered with several feet of water, and for many years the favorite haunt of innumerable wild ducks and other aquatic fowl, should this year be planted to various crops and producing vegetables and grains good enough to carry off premiums at a state fair. Samples brought in last week prove that the above change has actually taken place at Mud Lake. Carrots, rutabagas, onions and turnips of remarkable size and finest quality were brought from the Rosason place; flax of the finest kind from the Bergeland farm, and barley that looks fit for malting and will yield about 40 bushels per acre from Edwin Johnson's. These were raised on ground that was part of the bottom of Mud Lake and under water prior to the putting in last fall of the ditch that dried the lake.—Holt Northern Light.

Will Construct New Bridge.

Milton Forder and J. C. Berg were here from Thief River Falls on Saturday getting ready to commence work on a new bridge over the Thief river east of Holt. The new bridge will be commenced just as quick as the big dredge passes the site of the old one and will be finished as quickly as possible. The new bridge will be 16 feet [illegible] have an 80 foot span across the river which is being deepened and widened by the dredge.—Holt Northern Light.

A cheese factory at Appleton, Wis., has been awarded the contract of manufacturing a 12,000 pound cheese, which is said to be three times the size of any cheese on record. To make this cheese, which is to be exhibited at the national dairy show in Chicago, will require the milk of 6,500 cows for the day, or 130,000 pounds of milk. The making of the cheese will be in charge of eighteen expert cheesemakers and twenty-five helpers. It is to be made on a special flat car, and a refrigerator will have to be built around it in order to keep it until the time of the dairy show.

While the adoption of the Canadian reciprocity measure may have some slight effect in reducing the price of wheat at points near the Canadian border, it is apparent that it will greatly stimulate the demand for American horses by the removal of the $40 per head duty. A friend who lives at Outlook, Saskatchewan, tells us there is a great demand for horses in the Canadian northwest and that at present horses which he can buy at $250 per pair in the states he can ship to Saskatchewan and get $500 for. This price would cover the $40 duty and a handsome profit over and above transportation charges.

Drink White Seal Beer With Your Meals.

Why not accompany your food with a beverage containing elements that aid digestion?

Does it not stand to reason that you will obtain more benefit from what you eat, and that your general health will be improved?

WHITE SEAL beer is recommended by the best physicians, because they know it to be a pure malt and hop product of proven worth. They have used it in their practice, with uniform beneficial results.

WHITE SEAL beer has been introduced on the tables of many families as a substitute for tea, coffee and other table beverages, and it has given satisfaction in every way. We have yet to learn of anyone whose favor it does not please.

Delivered in air tight bottles—pints or quarts.

Try a case. You don't know, till you try.

GREATEST FOR TEN YEARS

Sweden Shows an Increase in Population of 44,077 During the Past Year. Another Norwegian Expedition Bound for the Far North—Latest Census Shows Iceland Has 85,089 Inhabitants.

SWEDEN.

Sweden during the past year shows an increase in population of 44,077. During the first part of the present year there were in the kingdom 5,520,518 inhabitants. The increase during the past year is greater than during any previous year since 1898, and naturally the Anti-Emigration society is very much encouraged and will redouble its energies for next year in order to induce the agricultural classes from moving out of the country, especially to the United States. In this connection it may be justly stated that the Anti-Swedish Emigration Society is doing all in its power to prevent further emigration and in a measure they have succeeded. The society is sending out a mass of literature, which contains every effective argument you can think of against emigration.

Stockholm athletes are not letting the hours slip by in getting ready for the Olympian contests next year. They are training every day and plans are under way for continuing the swimming and tennis contests this winter. Running races will also be indulged in as long as weather permits and that means that they can continue with this sport until the end of October anyway and perhaps longer. Sweden is bound to make a good showing during the Olympian games there next summer and Stockholm will naturally be in the center of the world of sport from now on.

A firm in Sweden proposes to publish a magnificent edition of the Bible and call it the Gustaf Bible. In a circular setting forth the work the firm takes occasion to call Gustaf "Summus Episcopus"—the highest or chief bishop. The designation has caused Professor Lundstrom of Upsala university to protest against this "Protestant pope title." He says: "It is time that this insignificant, tasteless and servile pulpit expression be eradicated from our ecclesiastical convention and from transactions of the riksdag."

Count Lewenhaupt, who lives at Claestorp, near Gotheuburg, where he has excellent fishing and hunting grounds, has been entertaining King Gustaf recently and the monarch is reported to have enjoyed his visit with the count very much. The king was later entertained at Gothenburg, prior to his return to Stockholm. During this month King Gustaf is spending a great deal of his time at Drottningholm palace.

Latest reports from Stockholm state that the Countess Casa de Miranda (Christina Nilsson), once a world famous diva, has sold her real estate in Boston, Mass., to an American named Louis Towle. The properties have been in the possession of the countess since her great concert tour in America in 1865. The taxes on the property amount to $133,000 a year, so it must be very valuable.

It seems that in Sweden also the so called cut worm has been playing havoc this season. It is called grass worm over here, but it is practically the same as the American cut worm, which has been so prevalent in all parts of the United States recently. They attacked both hay, vegetables and grains and have done a lot of damage, especially in the southern part of the country.

The "melograph" is the name of a new invention on the graphaphone order which has been invented recently in Stockholm by William Nystrom, an engineer. Through this new invention any tune that is being played on the piano can be successfully reproduced. The invention has been placed on exhibition in Stockholm for some weeks and has attracted a good deal of attention.

The surplus of the retail liquor trade for the past year was about $2,500,000 and this amount has been distributed among the principal governments, home supply associations and communes. The amount was $500,000 in excess of the surplus for 1909, the year of the great strike, when prohibition was in force for several weeks.

Anna Bathilda Bostrom is, according to all records, the wealthiest school teacher in Sweden. She owns property valued at over $100,000 and has several thousand dollars in the bank besides. Her home is in Stockholm and she made most of her money in real estate speculation.

It is proposed to start a Swedish creamery at Sassnitz, Germany, which is the German port of the Swedish German car ferry line. A creamery at that point would make it possible to deliver absolutely fresh Swedish butter in Germany.

NORWAY.

According to a recent telegram from Christiania, Christian Leden and Harold Thaulow, members of the Norwegian Ethnological Arctic-Canadian expedition, are bound for the Far North and expect to push their way across the frozen polar seas. Both men have had experience in Northern wilds and are prepared for a battle with the snow and ice and rigors of the polar climate. They will get most of their equipment from the stores of the Hudson Bay company when they strike the "great snow line." Dogs and sleighs will be purchased and the two hardy explorers will make a study of chartography and the tribes encountered beyond the Arctic circle. All the scientific data they can will be carefully preserved. Christian Leden has visited both West and East Greenland and attracted much attention by his lectures on Eskimo music. The country they wish to explore lies principally along the Northwest passage, south of Victoria Land and also a little further west, close to the place where Franklin perished. They are to travel by the Canadian Pacific railway to Edmonton. Afterwards, from there to their final destination, they will strike the long trail. The latter part of the journey they expect to cover on foot, or in dog sledges if the country is already snow covered. The work to be done this year is to be looked upon as a preparation for a great scientific expedition to commence in 1912. This larger enterprise will extend over two years and Leden will then be joined by the Norwegian geologist, Ulf Holl.

Norwegian exports to the United States are on a steady increase. The consular reports show that during the budget year 1907-1909, the exports to the United States were $3,700,000 and in 1910 it amounted to not less than $6,000,000. This shows that Norway's exports to the United States have practically doubled in two years. Norwegian imports from the United States, during the years of 1907 and 1908, exceeded the exports, but in 1909 and 1910 the exports were in advance of the imports. During the last two years imports from the United States to Norway amounted to $6,500,000. Norway's most important exports to the United States are lumber, canned fish goods and hides and all three export products are on a steady increase. The leading imports from the United States to Norway are kerosene oil and flour.

Fifty Russian school teachers have been visiting the schools of Christiania. They came from all sections of the vast empire and they all returned to their native land loaded with information which they think will be of great use to them in their profession. They all evinced a marked interest in the Norwegian school system and many of them expressed their agreeable surprise at the many new and interesting features.

Woman suffrage has not altered woman's sphere in Norway. A bill has been introduced in the Norwegian parliament providing that no marriage shall be performed unless the prospective bride has previously obtained a certificate attesting a satisfactory knowledge of cooking, laundering and dressmaking.

The high school teachers of Norway and Iceland held a convention recently on the Faroe islands.

DENMARK.

The following interesting report regarding the population of Iceland comes from Copenhagen: The census of Iceland, begun Dec. 1, 1910, is now completed and the figures have been made public. This gives the island a population of 85,089. The population on Nov. 1, 1901, was 78,470, the ratio of increase thus being nine per thousand each year, a little less than the ratio in Denmark. The population of Iceland in 1801 was 47,200. From that time on there was a steady increase until 1889, when the population was 72,400. During the eighties, however, an epidemic, together with a heavy emigration, checked the increase of population. At the present time the population is on the increase again. About two-fifths of the people of Iceland live in the cities or towns. The largest city is the capital, Reykjavik, which boasts of a population of 11,593.

Temperance supporters in Denmark are criticising the landsthing for refusing to pass a saloon regulation law according to terms proposed by a temperance committee. The temperance party has increased greatly in the last ten years and its leaders say that within the next two decades it will elect so many members of the rigsdag that the sale of alcoholic liquors will be prohibited in Denmark.

Denmark bankers are not a little dissatisfied with the new 50 kroner ($13.40) bills because they look so much like the 500 kroner ($135) bills. In fact, the one has been mistaken for the other on several occasions and many times it has occasioned considerable trouble and inconvenience. The bankers are, therefore, going to petition the government to have bills of more satisfactory denominations introduced.

A delegation of French statesmen visited Copenhagen a short time ago and inspected the various charity institutions of the city. They expressed much satisfaction at the way in which the institutions were conducted and desire to introduce Danish methods for such institutions in France.

HUSBAND ACCUSED OF CRIME

Woman Found Murdered Near Montevideo, Minn.

Albert O. Bourne will be held at Montevideo on a warrant to be issued following the verdict of a coroner's jury inquiring into the cause of the death of Bourne's wife, whose body was found on the road five miles east of Montevideo.

The body was identified as that of Mrs. Bourne after a horse, found near the body, had been turned loose and had gone directly to Bourne's home.

Mr and Mrs. Bourne left their home, neighbors say, for a drive. They were seen near the scene of the crime. Later Mrs. Bourne was found near the roadside with her skull crushed. There was nothing on her person to identify her and not until the horse had led the searchers to the Bourne home was her identity established.

SUED IN FEDERAL COURT

Minnesota Road Charged With Violating Sixteen-Hour Law.

Suit has been instituted in the federal court at Duluth by order of Attorney General Wickersham against the Duluth, Missabe and Northern railway on a charge of breaking the federal law, which is described as "an act to promote the safety of employes and travelers on railways by limiting the service of employes to sixteen successive hours."

The government demands damages of $3,000, based upon the number of employes on the train. It is the first suit of the kind filed in the state.

The petition was filed by United States District Attorney Houpt and says the law was broken May 10, 1911, by the defendant company between the stations of Proctor and Coleraine, Minn.

From New York he will proceed to Canada, where he will be entertained by the new governor general, the Duke of Connaught, and by the duchess at Ottawa.

It is possible he will come as far West as St. Paul and Minneapolis, where there are many Danes.

THREE DIE IN MINE SLIDE

Thirteen Others Believed to Have Escaped Same Fate.

The bodies of Dan Kuntich, Powa Batta and Matt Vragopovich have been recovered from the debris, earth and stone, which swept down the side of the open pit of the Susquehanna and Buffalo mine at Hibbing, burying the steam shovel and sixteen men who were at work directly in its path. It is believed that all the others escaped.

In the darkness and confusion it was first believed that at least fifteen men had been buried beyond hope of recovery.

Juhl Taken to State Prison.

A short time after his arraignment in police court at St. Paul, charged with the murder of Detective Frank Frazer, Peter Juhl was returned to the state penitentiary at Stillwater, from which he escaped with Jerry McCarthy last March. Not until the prisoner and his guards were well on their way did it become known that he had been taken out of the city.

Governor Eberhart Subpoenaed.

Governor Eberhart has been subpoenaed to appear before the state board of control when the hearing of the charges preferred against F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the Red Wing training school, is resumed. This is said to be the second time that a governor of Minnesota has been served with a subpoena.

Young Business Man Drowns.

Oscar Olin, a prominent young business man of Faribault, was drowned in Roberts lake, a few miles from that city. He and some other young men were diving from a boat and Mr. Olin attempted to swim to shore, but could not make it. He sank before assistance could reach him.

One Fatally Hurt in Wreck.

Westbound freight No. 427 on the Great Northern jumped the track coming down a hill twelve miles east of Crookston, fatally injuring Archie Richardson of Sand Point, Ida., who was brought here on a special. Nine cars, mostly loaded with coal, were smashed to kindling wood at the rear end of the train.

Ends Life With Shotgun.

William Struebing, aged forty, committed suicide at Courtland by discharging a shotgun against his chest. The entire charge entered his body above the heart and death was instantaneous. No reason is ascribed for his rash act.

End of Monetary Commission.

Washington, Aug. 22.—The national monetary commission will close its work on March 31 next. The senate has accepted the house amendments to the senate measure and the bill is ready for the president's signature.

FOREIGN NEWS.

After a day of rioting and bloodshed in various parts of the United Kingdom, during which four striking railway employes were shot and killed by troops in Llanelly, Wales, the widespread strike which has crippled Great Britain's industries, was officially declared ended by union leaders and government officials. The truce came in time to prevent an absolute famine in many cities which depend on the railroads for their food supply. The fact that bread riots were threatened in many places, and that the cotton mill employes in the great centers of the north and the Scottish and Welsh miners were preparing to lay down their tools, caused the government officers to bring the strongest pressure on both sides to consent to arbitration. The settlement was reached after an all day conference between David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, and the executive officers of the railway employes' unions.

Jose Maria Villaverde, managing editor of the paper Cuba, and his nephew, Manuel Villaverde, editorial writer, were seized at the residence of the former in Havana and placed on board a steamer bound for Spain. The Cuba had been continually assailing the government of President Gomez, and, acting under a presidential decree, a squad of police visited the residence of Senor Villaverde and seized the men, taking them to the harbor and placing them on board an outward bound vessel.

The troops were compelled to fire on a mob of strikers at Liverpool. Bayonet charges were also made upon the disorderly element. The strike committee declared a general strike of all transport workers, including the railway men, who up to the last had refused to go out.

The veto bill limiting the powers of the upper chamber over legislation originating in the British house of commons became a law, the king's assent thereto being given through a royal commission in the house of lords.

Cardinal Patrick F. Moran died suddenly at Sydney, N. S. W. He was found on the floor of his bedroom in Manly palace in a state of collapse. Death followed an attack of syncope. He was eighty-one years of age.

General Cincinnatus Leconte was elected president of Haiti unanimously by congress. Leconte headed the larger of the two revolutionary factions that overthrew President Antoine Simon.

The lockout declared by Norwegian mine owners on July 8, following a dispute over wages and conditions of employment, has been settled through the mediation of the government.

Edmund Rostand, famous author and dramatist, who was injured when his automobile was wrecked near his villa at Camba-Les-Baines, France, is in a precarious condition.

Mohammed Ali Mirza, the former shah of Persia, is reported to be in full flight after a crushing defeat of his forces by government troops north of Firuckhuh.

Four men were killed, four fatally injured and nine others suffered fractured arms and legs in an explosion which wrecked the molding building at the Illinois Steel company's plant at Joliet, Ill., and imprisoned 100 men. The accident occurred when an immense ladle of molten metal upset on a wet floor. In an instant there was a terrific explosion which blew out the walls of the building.

WIND STORM FATAL TO TWO

Much Property Damage Also Results From Cyclonic Disturbance near Benson, Minn.

A tornado which started near Benson swept southwest, caused the death of two persons, razed many farm homes and barns and created general havoc throughout that section.

Four miles from Halloway the farm residence of Herman Trager was demolished, Mrs. Trager was instantly killed and her four-year-old daughter received injuries which caused her death three hours later. Trager, it is said, was at Halloway when the storm broke. Mrs. Trager had just finished supper. Doctors were called from Appleton by neighbors, but found the mother dead in the wreckage of the home and the daughter unconscious and dying.

John Parker, a farmer residing three miles from Halloway, was driving home when the storm overtook him, picked up the wagon and team and, it is reported, deposited it a hundred feet distant. Parker's legs were both crushed when the wagon came back to earth.

On the D. W. Little farm, five miles east of Appleton, the barn was blown into kindling wood and scattered about the prairie, while the family escaped injury by seeking refuge in the root cellar.

TO TAKE EFFECT ON JAN. 1

Attorney General Simpson of Minnesota Tenders Resignation.

With little ceremony and in the presence only of Executive Clerk Hayes, Assistant Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith and two newspaper men, Attorney General George T. Simpson tendered his resignation to Governor Eberhart, effective Jan. 1, 1912. Immediately thereafter the governor tendered the office to Mr. Smith and it was accepted. This is the first time in the history of Minnesota that an attorney general has resigned from the office.

Mr. Simpson proffered the governor a letter setting forth in detail why he quit. In it he dwelt on the fact that he was advancing in years, that he would leave the office poorer than when he came and that duty to his family prompted him to take up private practice. He will go to Minneapolis to become associated with R. J. Powell, a widely known corporation attorney.

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

Judge Will Decide "Seven Senators" Case Sept. 1.

Arguments in the so called "seven senator" case were completed a few days ago in the Hennepin county district court before Judge Hale. The court announced that he would take the case under advisement and give an answer before Sept. 1, so that an appeal could be made to the October term of the supreme court and in time to be placed on the calendar early.

The suit was brought by Representatives Charles R. Fowler and W. D. Washburn, Jr., represented by Attorney George Selover, seeking an injunction to restrain Secretary of State Schmahl from placing the proposed amendment to the constitution calling for reapportionment on the ballots in 1912, as ordered by the legislature of 1911. Assistant Attorney General Janes argued for the state.

TOWERS AID THE RANGERS

New Structures In Northern Woods Minimize Danger From Fire.

The new towers which have been erected at several places in the northern woods are proving of great value to the rangers, according to State Forester W. T. Cox and Assistant D. P. Tierney, who returned to St. Paul from a trip north.

"The towers, which are erected at the highest points in the locality, enable foresters to view the country for miles around," said Mr. Cox. "In this way the danger from fire is greatly decreased and one ranger can cover a much larger territory."

Mr. Cox and Mr. Tierney will leave shortly for another trip of inspection in Northern Minnesota. The trip just ended embraced Cass Lake, Bemidji, Rainy Lake and vicinity.

CAUGHT IN THE QUICKSAND

Two Girls Drowned While Bathing Near Cloquet, Minn.

Pearl, fourteen years of age, and Florence, aged thirteen, daughters of James Dunphy of Carlton, were drowned in Chub lake near Cloquet. The girls were bathing near the McKinnon cottage. It is supposed they were caught in quicksand. One girl was dead when taken from the water and although every means was used to resuscitate the other girl she died an hour after being taken from the water. Mr. Dunphy is a merchant of Carlton and an old resident of Carlton county.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Corn more than nine feet high and vegetables that will rival in size any raised in the famous produce belts have been grown this year within a few miles of the business center of Minneapolis. Many of the specimens are larger and of as good quality, it is said, as those raised at a distance and shipped to Minneapolis to show the wonderful fertility of soils in other states.

Nels Enge, grain dealer and president of the Nels Enge Grain Commission company of Minneapolis, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal district court, giving his assets at $87,271.96 and liabilities at $168,058.90. Mr. Enge has been a member of the Minneapolis chamber of commerce for about ten years.

Suits for the collection of more than $600,000 due the state in inheritance taxes are being prepared by Attorney General Simpson and will be filed within the next few weeks. The attorney general expects to bring into the state treasury the greatest sum from this source the commonwealth has ever known.

United States Marshal Grimshaw will welcome and invite an investigation of his department. He said so following the report from Washington that it was admitted in the office of Attorney General Wickersham that charges, the character of which is not made public, had been made against the marshal.

George W. Nash, discharged from the Minnesota Soldiers' home May 11, 1910, on the charge that he was a "trouble maker," has begun a suit against the board of trustees of the home, Quartermaster Milo K. Williams and Colonel F. H. Barnard, commandant, for $5,000 alleged damages.

The first authoritative statement of the financial condition of F. H. Peavey & Co. has been issued by the creditors' committee and sent out to all creditors. It shows gross assets of $5,718,068.55. In the liabilities are included the capital stock of $3,650,000.

W. C. Magelssen to be consul at Melbourne, Australia, and A. W. Pontius to be consul at Dalny, Manchuria, are the Minnesotans named in the list of diplomatic and consular nominations sent to the senate by President Taft last week.

Major C. S. Edwards, for years a resident of Albert Lea, but now United States consul at Acapulco, Mex., is in a hospital in San Francisco, suffering with typhoid malaria. His wife is with him, and is suffering from the same malady.

Northern Minnesota lands are to be inspected in the latter part of August or the early part of September by a delegation of German agricultural experts who are coming to this country to locate.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Louis Sanson, a lineman for the St. Paul Gas Light company, whose home is in Minneapolis, was electrocuted at Phalen park when he came in contact with a feed wire carrying several thousand volts. No one was present when Sanson was killed and his body was found at the foot of the pole by passersby.

Gus Sommers of Waseca met a terrible death while crossing the Chicago and Northwestern tracks in that city, being struck by a switch engine. His body was so terribly mangled that recognition was at first impossible, but later his watch and papers, found in his pocket, served to identify him.

R. E. Kezar, an aged resident of Warren, was gored to death by an infuriated bull at the farm of Thomas Thompson, about six miles northwest of Warren. Mr. Kezar had gone into the barn to make some repairs when the animal attacked him.

Billy Brown, an Indian, was found dead at Orr, north of Virginia. He had a bullet hole in the back of his head and part of a broken gun was found near his body. He had been missing about ten days.

As the result of a quarrel over a watch, Albert Kennedy, it is alleged, killed James McDonald at Crooked lake, twelve miles north of Nashwauk, Itasca county. Kennedy was arrested.

Mellville Barnard, aged seven, was drowned at the dock of the Tuxedo Inn at Pokagama lake. He was the son of M. W. Barnard of Minneapolis, a construction contractor.

Carl Corenson, eight years old, was drowned in Lake Pepin and his brother Swen, ten years old, nearly met a similar fate in an effort to save him from death.

The body of Daniel Totsen, aged eighty-five, was found in Lake Phalen at St. Paul. It is believed his death was accidental.

Mrs. C. B. Garrett of Minneapolis was probably fatally injured when her auto was struck by a train.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

W. T. Atwater, aged fifty-eight, a resident of Minneapolis for twenty-five years, formerly secretary of the W. S. Nott company, is dead following a stroke of apoplexy. He retired from active business a year ago.

Swan A. [illegible], former city comptroller of St. Paul, for many years deputy comptroller, is dead after a long illness.

SCHOOL OPENS SEPTEMBER 5

Pupils Requested to Enroll and Bring Promotion Cards on Opening Day.

Five Months Course Will Start Oct. 30 for Those Who Can Attend Only in Winter.

School will open on Tuesday, September 5th for the usual school year of nine months, divided into a fall term of four months, a winter term of three, and a spring term of two. The holiday terms will consist of the customary two weeks at Christmas and a week at Easter.

All pupils are requested to bring their promotion cards and enroll the first of the term. No assurance can be given any one who fail to enroll at this time that they can enter the grade to which they were promoted at the close of school last May. Particularly is this true in the high school, where a strict compliance with the requirements of the state high school board will obtain. "Making up" work never produces good results and it will be reduced to a minimum in the high school hereafter. If the high school student cannot enroll the first of the term it were better for him and other pupils that he wait and enter at the beginning of the second semester.

A short course of five months will be inaugurated for those who can attend only during the winter months. This will be open to all students over 16 not otherwise enrolled in school, regardless of their preparation or standings. Bulletins describing the work offered in this short course and giving all particulars in regard to same will be issued in September.

For the information of the more recent arrivals in the city it might be stated that graded children under the 7th will enroll at the school nearest their homes. 7th and 8th grade pupils will attend the Washington, on the second floor. Books are furnished free, but children must provide themselves with pencils, pens, tablets and drinking cups, as no common drinking cups are permitted in any room.

Parents are respectfully urged to make school the supreme business of the children for the next nine months, and the hearty co-operation of all interested in the welfare of the boys and girls is cordially invited, in the hope that the work of the ensuing school year may be the most successful and satisfactory in the history of the schools.

Thief River acknowledges a pleasant call yesterday from the Duluth boosters. Come again when you can stay longer.

Don't forget to do your duty as citizens and voters tomorrow at the bond election. The majority of the taxpayers are undoubtedly in favor of issuing the bonds and if anywhere near a representative vote is polled the bonds ought to carry by a large majority.

Attorney General George T. Simpson tendered his resignation to Governor Eberhart last week, to take effect January 1. Though there has been many rumors of his running for the governorship, Mr. Simpson stated that he was through with politics for good. While in office he collected much money for the state from railroads and lumber companies but will now go into private business where there is more money and less glory.

Sunday School Convention

Next Saturday and Sunday a county Sunday school convention will be held in the M. E. church. Every Sunday school in the county is entitled to send delegates. An interesting program has been prepared, among the speakers being Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Dietrick who have toured the country attending Sunday school institutes.

Utilization of Waste.

A distinguished chemist once observed that "My lady writes tender sentiments to her lord with ink made from an old copper coffee pot on paper made from old collars." The utilization of waste products, which is adding so enormously to the wealth of the world, furnishes many such fantastic adaptations.

"Give me," Dr. Long said, "the sewage of New York, and I will return you yearly the superior milk of 100,000 cows." The waste soapsuds from woolen factories which used to pollute hundreds of rivers, is now precipitated and the coagulum is pressed into bricks and converted into superior illuminating gas. These are only examples of the ingenuity of man. That the field is far from exhausted is instanced in the estimate that from 600 to 1,000 tons of fine coal are thrown away every day in the ashes of New York. It is not impossible that some one will shortly invent a process for reclaiming this wasted material.

Teaching School Girls to Swim.

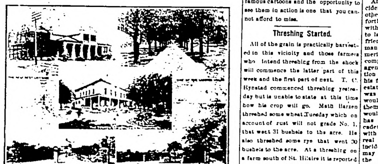
In the apparatus in use in Germany for teaching school girls how to swim the pupil is supported in such a position as to leave the legs and arms free to perform the motions of a swimmer. The body is hung in a wide belt, suspended from an overhead rail, while the feet are attached to a pair of ropes running over pulleys and adjustable to various requirements.

The pupils thus suspended are then taught how to perform the movements of the breast stroke until the action becomes almost instinctive. There is a decided advantage in teaching these movements in such a way instead of in the water, for the pupil is not distracted by the fear of a ducking. It is not at all easy to learn the swimming movements even out of water, hence the advantage of acquiring this knowledge until it becomes almost instinctive before entering the water.—Scientific American.

Greed.

'A fool and his money are soon parted," quoted the bunko steerer.

"Yes," replied the green goods man. "But the trouble is that a fool usually hasn't much money to start with."



SOME IMPROVEMENTS ON THE STATE FAIR GROUNDS.

Over thirty thousand dollars have been expended to improve and beautify the fair grounds. There will be more to see, and learn, and enjoy, and more comfort this year—Sept. 4-9.

Feature Attractions at Lyceum.

The management of the Lyceum Theatre take pleasure in announcing two great feature attractions for the first half of next week. In the vaudeville line the management has secured "Higgins & James" the great eccentric comedians in their singing and talking act, who will be seen at the theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 27, 28 and 29. For the benefit of those who enjoy a hearty laugh this is an opportunity that should not be passed up.

Another feature that is bound to attract great attention is the "Mutt & Jeff" film which will be shown next Monday and Tuesday. Everybody has seen and laughed at "Bud" Fisher's famous cartoons and the opportunity to see them in action is one that you cannot afford to miss.

Threshing Started.

All of the grain is practically harvested in this vicinity and those farmers who intend threshing from the shock will commence the latter part of this week and the first part of next. T. C. Rynstad commenced threshing yesterday but is unable to state at this time how his crop will go. Math Barzen threshed some wheat Tuesday which on account of rust will not grade No. 1, that went 31 bushels to the acre. He also threshed some rye that went 30 bushels to the acre. At a threshing on a farm south of St. Hilaire it is reported the wheat was of the best quality and went 30 bushels to the acre. While more complete reports may be expected next week it appears that the promise of a bumper crop will be amply fulfilled this year.

A Canadian cow, a Jersey, has recently closed a second year's test which entitles her to the title of best cow of any breed in the Dominion. Her name is Rosalinde of Old Basing, and she is owned by a breeder of Red Deer, Alberta. In her first year's test, which closed February 25, 1910, she gave 10,870 pounds of 5.37 per cent milk, which yielded 729.6 pounds of 80 per cent butter. In the second year's test, which closed May 23, 1911, she gave 11,276 pounds of 5.3 per cent milk, from which 802 pounds of 80 per cent butter were made. Then cream and skimmilk sold in the two years brought $523.65, and two calves were produced which could not be bought at $250 apiece. This cow paid? It would seem so.

Of all improvements that can be made in the farm home to lighten woman's work and make it convenient perhaps the most desirable is that which will give a handy and abundant supply of water and, coupled with this, drainage facilities which will make it possible to dispose of waste water without the use of pails. It is a pretty poky farmer who spends valuable time pumping water for stock by hand and lugging it in pails, and it would seem that on any farm where more enlightened methods are in vogue for watering the stock a like improvement should be made in the water system in use in the house. Such a convenient water system should not be viewed as a luxury, but merely an improvement which common consideration and decency demand.

An amusing if somewhat unique incident was related to the writer the other day by a real estate agent setting forth the reason why another agent with whom he was acquainted failed to land a party of a score or more of friends whom he had escorted many miles to a section most of the merits of which were on the land company's advertising matter. The agent in question looked the proposition over pretty carefully and advised his friends not to buy, telling his real estate friend some time later that he was convinced that any man who would defraud his friends by selling them such land was a reprobate and would go straight to hell. The writer has been at a loss to trace the decadence in the belief in a hell fire with the alarming development of the real estate business, but in the above incident there seems to be a clew. It may be suggested for the protection of the greedy unwary, that ministers everywhere devote one sermon a month to the mooted subject. Incidentally it would take the kinks out of many a hearer, put a curb on the real estate swindlers and keep a lot of hard earned money where it rightly belongs.

Killing Friends and Feeding Enemies.

Every time a gun is fired which brings down an owl, a hawk, a crow, crane, herron, bittern or shrike, the farmer looses a friend; and a note of welcome is sounded for the ever-increasing army of field mice—an army which counts its numbers in billions, and which yearly levies upon the farmers of the United States a tax greater than the pension roll as great as the cost of the Panama Canal for these birds are natural enimies of the mice—they are the foremost of the agencies with which Nature has proposed to keep the multiplication of these predatory rodents within bounds.

Almost as inviting is the welcome sounded when the gun brings down a fox, a weasel, a mink, a skunk, raccoon, coyote, lynx, badger, or shrew. Except for an occasional tribute levied on the hen roost—something against which it is easy to guard—all these animals are harmless and they find in mice their natural food. In the same catagory may be placed a great number of harmless snakes.

If these birds and animals should be allowed to multiply unmolested, the farmers and the nation might be eased from the awful burden carried to support the predatory army of mice. Lest the figures above may fail to impress the reader's imagination, let it be said that each mouse actually consumes in a year thirty pounds of food, such as suitable for a cow. Suppose this food consists of hay only of the cheapest of feeds. We then find that a single billion of mice, eating thirty pounds each, will consume 15,000,000 tons. At $12 a ton the contribution of the farms to support the mice would foot up $180,000,000 a year. But what of the grain, the fruit and garden vegetables consumed? Who will venture to say that the destruction brought in these will not over balance the value of 15,000,000 tons of mere hay? —By C. R. Barns, Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

BOOSTERS FOR DULUTH HERE

Seventy-Five Duluth Business Men Made Pleasant Call Here Yesterday.

On Three Days Tour of Soo Towns in Special Train of Twelve Coaches.

On a special train consisting of seven coaches, four sleepers, a smoker and a buffett car, seventy-five jobbers and business men of Duluth made this city a pleasant call yesterday, stopping 30 minutes in the city.

The train arrived shortly before eleven and headed by the Third regiment band, they paraded the streets and then scattered to get acquainted with the merchants and business men of the city. Each booster wore a white cap with a band bearing the word "Duluth" and carried pennants and advertising matter which was freely distributed. Each delegate also wore a badge bearing his own and his firms name and carried a pleasant smile a cordial handshake and a pocket full of cigars.

The party left Duluth Tuesday morning and stopping at the different towns along the Soo line spent the night in Bemidji. From here they went south again and spent the night at Alexandria and will return to Duluth today by the short line from Brooten.

One Deer to a Hunter.

The last legislature passed a number of game laws that will be of special interest to sportsmen, the most important of which is the new law relating to the taking of large game. One change of importance provides a license to kill big game cannot be issued until within three days of the opening of the season. This law is aimed at the "sooners" who go into the woods every year a week or ten days before the season opens. The second provision of importance limits the number of deer to one for each hunter; the old law allowed the hunter to kill two if he he could find them.

The new law gives the hunter permission to train his dogs in the field between the 15th day of August and the 1st day of September but prohibits the carrying of any firearm while training said dogs. The law reads as follows: From the fifteenth day of August to the first day in September each year it shall be unlawful to run or train pointer or setter dogs in the said fields or upon the said lands in case any shot gun, rifle or fire arm is in the possession of, or available for use by the owner or person in possession, custody or control of said pointer or setter or in possession or available for the use of anybody accompanying the said owner of person so in possession, custody and control.

Hail Storm at Warren.

Warren and the country to the west of it were visited by a disastrous hail storm Saturday night which is said to have totally ruined the crops in a small area. Three inches of hail stones were said to have been found on the ground after the storm.

Government to Advertise.

Uncle Sam himself is going into the moving picture show business. With the authority of President Taft, a contract has been entered into by the government officials and a Chicago firm for the purpose of reproducing in moving pictures all of the various activities of the nation. The pictures will be shown in hundreds of moving picture houses. Marines at work on battleship, gunners firing at the hulk of an old battleship, cavalry drills, mine and rescue work, plant and animal industry, road building and every single activity of the government will be shown on the films. This will be an advance along educational lines that will be especially beneficial to the non-reading public.

An Appeal to Sportsmen.

All sportsmen are interested in the protection of our forests. This could not be otherwise, since the forests constitute the natural home of all big game within the state. With the disappearance of the woods the game will disappear also. Many of our game fishes can live only in our wooded lakes and streams; the protection afforded by the forest and the character of runoff resulting from a forest cover appears essential to their existence and propagation.

The sportsman, before all others, appreciates the forest for its own sake. The lure of the woods is one of the greatest incentives to the camper, hunter or fisherman. Who would care to go on a lengthy canoe trip or camp in the northern wilderness were it not for the call of the woods?

The forests of this state have been steadily reduced in area and impoverished in character by fires and this is an appeal to you to do all in your power to prevent forest fires by exercising care in camp and by putting out small fires when you find them.

Under the new forest law any person leaving a fire unextinguished is liable for the damage it does and is subject to prosecution as well.

The state has over a hundred rangers and patrolmen on duty, but every sportsman should be a volunteer ranger and game warden and help protect the forests and the game.

—Wm. T. Cox,
State Forester.

GREATEST FAIR CROWDS.

All Indications Point to a Half Million Attendance and Comfort Will Be Provided for All.

Every preparation is being made for the care and entertainment next September of a greater crowd than ever before attended the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. A large number of additional park seats, new drinking fountains, comfort stations, a rest hospital and nursery have already been provided for.

The sidewalks on the main avenues have been widened and a number of the streets and street corners have been so graded as to care for greater crowds. Additional ground has been given the street car company at their central terminals and this space will greatly increase the company's facilities for handling the immense crowds that are expected.

The Agricultural society has purchased nine lots adjoining their present railroad yards and unloading platform and these will be increased in number and convenience. Fences and buildings on the fair grounds are being repaired and painted. A new building is being erected that will connect the woman's building and annex. Several new structures for machinery exhibits are being built on Machinery hill.

When the tomatoes have attained their size and are two-thirds colored, the ripening process can be hastened considerably if they are carefully picked and put stem side up in the bright sunshine, where one's own or the neighbor's chickens cannot get at them.

In times of severe drought, such as has existed during the past two or three months, one cannot help but be impressed with the pitiful inadequacy of artificial means of watering lawn or garden, especially when effected through the average nozzle. It is such a puny, pygmy performance as to be well nigh ridiculous.

There seems to be good ground for believing that a seeding of clover made at once on meadows where the spring seeding died out because of the dry weather would get sufficient root to withstand the cold weather of winter. Alfalfa sown at this time lives through, as a rule, and there seems to be no reason why clover should not.

Kentucky has been dry along with several other states the past few weeks—so much so that in one county, Fleming, it has been found necessary to import 10,000 barrels of water to meet the immediate needs of men, animals and growing crops, and in a very true sense this was only a drop in the bucket as compared with what was really needed.

A move is on in the poultry world looking to the adoption of standards of judging in poultry contests which will lay greater stress on performance in egg production rather than fancy points which only please the eye. This problem, which is up to the poultry fancier, is very much like the one which the Jersey cattle breeders are struggling with—points in the show ring versus performance at the pail.

Professor Hunter, entomologist of the Kansas experiment station, who has been studying the grasshopper problem, recommends a spring disking of alfalfa fields to reduce the pest. The eggs are deposited in clusters, or pods, just beneath the surface of the ground, and stirring the soil in the manner mentioned breaks them up and destroys them. The disking suggested is also to be commended, in that it will kill many weeds just starting.

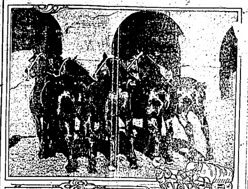
In most instances of the "bad" boy the trouble likely is not half so much due to any inherent badness as to a lack of sympathy and real interest in parent or guardian and to a failure to properly direct the outgo of his physical and nervous energy. An engine is a mighty dangerous proposition with steam up and a broken rail ahead; so, too, a team of horses in a runaway with a mower. The bad boy is like both when off the track or lacking wise guidance and restraint.

The old fashioned potato beetle has got in its work with telling effect in a good many sections this season. This chap is striped like his common relative, twice as long, and not only feeds on potato, wonderberry and clematis vines, but tackles beans, beets and most anything else that happens to be growing in the garden. It seems to be rather migratory in habit and may play smash with one garden and not touch the one over the fence. Information about this pest is more profitably got by reading than by experience.

A suggestion made a short time since in these notes is worth repetition—to the effect that any feeder who is so fixed that he can finish cattle, hogs or sheep for market during the next eight or nine months is sure to be well paid for his efforts. As a result of widespread drought many sections have been virtually depopulated of the kinds of stock mentioned. This has meant in the past a glutting of markets with underfed stuff in poor condition, which has tended to demoralize prices on all grades. Now, however, with most of this emergency stock sold, prices are improving, and they give promise of reaching very satisfactory levels.

Many a husbandman who has leveled land for purposes of irrigation has been surprised at the fact that the growth of crops was slight on soil from which the surface had been scraped, he naturally supposing that such soil, being new, would also be rich and cause plant growth. The meager growth noted is due not to a lack of fertility in the soil so much as to an improper physical condition and lack of humus or decaying vegetable matter. Such soil should be fertilized with barnyard manure and should be sown to some legume, such as vetch, soy beans or peas, and this growth turned under. Such treatment will give the necessary humus and make the soil productive.

Just as the cotton boll weevil was a blessing in disguise to the cotton grower, in that it showed him the benefits of a diversified agriculture, so the present droughty season, following on the heels of that of last year, bids fair to be a godsend to the corn belt farmer, for in the absence of sufficient hay it has practically forced him to erect silos in order to realize a maximum value from his corn crop. Hundreds of farmers are installing these fodder savers, and silo companies are swamped with orders. One season will be enough to prove their worth, and hereafter they will be filled whether the season be wet or dry. It is likely that in years to come many farmers will look back and thank the drought of 1911 for forcing them to erect silos.



PRIZE WINNING PERCHERONS.

The Minnesota State Fair will have the biggest cattle and horse show ever held in the Northwest. Judging will begin Monday, Sept. 4.

GETS $60.00 POSITION.

Nellie Lien, a graduate of Dakota Business College of Fargo, has accepted a $60.00 position as stenographer for the Soo R. R. at Enderlin. The good firms,—those that pay big salaries and demand first-class help—employ D. B. C. graduates.

The State Agricultural college of Michigan, co-operating with some of the railroads of the state, has lately sent out a potato-poultry special. At all stops made short talks, practical and to the point, were given on these two important subjects. The value of the "gospel" spread by these specials can hardly be measured, the methods of instruction being such as to leave a lasting and definite impression on the minds of all listeners.

An Ayrshire cow, Netherall Brownie IX., owned by J. W. Clise of Seattle, Wash., has lately completed a year's test in which she surpassed the record previously held by any cow of this excellent breed. She gave 18,110 pounds of milk containing 820.91 pounds of butter fat, equivalent to 958 pounds of butter. While this does not establish a world's record for cows of any breed, it is a performance that Ayrshire breeders of the country are much pleased with.

Trees in a wood lot, like fruit, vegetable and flower, get ripe or arrive at a state of maturity if not in quite so exact and definite a manner. This maturity is indicated sometimes by decay, more often by slowness of growth, while it is usually safe to follow the rule of cutting the tree when it is not making as great a total growth in wood as the nearby trees would make in addition to their present rate of growth were it cut out. Putting it another way, a tree is ripe when its presence in a wood lot is doing more harm than good.

NATIONAL RACE FOR GOOD ROADS

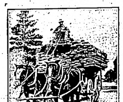
Every State Aroused to the Benefits of Improved Highways.

$140,500,000 TO BE SPENT.

Recent Good Road Laws Are Making the Future Look Bright For This Country In the Way of Good Transportation—New York Spending More Than Any Other State.

One million dollars a day is the record that will be established throughout the United States as the expenditure for improving and maintaining public roads. Never before in the history of the country has there been such interest in the improvement of highways, and, with the legislatures of the states appropriating millions of dollars for this purpose, the good roads movement has received its greatest impetus since the foundation of the republic.

The money that will be expended on the roads of this country during the next six months will be more than ever before in the same period of time. In 1904 the total expenditure for the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges in the United States amounted to about $80,000,000, but the expenditure for this purpose in 1911 will aggregate about $140,500,000. Exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, the outlay for roads will amount to $1,000,000 a day during the present road building season.

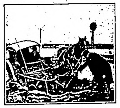


HOW THE FARMER GETS TO TOWN ON A GOOD ROAD.

"The prospect for a complete system of public roads throughout the United States is better now than ever before in the history of the country, and a uniformity of recent good road laws gives promise that this country will eventually take its place with France in having the most sensible system of road supervision and maintenance," says L. W. Page, director of the office of public roads.

In California the state has issued $18,000,000 in bonds with which to build a system of state highways. This work will begin during the present season. In the state of Connecticut about $2,250,000 will be expended this year out of the state treasury for trunk line and state aid roads. Of the $5,000,000 bond issue recently authorized in Maryland over $1,250,000 will be available this year for trunk line and state aid roads. Massachusetts will expend from state revenues over $1,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of state roads.

It is expected that at least $5,000,000 will be expended on state aid roads and on trunk line systems in the state of New York in addition to $7,000,000 already raised by local taxation. More money is being devoted to road improvement in New York than in any other state in the Union, and the percentage of improved roads in that state has increased from 7.9 per cent in 1904 to 00 per cent in 1909.



THE KIND OF PROGRESS ON A BAD ROAD.

Over $2,000,000 is available in North Carolina from bond issues in the various counties for road improvement this year, and the legislature has authorized the construction of a road from the Atlantic ocean to the Tennessee line, a distance of 425 miles.

In 1910 thirty counties in Ohio voted $2,500,000 in bonds to be expended this year. Ohio will also expend about $500,000 from state revenues for road improvement. In Pennsylvania the state aid appropriation will probably amount to over $1,000,000, and a $50,000,000 bond issue is being considered. Various counties in Tennessee will expend $1,500,000 from bond issues. Over $1,500,000 will be expended from bond issues in various counties in Texas. In Virginia $2,500,000 has been authorized by various counties to be expended this year, while over $250,000 has been appropriated in the state of Wisconsin in accordance with the state aid system.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

Rye and vetch make an excellent cover crop for an orchard in all sections where there is need of a growth to catch the winter snow. It should be sowed at once.

A few years ago the bite of a mad dog was equivalent to a death certificate, but today, if the patient is given the Pasteur treatment in time, not one case in a dozen proves fatal.

Typhoid fever may be contracted by drinking water containing the germs, also by bathing in streams at a low stage of water which have been contaminated by sewage.

The enormous total of 76,034,075 barrels of cement was the output of mills in this country last year, being an increase of 10,000,000 barrels over the production of the year before.

Records are usually interesting; hence the performance of Jumbo, a frog in charge of the Lincoln park zoo in Chicago, is worth giving. Not long ago tab was kept on the frog, and it was found that in a period of one hour it devoured 266 flies.

In a baking test made lately in Hutchinson, Kan., it was found that one barrel of flour made of the best grade of Turkey hard wheat made 324 one pound loaves, while a barrel of average good wheat made 302 loaves of similar weight.

It is questionable which sort of neglect is the more cruel, leaving a horse for hours without a blanket on the village street on a cold winter day or hitched to the same post without a fly net in July or August when the mercury is crowding the 100 mark.

Through the middle west, where on July 4 early potatoes were retailing for 75 cents a peck, it will be entirely proper to serve murphies in cut glass dishes with the best silver in the house. Here's hoping that taters will get down to a queensware basis before snow flies, but at the present writing the prospect isn't particularly flattering.

Good horse sense and just a fair regard for sanitary considerations would seem to suggest to all retailers of fruits, as well as to the housewife who gathers fruit from her own garden, the wisdom of covering fruit when thus exposed with mosquito netting to keep off flies that may have come to it direct from barnyard, cesspool or dead animals in the neighborhood.

The proposition that thousands of those living in the drought belt from the ninetieth meridian west have been up against has been a soil so dry that field and garden seeds sowed in April have not yet germinated. In some of these sections there seems to be sufficient moisture beneath a six inch dust mulch, but unfortunately the seeds were put in above this level.

Some poultry specialists in the employ of the Connecticut experiment station have proved quite conclusively that germs of white diarrhea, which is a most destructive poultry disease, trace their origin to the mother hen, being transmitted by her to the eggs which she lays; hence at hatching time the little chick has the germs in its own system. This announcement does not offer much along the line of possible prevention, but is welcome because it is definite and gives a basis on which to make further progress.

Within the last year or two the alfalfa weevil has become a serious menace to the growers of this legume in Utah and some other mountain states. In making search for some means for keeping the pest in check the department of agriculture learned that in Italy there was a natural parasite of this particular weevil. Accordingly agents of the department were sent to Italy and a supply of the parasites shipped under cold storage to this country, and they are now being distributed in the sections infested with the weevil. Naturally, results will be watched with great interest.

As showing the great need that exists of keeping sources of milk supply and the conditions under which it is handled as nearly germ free as possible, may be cited an instance which has come to light recently in Englewood, a Chicago suburb, where thirty-four cases of typhoid fever have been traced to the milk of a dairyman who supplied their wants along this line. Going further back the health authorities traced the typhoid germs to the dairyman's daughter, whose duty it was to wash the milk cans, and who was found to be a typhoid carrier, as a result of an attack of the disease three years before.

THE SHOSHONE LAND OPENING.

On June 23 last past the United States government opened to homestead [illegible] choice tract of land in the famous [illegible] horn basin of Wyoming under what is known as the Shoshone irrigation project. Two units or sections of this project have already been settled, and water is now ready to be delivered to the third. The section just opened, which includes some of the most desirable land of the entire project, is located near the town at [illegible], and none of the farms is more than a mile from the railroad. Several hundred families have already located on the project, and those who are successful in getting a farm will have all the advantages of a well settled region—schools, churches, progressive stores, banks, etc., and good markets and railway facilities. The dam which stores water for the project is the highest in the world, completely blocking the course of the Shoshone river, and provides an ample water supply for all needs. While the price (cost of the water right) of this land was not stated in the notice which was generally published, it is quite likely in the neighborhood of $40 per acre, payable in ten annual equal payments without interest. These conditions put the lands in the Shoshone project within reach of any man of moderate means and determination who wants to get a home of his own on the land. The small amount he would have to pay annually on the investment, four or five dollars per acre, would be but a fair rent for the use of the land, and he could make these annual payments and more in growing small grain, alfalfa and other crops suited to the climatic conditions prevailing. Full information about this project and the exact terms on which the land may be secured may be got by addressing the United States reclamation service, 802 Federal building, Chicago, Ill.

JUST GRUBBING.

Too many folks who do not have to do so spend most of their time and most of their life "just grubbing." We here refer not to the class that are handicapped financially and are compelled to grub, but to a very large class that have more acres than they need, big red barns and bank accounts, yet who, in spite of this, delve and toil, deny themselves recreation, outings, holidays and not only the luxuries but many of the comforts of life. They forget that life is not measured by what one is able to save or to squeeze out of it, but by what it is possible to contribute and put into it. They seem to overlook the fact, too, that it does not take so very many years of this "just grubbing" to put a crook in one's back, take the elasticity out of one's step and dwarf or entirely extinguish one's capacity to enjoy things. More than this, they have at best but a few years here and will be a long time dead. So why scratch and scrimp and hoard and deny oneself wholesome food, decent clothing and a share in life's good things that are really worth while just to get title to a little more land and to a bigger bank account when the whole works will be left for heirs to divide or squabble over? There are a whole lot of fools outside of asylums for idiots and the feeble minded, and some of the biggest in the category are those who put in most of their lives "just grubbing."

SOME ARGUMENTS FOR IT.

The writer does not remember a season in a good many years when so many conditions seemed to urge the wisdom of installing silos all through the corn belt. In the first place, owing to the shortage in the hay crop, roughage of most every kind is likely to be high priced. Again, it is possible that many fields in the drought afflicted sections will be short in ears and that to realize what one ought from the whole corn plant it should be put into a silo. It is patent that this fall, if ever, it will be the height of folly to allow 40 per cent of the value of the corn plant to bleach and go to waste in the fields. Of course it is better if the corn is cut than not, but it is better put into a silo than put in shock and exposed to uncertain weather conditions. One of the strongest arguments in favor of installing a silo now, before the 1911 corn crop is ready to shred, is that it will provide a succulent ration during the winter months and next summer, when there is a possibility of just such a dry spell as we are now having. The job of filling the silo can be cheapened as well as simplified if three or four neighbors install them and unite in the purchase of the equipment used in shredding and filling.

A LATE SUMMER CROP.

In many sections where drought has prevailed during the past two or three months there are many gardens that will not yield a sufficient return to pay for plowing and seed, saying nothing about hoeing and cultivating which has been done since. In spite of the fact that it is late in the season, a portion of the garden may be made to give a return if one will sow turnip seed between now and Aug. 1. The soil may be very dry when the seed is sowed, but the first good shower will germinate them and a nice crop will be harvested in the late fall, if enough rain falls. We remember sowing turnip seed in this way on the site of an old strawberry bed, and sold from $12 to $15 worth of turnips in the fall. It was in a season much like this when potatoes were very high priced.

American Snuff Company, 111 Fifth Ave., New York.

A Canadian cow, a Jersey, has recently closed a second year's test which entitles her to the title of best cow of any breed in the Dominion. Her name is Rosalinde of Old Basing, and she is owned by a breeder of Red Deer, Alberta. In her first year's test, which closed February 25, 1910, she gave 10,870 pounds of 5.37 per cent milk, which yielded 729.6 pounds of 80 per cent butter. In the second year's test, which closed May 23, 1911, she gave 11,276 pounds of 5.3 per cent milk, from which 802 pounds of 80 per cent butter were made. Then cream and skimmilk sold in the two years brought $523.65, and two calves were produced which could not be bought at $250 apiece. This cow paid? It would seem so.

Of all improvements that can be made in the farm home to lighten woman's work and make it convenient perhaps the most desirable is that which will give a handy and abundant supply of water and, coupled with this, drainage facilities which will make it possible to dispose of waste water without the use of pails. It is a pretty poky farmer who spends valuable time pumping water for stock by hand and lugging it in pails, and it would seem that on any farm where more enlightened methods are in vogue for watering the stock a like improvement should be made in the water system in use in the house. Such a convenient water system should not be viewed as a luxury, but merely an improvement which common consideration and decency demand.

An amusing if somewhat unique incident was related to the writer the other day by a real estate agent setting forth the reason why another agent with whom he was acquainted failed to land a party of a score or more of friends whom he had escorted many miles to a section most of the merits of which were on the land company's advertising matter. The agent in question looked the proposition over pretty carefully and advised his friends not to buy, telling his real estate friend some time later that he was convinced that any man who would defraud his friends by selling them such land was a reprobate and would go straight to hell. The writer has been at a loss to trace the decadence in the belief in a hell fire with the alarming development of the real estate business, but in the above incident there seems to be a clew. It may be suggested for the protection of the greedy unwary that ministers everywhere devote one sermon a month to the mooted subject. Incidentally it would take the kinks out of many a hearer, put a curb on the real estate swindlers and keep a lot of hard earned money where it rightly belongs.

The State Agricultural college of Michigan, co-operating with some of the railroads of the state, has lately sent out a potato-poultry special. At all stops made short talks, practical and to the point, were given on these two important subjects. The value of the "gospel" spread by these specials can hardly be measured, the methods of instruction being such as to leave a lasting and definite impression on the minds of all listeners.

An Ayrshire cow, Netherall Brownie IX., owned by J. W. Clise of Seattle, Wash., has lately completed a year's test in which she surpassed the record previously held by any cow of this excellent breed. She gave 18,110 pounds of milk containing 820.91 pounds of butter fat, equivalent to 958 pounds of butter. While this does not establish a world's record for cows of any breed, it is a performance that Ayrshire breeders of the country are much pleased with.

Trees in a wood lot, like fruit, vegetable and flower, get ripe or arrive at a state of maturity if not in quite so exact and definite a manner. This maturity is indicated sometimes by decay, more often by slowness of growth, while it is usually safe to follow the rule of cutting the tree when it is not making as great a total growth in wood as the nearby trees would make in addition to their present rate of growth were it cut out. Putting it another way, a tree is ripe when its presence in a wood lot is doing more harm than good.

A report recently issued by New Zealand dairy authorities places the value of an acre of pasturage when sold in the form of butter at from $15 to $45. The difference here indicated is directly due to the ability of the individual cow to convert grass into butter.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

VOL XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1911 NUMBER 36

BIG CROP OF CHICKENS

Hunting Season Opens Next Week and Hunters Are Preparing for Good Sport.

Chickens Said to Be Very Plentiful This Year—Synopsis of Game Laws.

Local sportsmen, and this includes a large majority of male inhabitans of the city, are busily engaged this week cleaning their guns and stocking up with needed supplies for the opening of the chicken season which occurs next Tnursday, Sept. 7.

Prairie chickens are said to be unusually thick this year, and already trips are being planned and parties made up to shoot chickens and incidentally get away from the daily grind for a short vacation and a good time. Every livery rig in the city is said to have been hired for Sept. 7, and the liverymen are expecting to reap a harvest.

Below is a synopsis of the state game laws which the law-abiding hunter will do well to carry in his hat:

The open season for chickens, ducks and geese opens September 7. The partridge and pheasant season opens October 1.

The moose and deer season opens November 10. The open season for all of the above game ends December 1.

The open season for hunting and trapping muskrat and mink is from November 15 to April 15.

Non-resident big game licenses are $25. Non-resident bird licenses are $10. Both have to be obtained from the executive agent of the state game and fish commission, St. Paul.

Resident licenses are $1 for small game and $1 for big game. Hunters of small game do not have to have a license when hunting within county where they live. A non-resident trapper's license is $10. All resident licenses are obtained from the county auditor.

Fish house licenses are $1 and are obtained from the executive agent at St. Paul.

The limit of game allowed each hunter to kill is as follows:

One male antlered moose and same cannot be shipped from the state unless mounted.

One deer.

Not allowed to have in possession at any one time over 50 water fowls or 45 other game birds. A non-resident is allowed to ship 25 game birds to his home.

Sale of game is prohibited at all times. It is an offense to sell or to offer for sale or buy game.

It is unlawful—

To kill harmless birds.

To hunt deer with dogs.

To fish with more than one line.

To fish within 50 feet of a fishway.

To break or destroy birds' nests or eggs.

To place or receive game in cold storage.

To hunt on land of another without permission.

To wantonly waste or destroy game birds, animals or fish.

To run or train dogs during closed season on lands frequented by game birds.

To retain game more than five days after close of season unless tagged by commission.

Checking Up County Books.

Assistant Public Examiner Charles R. Boostrom of St. Paul is in the city this week checking up the books of the county officials. Mr. Boostrom stated that for a newly organized county the books are kept very well and the officials are keeping them up in good condition considering their experience.

The Corn Bill Bug.

This is the name given to an injurious insect whose appearance in Minnesota is this year for the first time recorded. According to the State Entomologist Washburn, the adult insects are hard, grayish-black beetles about half an inch long. They have a rather long snout or bill, whence their popular name. They may be found working on the corn stems at or just below the surface of the ground. The first signs of their presence are rows of holes, usually four in each row, extending longitudinally across the leaf. These holes are made by the beetles in feeding at the base of the stalks when the leaves are rolled up. Later evidences are found in stunted growth, distorted stems, and torn and tangled leaves. The insects occur most frequently on bottom lands subject to overflow, and on moist ground previously covered with timothy or other grasses. Pending further study, the preventative recommended is late fall plowing, which, as in the case of many other insects, will invite the destruction of the larvae by frost.

Electric Mules for Panama.

The first shipment of steel has been made from New York for building a unique electric railway along the Panama canal for drawing great ships from ocean to ocean. The enormous volume of shipping across the isthmus will be drawn on the ancient towpath system, so that it will be unnecessary for steamers to proceed under their own steam. In place of the mules, on this curious towpath, powerful electric locomotives will draw the largest ships smoothly and swiftly across the continent. A steamer of, say 20,000 tons, which the canal will readily accomodate is obviously a very heavy burden, and the electric locomotives will be geared to the tracks by a middle rail in the form of a rack. The canal commission has advertised for 2,000,000 pounds of steel ties, slots and covers and 1,300,000 pounds of steel channels. This rack railway will be built by the commission, and will be in working order in less than two years, in time for the opening of the canal.

Selecting Seed Wheat.

The time for selecting seed wheat begins when the crop is ripening in the field, and the selection should be completed before the grain is marketed.

On almost every farm there are spots where the wheat has a sturdier, more vigorous growth, with heads better filled out and bearing larger kernels than elsewhere. It is from these spots that the careful farmer will gather and separate the sheaves from which his seed wheat for next year is to be threshed. He will see that they are carefully shocked, and that in the hurry of threshing time they do not get mixed with the general crop. The quantity he will set aside will be several times as much as he will need for seed. This will allow a second and third selection at the fanning mill—the second to separate the largest and plumpest kernels; the third to select from these the kernels heaviest in weight. These last it is which count the most in the production of a large and profitable crop. Their separation will detract nothing from the selling value, at the elevator, of the remainder of the crop; since the smaller and lighter kernels will "mill" as well; while the selected wheat has a double or quadruple value for seed. If there is a surplus of seed beyond the producer's needs, the fancy price it will command, when sold to the neighbors, will much more than compensate for the labor of selection.—C. R. Barns, Ex. Dir., Minn. Col. of Agriculture.

VOTERS FAVOR BOND ISSUE

At Special Election Friday $40,000 Bond Issue Carries by Large Majority.

Work Will Now Proceed Fast Toward Building of Auxiliary Steam Plant.

By the vote of 293 to 33, the voters of the city declared themselves in favor of the bond issue of $40,000 for the purpose of building an auxilliary steam plant, at the special election held last week.

The vote by wards follows:

	No	Yes
First Ward, 1st Precinct	5	52
" " 2nd "	11	111
Second Ward	5	47
Third Ward	12	83
Total	33	293

Majority in favor of bond issue, 260.

The vote shows that the sentiment in favor of an auxiliary steam plant is overwhelming, although the total vote cast is comparatively light. The election passed off very quietly there being practically no excitement as every one seemed assured of what the result would be.

With the bond issue an assured fact the council can now go ahead and devote all its energies to the speedy completion of the steam plant. The site has been selected, the city's own ground near the pumping station on the west side of the river, and as soon as the specifications are completed, bids will be advertised for, and the contract let. After the contract has been let it is estimated that between a month or six weeks will be needed for the completion of the plant, but in any event it will be finished with all possible speed.

Creamery Organized 60 Miles from Railroad.

Dairy Inspector H. A. Lidenberg made a unique record last week when he assisted in the organization of a creamery association of the farmers about Malcolm, north of Red Lake and in Beltrami county, for in the establishment of a creamery there it will be 60 miles from any railroad and undoubtedly the farthest from railroad transportation of any creamery in the state, and possibly in the middle west.

For all this handicap, the farmers were enthusiastic over the undertaking. And if one stops to think, it is readily understood that it will be much less work to have the butter hauled to the railroad than it would be to haul grain to market that long distance. Thief River Falls is their nearest station. A creamery is already doing well at Grygla, only 15 miles nearer the Falls. Mr. Lidenberg says that the country in that section makes the best showing this fall, with its abundant crop, of any locality he has been through and predicts a bright future for all who have farms there, especially after the prospective railroad is built, from International Falls to Thief River Falls and already outlined on the railroad and warehouse commissioners' state map.—Fosston Thirteen Towns.

State Fair Rates.

The Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo roads have made a rate of one and one-third fare for the round trip to the cities for fair week. This is equivalent to the old two cent rate. Tickets will be on sale from Sept. 4 to 9, with Sept. 11 as the final return limit. The railways south of St. Paul have made a rate of one fare for the round trip.

$500,000 for Schools.

More than a million dollars will be dispensed by the state high school board as aid to the graded and high schools of the state. Of $567,000 to be distributed only a little more than $41,000 goes to the three largest counties of the state. Ramsey will get $12,000, Hennepin $14,000 and St. Louis $15,750.

Each high school in the state gets $1,750, aggregating $300,000. Under the Putnam act ten high schools will get a special aid of $2,500 or $25,000. High schools having a teachers' training course will get $750 each or a total of $45,000. Aid to the graded schools ranging from $300 to $1,100 per school brings the total amount to graded schools to $137,000.

PLEASED WITH CITY

Duluth Excursionists See Great Future As Grain Market for This City.

Estimated That 1,000,000 Bushels of Wheat Will Be Marketed Here This Year.

The following article written by a staff correspondent for the Duluth Herald who accompanied the special train of trade boosters which visited this city last week, is interesting as it tells what outsiders think of Thief River and its importance in the future.

Thief River Falls was a surprise to the Duluth people who were unacquanted with the town. It is a substantial, well-kept farming community, with wide paved streets, concrete walks, and substantial buildings that are indications of prosperity. Some of the party were taken around the town in automobiles, while others saw as much as they could in the short time allowed.

Thief River Falls occupies an enviable position. Stretching out for seventy miles to the east is a territory rich in agricultural land that is producing hundreds of thousands of bushels of grain. There are no railroads up in the richest part of the territory, but the land is so fertile that the farmers stand by and hope that some day they will have more adequate transportation facilities. They are enduring the inconveniences of transporting their grain long distances by team because they can make a good living by enduring the hardships and when a man has productive land he will get along without many conveniences of civilization.

Thief River Falls has all that great country to draw from. When the day comes that railroads are constructed east from the town, Thief River Falls will be an even more important point than it is now. It has two railroads, the Great Northern and the Soo Line, and since the coming of the Soo Line, population and commercial activity have increased. Greater railroad mileage in the immediate vicinity of the town will mean still greater increases, for Thief River Falls is a natural center.

According to estimates made, Thief River Falls will market 1,000,000 bushels of wheat this year. Most of it will go to the Head of the Lakes. There is a friendly feeling among all shippers in the northern part of the state toward the Head of the Lakes. Of course it is doubtful if the friendly feeling would increase shipments to Duluth if the Minneapolis market were higher than the Duluth market, but all other things being equal, much of the grain from the Thief River country would find its way to Duluth and Superior elevators.

Thief River Falls is a progressive little town. The last census gave it a population of 3,714. The business men of the town claim 4,000 on account of the suburbs that are in the surrounding townships. It has a hustling Commercial club and a city government. Mayor T. P. Hamre pointed with pride to an auditorium and armory just completed. Besides being used as an armory by the militia company, the building is equipped for theatre purposes. It has a seating capacity of 1,200, is built of brick fire proof construction and is modern in every way. It was built by municipality at a cost of $50,000 and is the pride of the town.

Gains From Fall Plowing.

Fall plowing of land which has been occupied by wheat or other small grains, and of all land which has been used for pasture more than three years in succession, is urged by the experts of the Minnesota Experiment Station on such a variety of grounds as would seem to make it, if not an absolute necessity to success in the operations of the following year, at least extremely desirable.

1. The breaking up of the soil exposes it more fully to the mellowing action of air, sunlight and frost during the colder half of the year, and gives fuller opportunity for the settling of the furrow slice.

2. Deep plowing fits the land to receive and retain in larger measure the moisture from and snow; putting surface in readiness for the final disking and harrowing necessary for this object in the spring.

3. The labor is more easily spared for plowing in the fall than in the spring, and the work is likely, therefore, to be more carefully done.

4. The turning over of the soil exposes to the winter frosts the roots of a large number of weeds, thus promoting their destruction.

5. Finally there is nothing quite so destructive to a number of insect pests, including grasshoppers, the whitehead army worm and the whole brood of cutworms, as late fall plowing. Especially is it desirable—in view of the probability of extensive depredations by grasshoppers next year, if the precaution is neglected,—that old timothy and stubble-fields, in every part of the state, should be plowed this fall. This precaution will be worth any amount of remedial measures after the grasshoppers shall have "arrived."—C. R. B.

Early Fall Plowing.

As soon as the binders have ceased to hum the plow should be brought out and put into shape for work. Before the stacking of the grain is over, there will probably be several occasions when a half day or more can be used in plowing land from which the grain has already been stacked. The plowing must be done sometime, and while some farmers will plead that there is plenty of time in which to do it, they do not fully realize that if those days that might be worked in during the grain stacking, etc., are not attended to at that time, they usually attach themselves to the latter part of the season. Besides the possibility that this neglect may crowd the work in the last few days of the season, it should also be remembered that an acre plowed in August is usually in a far better condition for crop production than when plowed in November. It gives greater opportunity for saving and storing moisture, and aerating the soil. It hastens the decay of buried vegetable matter, and furnishes a good, compact seed-bed the following spring.

Where insect pests are numerous and likely to cause trouble, late fall plowing is advisable, but under ordinary circumstances the best crops are grown on early plowed land. Early plowing also destroys the weeds. Replowing is advisable in late fall if it is necessary to destroy insects.—O. M. Olson, University Farm.

Magazines by Freight.

After Sept. 7 readers of Magazines and periodicals will have to wait a few days longer for their favorite journals, for Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock has issued an order that all such publications in that class will hereafter be sent by freight to the states where due.

This method of transportation has been tried for the past two or three months as an experiment, and Mr. Hitchcock has found that it works very well. He finds that it means a big reduction in the postal expenses, and therefore came to the conclusion that it could be kept up indefinitely.

It is probable that all the magazines which are destined for Minnesota will be shipped by freight to St. Paul, from where they will be distributed to the various stations under the regular postal service. By this means much money is saved, although it will necessitate a delay in transit and cause more or less irregularity in the arrival at the different stations.

Recent Happenings In This Country and Abroad.

MANY DROWNINGS IN SWEDEN

Over One Hundred Persons Lost Their Lives In That Country In Less Than Three Weeks—Minneapolis Girl Writes Euthusiastically of Norway, the Land of Her Forefathers—Danish Crown Prince to Visit America.

SWEDEN.

Alarming, indeed, are the many drowning accidents which have taken place in Sweden this summer. During the course of less than three weeks' time over 100 lives were lost through drowning accidents, when persons, both swimmers and non-swimmers, found a watery grave. Stockholm has a large list of drowning fatalities. The city is surrounded by water almost and a great deal of bathing is indulged in. Many persons who have drowned recently had been exceedingly careless, attempting to swim long distances or indulging in diving, which in many instances has resulted fatally. A case like this was that recorded from Lidingo, one of the beautiful suburbs of Stockholm, when a man went out together with a companion to enjoy a boat ride. Suddenly he exclaimed that he was going to swim to shore and when he was about half way from the shore he went down. There have been so many daring attempts of this kind that the Stockholm papers are publishing warnings in the form of regular advertisements, but it has been of little avail so far.

In Sweden women are preparing for places which have hitherto been occupied by men and are gradually securing them. A lady by the name of Louise Petren has recently passed the examination for doctor of philosophy at the University of Lund, with mathematics as her major subject. She is said to be the first one of her kind. Of course she, with others to follow, will be knocking for admission as teachers in the high and technical schools, hitherto occupied only by men. This has given occasion for an association of teachers, which was in session recently, to pass a resolution to the effect that it was not advisable and for the best interests of the schools to employ lady teachers in the upper classes of the scientific and technical schools.

Gustaf Wilhelm Sobastian Tham, one of Sweden's thriftiest manufacturers, died at his home in Huskvarna Aug. 3. He attained an age of seventy-two years. He was graduated from Upsala university in 1855 and early in life commenced to devote his attention to business. He is the father of the metal industry of Sweden and converted Huskvarna into an industrial city. He leaves an immense fortune, but will always be remembered as one of the greatest men of industry of his country. He was also known as a great friend of the laboring man and thousands of men who have worked for him praise him for his kindness and regard for their best interests. In him the country has lost a truly great man.

The Northern Tourist Bureau of New York has requested the Swedish government—rather the department of civil affairs—to appropriate an annual sum of 3,000 crowns for the purpose of advertising Sweden as a tourist country in the United States. The Danish government is reported to be willing to appropriate this amount, provided Sweden and Norway are willing to do the same.

Princess Maria Pavlovna is visiting in Paris, where she was present at her brother's betrothal to the oldest daughter of the Russian czar. Princess Maria will soon return to Stockholm. The Swedish papers make a great deal of her and it is reported that other members of the royal house in Sweden are very much opposed to the publicity.

The tobacco crop this year is going to be much below the average, not only in the vicinity of Stockholm, but also in Skane, where a great deal of tobacco is produced. The reason for this is that after the plants had been set considerable hot weather followed, and later frosts occurred, causing thousands of plants to be destroyed.

The church council of the Swedish congregation in Paris has reported to the church authorities in Sweden that the estimated cost of the church now in course of erection in Paris will be about [illegible] francs. The cornerstone of the new church was laid on June 6.

Drunkenness in Stockholm seems to be slightly on the decrease, according to the showing of the dockets of the police courts. During the past six months there have been 6,225 such cases before the court, as against 8,305 during the same period last year.

This has been an unusually warm summer in many parts of Sweden. The thermometer shows that it has been on an average very much warmer in Sweden during the past month or so than in Germany and Denmark.

NORWAY.

A Minneapolis girl, the daughter of Henry Gjertsen, a leading attorney of that city, who has gained fame in Germany as an opera singer, writes in the following enthusiastic and charming manner regarding the land of her forefathers: "There is something very appealing to me in Norway. It is the simplicity, the naturalness, and true heartedness of its people. The land rings true, its atmosphere is morally invigorating, one has the feeling that he wants to do the right thing, and then they are a clean people. The humblest cottage is clean and sweet. As I see more of Norway I begin to understand better the Norwegian character. What natures people must have, born under the shelter of these high mountains—how wonderful their imagination, how intensely proud and reserved, how playful and how tender their inner natures, how full of passion for the grand and noble, how patient through the years of poverty and struggle!"

After an illness of about six months Fritz Hansen, one of Norway's leading men, died recently in Christiania. Mr. Hansen had been especially active in matters educational. He was a member of the committee which formed the plans and constitution by which Norway has been united into a kingdom of its own. It is said that he could have been a member of the king's cabinet had he so desired. He was also active in arranging tourist excursions to Norway from other countries.

A cousin of Captain Otto Sverdrup, J. Berner Sverdrup, has left Trondhjem on an expedition to Spitzbergen. The expedition consists of three men and is equipped for mineralogical investigations. The real purpose of the expedition has, however, not been divulged. Mr. Sverdrup himself pays the expenses of the expedition.

The Central theater in Christiania will open the operatic season with the presentation of "The Merry Widow." Torleif Lund will take the part of "Danilo" and Madame Skarseth will assume the part of the "merry widow." The play has been given before in Christiania and proved very popular.

Emperor William of Germany has donated another 1,000 crowns for the restoration of the Trondhjem cathedral. The emperor has now donated several thousand crowns to the restoration, which has been going on for a number of years in this old and wonderful edifice.

Johannes Heftye, a banker of much wealth and prominence, has donated 20,000 crowns to the University of Christiania's jubilee fund. There is lots of money being donated from time to time to this fund by friends of the institution.

When the American naval squadron paid its recent visit to Christiania not less than 100 members of the crews who were of Norwegian descent were given eight days' shore leave to visit their relatives and friends.

Charles M. Schwab, the American "steel king," has closed a contract with the Graengsberg Iron Ore company to deliver 700,000 tons of iron ore annually for the next five years.

Not less than ten bales of women's hair were shipped from Christiania to Antwerp recently.

DENMARK.

America will have the pleasure of entertaining a real prince this autumn in the person of the crown prince of Denmark. He will sail for the Danish West Indies in September on board a Danish man-of-war. After a stay of two or three weeks in the West Indies he will go to Annapolis and visit the president at Washington and touch at New York, where there is a large Danish-born population. From New York he will proceed to Canada, where he will be entertained by the new governor general, the Duke of Connaught, and by the Duchess at Ottawa. It is possible that he may go as far west as St. Paul and Minneapolis, where there are quite a few Danes. He came prominently in the public eye in America in connection with the welcoming of Dr. Cook at Copenhagen as the discoverer of the North pole.

Sir Conan Doyle, the well known Sherlock Holmes writer, arrived in Copenhagen Aug. 1 to attend the wedding of a relative. The eminent writer will remain in Copenhagen until the end of the month and prior to his return to England he will have visited many points of interest in Denmark. He stated to a Danish newspaper interviewer the other day that Copenhagen was one of the most hospitable cities that he has ever visited.

The new Union Central station in Copenhagen will be dedicated some time in the early part of October and an elaborate program has been arranged for. The dedication of the imposing structure will take place in the presence of the leading men of the city, members of the diplomatic corps and the king and queen.

Professor Ernst Loffler, a leading scientist, died at his home in Copenhagen Aug. 1, aged seventy-six years. Professor Loffler has made geography a science in Denmark and gained international fame for his researches. He has for many years been professor of geography at the Copenhagen university.

Professor George Brandes, the celebrated Danish critic and writer, is reported seriously ill at his home in Copenhagen.

MARION S. NORELIUS.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The extraordinary session of the Sixty-second congress, the most active session in many years, has ended. All that remained for the final day's proceedings was the receipt of the president's veto of the cotton tariff revision bill, the final attempt of the Democrats for the adjustment of the tariff without waiting for the report and recommendations of the president's tariff board.

The treaties of arbitration with Great Britain and France were defended in minority reports filed in the senate in executive session by Senators Cullom, Root and Burton of the senate committee on foreign relations. No action on the conventions was taken and they go over for further consideration at the regular session.

That Knute Nelson of Minnesota will be elected president pro tempore of the senate at the December session is a view entertained by both regular and progressive members of that body. The office has been vacant many months.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, in a speech in the senate, came out openly in favor of government ownership of the railroads in Alaska and the governmental control of the natural resources of that rich territory.

The special session record of measures introduced is 14,038 bills and 484 resolutions in the house and 3,296 bills and 58 resolutions in the senate. Only a few of these were passed.

The national monetary commission will close its work on March 31 next. The senate has accepted the house amendments to the senate measure.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Charles H. Tindall, chairman of the board of directors of the Supreme Court of Honor, which has headquarters at Springfield, Ill., was shot and killed at Shelbyville, Ind., by Charles E. Van Pelt. The latter, who was arrested, said that Tindall had "goaded him beyond endurance" because charges had been brought against Van Pelt's wife, who formerly was recorder of the local Court of Honor.

While 2,000 men, women and children stood by shouting their approval Peter Carter, a negro, who had previously been charged by three members of his own race and identified as the man who assaulted Mrs. Minnie Spraggins, wife of a farmer, was burned to death on a brush pile in the main street of Purcell, Okla.

Richard Lee, Mrs. Lee and their seventeen-year-old son Clarence, residing at Booneville, Ind., were killed in their beds with a hammer and the house set on fire. William Lee, aged twenty-one, a son of the dead man, is under arrest charged with the triple murder. Robbery is supposed to have been the motive of the crime.

Eight prominent Seattle men have been arrested in connection with hanging in effigy of a federal judge who issued an injunction prohibiting people from interfering with a railroad in a dispute over fares.

Dallas Clements, twenty-six years old, shot and instantly killed his wife, Mrs. Fay Clements, in a Des Moines lunch room and then turned the pistol on himself, inflicting fatal injuries.

GETS $75.00 POSITION.

LITTLE CHANCE OF REVISION

Lindbergh Thinks Congress Cannot Pass Tariff Bills.

There is little probability of any tariff revision by the next session of congress, according to Representative C. A. Lindbergh of Little Falls, who was in St. Paul to attend the reception to Gifford Pinchot. There will be a great deal of other work to do, including all the annual routine work and the appropriation bills to pass, he said. He looks for a report from the tariff board, however, and efforts undoubtedly will be made to pass some revision bills.

When asked regarding the report that he might be a candidate for United States senator next summer Mr. Lindbergh evaded a direct answer by saying that he had not thought about the matter. "I am trying not to think about politics yet for a few months," he said. "Next March will be time enough to think of politics."

MINNESOTA PIONEER DEAD

Sylvester Stateler, Aged Ninety-four, Who Came to State in 1842.

Sylvester Stateler, aged ninety-four years, is dead at his farm home near Faribault.

Mr. Stateler was one of the pioneers of Minnesota. He was born in Ohio, March 14, 1817. In 1842 he reached Stillwater and remained there until 1846, later removing to Lake Superior. In 1847 he was appointed government blacksmith for the Chippewa Indians, holding this position until 1862, when he removed to Rice county and purchased a farm which has since been his home.

He was identified with the Territorial association of 1849, organized in 1857. Up to the time of his death he had a vivid recollection of the early days, with their privations.

WOULD LABEL CANNED MILK

Duluth Pure Food Convention Discusses Question.

Condensed, canned and evaporated milk was discussed by the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, meeting at Duluth. Commissioner G. B. Taylor of Louisiana declared that this product, when improperly labeled, had caused the death of almost countless infants in the South. Mention of embalmed milk precipitated a discussion that lasted throughout nearly the entire afternoon session and resulted in the introduction of a resolution demanding the passage of a law which would require manufacturers of evaporated milk to state on the cans just the amount of water necessary to bring the evaporated milk up to the exact point of whole milk.

ADJOURNED UNTIL SEPT. 12

Expected Whittier Case Will Be Concluded at That Time.

The hearing on the charges against Superintendent Whittier of the Red Wing training school for boys has adjourned until Tuesday, Sept. 12. Efforts will be made at that time to close the case and attorneys for both sides were instructed to prepare for the board written arguments containing deductions of facts from the evidence.

These will be submitted at the hearing in September. Both Attorney Frank B. Wilson, for Superintendent Whittier, and E. P. Sanborn, for Ralph W. Wheelock, will be given opportunity to make oral arguments besides submitting the briefs.

Mrs. Russell Sage of New York is to be requested by Attorney General Simpson and Assistant Attorney General Weeks, who have left for New York, to pay an inheritance tax on all her Minnesota lands held under contracts of sale. It is believed the tax will amount to nearly $600,000.

Mr. Simpson and Mr. Weeks will confer with Mrs. Sage and her business representatives to procure a settlement of the disputed tax.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

MOST QUESTIONS RULED OUT

Governor Eberhart on the Stand in the Hearing of Charges Against Superintendent Whittier.

For an hour and twenty minutes Governor Eberhart sat on the witness stand in the offices of the state board of control at St. Paul and, so far as allowed by the assistant attorney general, told why he desired the removal of F. A. Whittier, superintendent of the state training school for boys at Red Wing. He admitted that he did desire it, but the board did not hear from him the reasons, because they were held as not admissible evidence in a hearing on charges preferred by Ralph W. Wheelock, his private secretary.

Not one-fifth of the questions asked the governor by Judge Frank M. Wilson, attorney for Mr. Whittier, were held admissible. The hearing was held rigidly to evidence bearing directly on the Wheelock charges. As a result the threatened "grilling" which Attorney Wilson is said to have contemplated failed miserably and most of the time the governor sat quietly while Judge Wilson and Assistant Attorney General Weeks "had it out" over points of law.

The governor admitted having asked for Mr. Whittier's resignation. He admitted writing the board of control to that effect. He told of a conference attended by himself, Mr. Whittier and Judge Wilson, at which he urged the resignation and even offered to use his influence to get the superintendent a position in some other place if he would accede to his request.

Later in the day, with a jolt that almost took the participants off their feet, the proceedings came to an abrupt, if only momentary, halt when C. Louis Weeks, assistant attorney general and counsel for the board, volunteered the information that corporal punishment at the training school is legal and that the board itself and the legislature and not Mr. Whittier are responsible for it.

ACCUSES SEVEN OF MURDER

Mail Carrier Says Austrians Killed Halfbreed.

The mystery surrounding the murder of Billy Brown, a young halfbreed, at Pelican lake, on the Bois Fort Indian reservation Aug. 8, is explained by a statement of Thomas Fisher, a mail carrier, to Chief of Police Walsh and Deputy Sheriff King of Virginia, which has resulted in the arrest of seven Austrians charged with the crime.

Two of the accused, who live at Gilbert, have some land in the vicinity of Pelican lake and a few weeks ago they took five other Austrians with them to cut hay. According to Fisher's statement, they had a jug of whisky and Brown stole it. Infuriated they gave chase and after three miles killed the halfbreed.

BECOMES BRIDE OF DIPLOMAT

St. Paul Girl Weds Richard Edward Blacque Bey.

Never has St. Paul witnessed a more imposing marriage ceremony than the wedding of Miss Josephine Kalman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Kalman, to Richard Edward Blacque Bey, the distinguished diplomat, solemnized in the sacristy of the cathedral.

Long before the arrival of the bridal party the church was crowded with friends. More than 1,000 invitations had been issued.

Right Rev. Bishop Lawler, who performed the ceremony, was attended by two priests, Rev. Mr. Jordan and Rev. Mr. Findley, and six acolytes robed in white.

VAN SANT FOR CONGRESS

Former Minnesota Governor May Be Candidate at Large.

Former Governor Van Sant may become a candidate for congressman at large before the next Republican state convention. Rumor credits him with ambition to serve one term in congress and some of his friends are already sounding sentiment on the proposition. The former governor, though elected from Winona in 1900, is now a resident of Minneapolis. He has large business interests in land as well as in steamship lines and has not been very active in politics for several years.

Falls From Train to Death.

Arthur Johnson, twenty-two years of age, who has been working for the Crex Grass Carpet company at Wyoming, tried to steal a ride on a Northern Pacific passenger train near there. He fell and his body was cut in two.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

A United States government expert will be sent to Minnesota to aid state officials in conducting a campaign for a pure milk supply. This was promised by H. G. Rall, chief of the dairy division of the department of agriculture at Washington. One of the main objects desired by the agricultural department, according to Mr. Rall, is a uniform system of milk legislation and uniform systems of inspection. To gain this, Mr. Rall said the government is anxious to co-operate with the state officials as far as possible. After the work is under way, other experts may be assigned to Minnesota.

Potatoes are king in Clay county this fall. Louis Altenbernd, who has already shipped twenty-seven carloads, will clear $30,000 from his farm of 330 acres near Moorhead. The farm is devoted exclusively to potatoes and scientific methods of growing are used. Mr. Altenbernd said he would average a net profit of $100 an acre and that he was done with wheat farming for all time.

In order that juggling of funds, such as is charged in the Bren case, may be prohibited absolutely, the Hennepin county grand jury committee that has been investigating University of Minnesota finances, has reported that all university funds should be deposited hereafter with the state treasurer, in the same manner that the funds of all other state institutions are handled.

State Auditor S. G. Iverson has received deeds for fifty-five acres of land adjacent to Redwood Falls, which has been purchased under authority of the legislature. It will be known as Alexander Ramsey State park. The tract includes the waterfalls of the Redwood river and cost the state $3,750 out of an appropriation of $6,000.

Industrial accidents have decreased in Minnesota for the year ending July 31, 1911, compared with the fiscal period of 1910, according to the report of Don D. Lescohier of the state labor bureau. The decrease in fatal accidents amounted to 31 per cent of 8,329 accidents reported. Of this number 173 of the accidents resulted fatally.

The contract for ditch No. 96, in Roseau and Marshall counties, the greatest drainage project yet undertaken by Minnesota, has been awarded to William Sherwood of Alexandria at 7.97 cents a cubic yard. On the terms of the proposal the work will cost $167,645.

Robert Follansbee, head of the United States geological survey, which is working in combination with the state drainage commission on a state survey, says that Red lake will be surveyed at once to ascertain whether it is feasible to use it as a reservoir.

Mushrooms as large as a water pail were picked by Mrs. Enz along the Vermillion river. They are of the edible plant species and will be sent to the agricultural exhibit at the Minnesota state fair. They are the largest plants ever found in that vicinity.

Edward T. Quigley, long connected with the University of Minnesota and a resident of Minneapolis, has been elected superintendent of the Seattle public schools and will enter on his new work at the opening of the fall term of school.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Stuart MacDonald, twenty-six years of age, an assistant floor manager of the F. A. Patrick company of Duluth and one of the most popular young men in the city, was run over by a street car and fatally injured, dying from loss of blood several hours later.

Oscar Arnelund, a farmer living six miles south of Dassel, was killed by the Great Northern coast train near the Meeker county line. The coroner decided the man fell asleep near the track and failed to hear the train.

J. H. Eberly, who lives near Pelican Rapids, found the skeleton of an unidentified man a short distance from his home. No one is missing in the neighborhood and no one has any idea as to who the man was.

Albert Thompson was accidentally drowned while returning to Spooner from the Lake of the Woods from an outing. He fell from the stern of a launch and went down immediately.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Olof Vinje, a prominent citizen of Otter Tail county, is dead at Fergus Falls at the age of seventy-nine years. His death followed an operation for gallstones. Mr. Vinje was born in Telemarken, Norway, and was a brother of Osmond Vinje, the noted Norwegian poet.

H. Courtois, better known as "French Cap," is dead at Sleepy Eye. He was a French-Canadian and reached the vicinity of Sleepy Eye more than sixty years ago. He lived there during the Indian massacre of 1862 and saved many whites from death.

Oscar C. Stafford, inventor of the elevator bucket, is dead at Minneapolis, aged eighty-two.

Albert Johnston, father-in-law of Mayor Keller of St. Paul, is dead, aged seventy-nine.

George H. Marshall, eighty years old, a pioneer resident of Hastings, is dead.

WHY ALL SHOULD AID GOOD ROADS

Means Profit For Everybody, Farmer or Banker.

ALL TRADES ARE BENEFITED.

Merchants Will Enjoy Wider Trade Relations, Publishers Larger Circulation, Hotel Proprietors More Tourists and Bankers More Deposits, Owing to Increase In Profits.

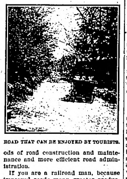
The work of improving public roads is not up to a certain class of people. It is up to everybody, whether he be a farmer or banker. All should be interested, as good roads mean profit, says the Ohio Good Roads federation. For instance:

If you are a farmer your farm will increase in value, you can raise more profitable crops, your cost of hauling will be lower, you can market your products when prices are best, your children can get to school, your family can attend church, your physician will be in closer touch with you, your boys and girls will stay on the farm, and you will have better mail service, more social life and happier conditions all around.

If you are a merchant good roads will enlarge your trading radius and make it possible for purchasers to reach you every day in the year and thereby increase your sales.

If you represent a chamber of commerce or a board of trade, because the public roads are commercial feeders to the cities and every improvement of these roads means a greater prosperity to the cities through increased agricultural production and greater stimulus to all industries.

If you are a highway official, because you are striving for better methods of road construction and maintenance and more efficient road administration.



ROAD THAT CAN BE ENJOYED BY TOURISTS.

If you are a railroad man, because improved roads mean greater production, consequently more traffic, prevent freight congestion, bring more industries, more roads, more tourists.

If you are an automobile user, because you can get the benefit of your machine every day in the year, your repair bills will be lower, longer and better tours will be possible at all seasons of the year.

If you are a dealer in farm products and implements, because you can receive the products and deliver the implements at all times.

If you are an automobile manufacturer, because every mile of improved roads means a greater demand for both pleasure and commercial cars, increases wealth and consequently the power to purchase.

If you are a publisher or editor, because improved roads make wider circulation possible, increase advertising by stimulating commercial enterprises, and because road improvement is the most important economic question of the age.

ROAD THAT MEANS PROSPERITY FOR THE FARMER.

If you are a manufacturer of road machinery or road materials, because road improvement means more business.

If you are the proprietor of a hotel, because improved roads mean more tourists and more commercial travel. New England, with its system of good road, gets $[illegible] a year from tourists alone.

If you are a banker, because good roads will increase agriculture, commerce and manufacture, depositors, deposits and dividends.

If you are a progressive citizen, because you can't progress so long as your state and nation remain in the mud.

It is estimated that $2,750,000 is spent annually upon public roads in Missouri, having an aggregate length of 120,000 miles.

Riding a Giraffe.

General Wood of the English army was the hero of many adventures, but the one he called the strangest is the time he rode a giraffe in India. With a party of friends he was being entertained by the rajah of Jowra, who exhibited his rare collection of wild animals to his guests. General (then Major) Wood was a daring horseman and on a wager offered to ride the giraffe with no bridle save a rope. The rajah warned him of the danger, but he would not listen. So the giraffe was brought to a balcony, from which the major vaulted on its back. Instantly the great creature was off like the wind, and, once fairly started, it settled down into a curious gallop that soon made the rider so sick and dizzy that he fell off like a log, receiving a blow on the head from the animal's knee and then in the face from its foot. He was unconscious for an hour, and the first use he made of his voice was to resolve that he would never ride a giraffe again.

Morgan as a Mathematician.

J. P. Morgan was almost bred a mathematician. While at Gottingen Morgan specialized in mathematics, and with the professor of mathematics he would spend long hours at problems. Some years ago a number of New Yorkers who had been at the Gottingen university together held a dinner and invited their old professor of mathematics, who happened to be visiting this country, to be present. The German stood his ground—he gave them his own idea. Looking at Mr. Morgan, he said that he was indeed very glad his old pupil had succeeded so well as a banker. "But I regret," he went on, "that you did not remain at the university. Had you stayed with me you would have been my assistant as long as I lived, and unquestionably at my death you would have been appointed professor of mathematics in my place."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Dust Whirls.

Seaward flowing waters are not alone responsible for the denudation of soils. Those who have watched dark dust storms approaching will be interested to know that estimates of solid material suspended in the air run from 160 to 126,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The aeolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

Millepedes.

The little creature which possesses the distinction of having more legs than any other animal is that which belongs to the family of insects known as millepedes or thousand footed. There are several different species of these, but they all possess the common characteristic of having segmented bodies, each segment of which is provided with its own pair of feet. These are set so closely along the body as to resemble hairs, and when they move one after another with perfect regularity the effect is precisely the same on a small scale as that of a field of oats undulating under the influence of the wind. Some species of millepedes have as many as 350 separate and distinct legs. They are all perfectly harmless.

Encouragement Enough.

"But why should you be so dreadfully surprised and disappointed when I decline your offer?" she asked recently. "I am certain that I never gave you the least encouragement to propose to me."

"You did!" he cried bitterly. "You gave me the greatest encouragement."

"When?"

"When you told me your income was $25,000 a year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sarcastic Wills.

One eccentric Frenchman directed that a new cooking recipe should be pasted on his tomb every day, and another Frenchman, who was a lawyer, left $50,000 to a lunatic asylum, declaring that it was simply an act of restitution to the clients who were insane enough to employ his services.

Staging a Play.

"I can give you the part of a butler."

"I couldn't take a small part like that."

"You are evidently not used to society drama. The butler has his share of the epigrams."—Pittsburg Post.

His Intentions.

Mrs. Rasher—Has Mr. Goldcoin, with whom you have been dancing all the evening, at last declared his intentions, Mabel? Mabel—Yes, aunt. Mrs. Rasher—I am so glad! And what did he say? Mabel—He declared he would never marry.—Vogue.

Trinidad's Pitch Lake.

All efforts to ascertain the depth of the famous pitch lake of Trinidad has been unsuccessful. At the sides of the lake the pitch is hard and cold, but at the center it is almost constantly boiling.

Happiness.

Happiness is rather a negative than a positive term in this world and consists more in the absence of some things than in the presence of others.—Sam Slick.

Fine manners need the support of fine manners in others.—Emerson.

Do We Sleep Too Much?

Perhaps, on account of popular opinion and personal habit, we waste much time in a jellyfish condition that could be more profitably spent in active pursuit of our ambitions. The answer, of course, depends upon the nature of our occupation. If there is much muscular effort involved, with a corresponding large amount of waste in the cells and blood, eight hours or more are probably necessary. But if our work is of a sedentary nature and mainly of the brain there is naturally a smaller quantity of accumulated waste, and less time is required for its removal. Many are the instances of great men, past and present, who have lived healthfully and worked unceasingly and strenuously on only four or five hours of sleep, or half the laborer's portion. Surely we are not to suppose that those men were or are physically different from others, but rather that by inclination or necessity they have developed a habit of sleeping intensely for a short period instead of lightly for a longer period, with resulting gain of time and efficiency.—Atlantic Monthly.

Kings Are Useful.

A king is a band embroidered gentleman trimmed with metals, faced with whiskers and thatched with a metal roof that would never keep off the rain. Nominally he is the head of the nation; actually he is a figurehead, and that is figuratively speaking only, for he is generally too fat to claim a figure and seldom has much of a head—except on the morning after a celebration.

Once upon a time the king was the big tuba of the band. Now he is merely an oboe—until there is a revolution, and then he becomes a real live hobo.

However, a king has his place, although he is yearly finding it more difficult to stay in it.

Kings are found to be very useful in poker games, and by society ladies who wish to be presented to somebody they can brag of having met when they get back home to their long left loved ones.—Detroit Free Press.

Light and Sound Waves.

With reference to our ability to tell the direction from which sound proceeds, attention may be called to an interesting difference between the eyes and the ears in relation to the size of the waves that strike them. The average wave length of light is about one ten-thousandth of the diameter of the pupil of the eye. On the other hand, according to Rayleigh, the waves of sound proceeding from a man's mouth are about eight feet long, whereas the diameter of the passage of the ear is quite small and could not well have been made a large multiple of eight feet. One consequence of the minuteness of light waves in comparison with the size of the eyes is that the lenses of the eyes are able to concentrate rays of light upon the retina with great efficiency.—Scientific American.

According to Orders.

In employing men to work at his Palo Alto farm in California the late Senator Stanford gave strict orders that they were never to strike, kick or whip a horse. On one occasion, while at dinner, one of the drivers insisted that he must see the senator. He was ushered in, with blood over his face, which was badly cut. "John knocked me down," explained the man, referring to one of the trainers. "What did you do?" asked the senator. "Nothing," replied the man. "But you must have done something. I want the truth," persisted the senator. "Well, I only kicked a horse," growled the man, "and John knocked me down." "Those were John's instructions," said the senator emphatically, "and he did just right."

Gallant.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt once told of a gallant to whom she had been introduced. "His compliments," she said, "were so glowing that at last I cried out:

"'But, monsieur, remember, I am sixty-four years old!'

"'Madam,' he replied, 'to me you are just thirty-two, for I, scared as I have been by scandal, am too charitable ever to believe more than half of what I hear.'"

Some Squeeze.

A judge was questioning an old Irishman.

"He took you by the throat and choked you, did he?" asked the judge.

"He did, sor," said Pat. "Sure, sor, he squazed me throat till I thought he would make cider out o' me Adam's apple."—London Telegraph.

Experience Teaches.

She—Dearie, shall I learn to make biscuits the way your mother used to make them? He (with a shudder)—No, darling. She used to beat 'em, and my poor father always thought that was how she developed her muscle.—Exchange.

ONE MAN'S WORK FOR GOOD ROADS

Doctor Showed People Benefits of Dragging.

FARMERS CO-OPERATED IN PLAN

McCaskey's Work So Surprising In Its Effectiveness That Road Dragging Has Become a Steady Fixture In Lancaster County, Pa.—Culverts Used For Drainage.

In East Lampeter township, Lancaster county, Pa., the use of the road drag has been more general perhaps than in any other township in Pennsylvania, says the National Stockman and Farmer. Several years ago Dr. Donald McCaskey heard Hon. Ralph Gibson of Williamsport, Pa., tell about the merits of the drag, Mr. Gibson having heard D. Ward King, the drag enthusiast, lecture on this subject and having followed Mr. King's advice. Dr. McCaskey began to drag a road in his neighborhood which was practically impassable.

Although he had the consent of a majority of the supervising board he was later forbidden to continue the work, but he carried the case to court and had the copy of the proceedings published and circulated all over the township. This stimulated a great deal of interest in dragged roads.

DR. DONALD M'CASKEY.

Dr. McCaskey became a candidate for supervisor and was elected. With the co-operation of farmers in his locality he began a systematic use of the road drag on the roads under his jurisdiction. Farmers were employed to drag the roads contiguous to their own land, payment being made at the rate of 40 cents per hour.

The result of this effort is that East Lampeter township has some of the best dirt roads in the country. Residents described roads which now appear to be in fine condition as formerly practically impassable a part of the year. Corrugated iron culverts are used for drainage, stones have been removed from the roads, and the gutters are kept clear of obstructions. All the roads are apparently in good condition, well crowned and consequently well drained.

The surface is hard and readily sheds water where the road has been dragged for any length of time. A few of the roads lack a solid surface, this having been their first year under the drag. A road scraper is used at the beginning of operations to shape up the road, but is never used to work it. All the dirt that is moved toward the middle of the road is put there little by little by the use of the King drag.

LANCASTER COUNTY ROAD BEFORE AND AFTER USING DRAG.

After two years of road dragging East Lampeter township finds that it has roads infinitely superior to the best it could produce under the old system, at an estimated cost of $12 a mile a year for dragging. The average cost of maintaining dirt roads in Lancaster county is about $40 a mile.

The taxpayers have declared their choice for a steam plant very decisively and it is now up to the council to give it to them as soon as possible.

The hunting season opens a week late this year but that will be all the more anticipation for the mighty hunters.

President Taft starts September 17 on a tour of the country, going west through the middle west to San Francisco, and returning by way of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, the Dakotas and Minnesota. The President has been extended an invitation from the Commercial Club of this city to speak here and may possibly include Thief River in his itinerary. He will deliver speeches defending Canadian reciprocity and other of his tariff policies, and the wheat raisers of the northwest will be pleased to hear what Mr. Taft has to say on these subjects which are of very local application.

Will Have Day Current.

Workmen are now engaged in connecting the boilers of the planning mill to the dynamo and when the work is completed it is expected that current will be available at all hours. Heretofore the current has been off in the afternoons which has been inconvenient for those who used electric power. The planning mill shut down this week for the season which makes its boilers available for the city.

Red Lake County Plans Big Fair.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., Aug. 28.—The annual Red Lake county fair will be held here Sept. 19, 20 and 21, and it is expected to be a great success.

Preparations for the fair are progressing satisfactorily. During the past ten days men have been employed at the fair grounds getting the grounds and track in shape. The work on the track is completed and the track is in good condition for the race events of the fair.

The Red Lake County Agricultural society was orgnized too late in the season to permit of the construction of an exhibit hall for this year's fair. However, the fair directors have taken care of this condition by the purchase of a large circus tent that will be placed on the grounds to be used for an exhibit hall. The tent is large enough to contain and provide room for the proper display of all fair exhibits.

A grandstand and fences will be built and stalls will be provided for the live stock that will be brought to the fair.

The premium list will be ready for mailing in a few days.

H. T. McAnulty, who is to have charge of Red Lake county's exhibit at the state fair, is busy preparing the exhibit for shipment to Hamline.

Bound Over to Grand Jury.

William Crowe appeared before Judge Bishop Friday charged with having intercourse with a girl under the age of 18. He waived examination and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. Bail was fixed at $500 which was furnished.

Barley Crop Good.

"Scores of farmers are receiving more hard cash for their barley crop alone this year than their entire grain crop brought last year," said a local wheat buyer yesterday and his statement is true. Barley is worth 96 cents in the local market and with the best barley crop ever raised in the country, coupled with the largest acreage; the value of the barley crop alone in the Red River Valley this year will total an enormous sum. Yesterday G. S. Spokely, of Nielsville, threshed 70 acres of barley and received 2600 bushels from the field, $2626 or $37.47 per acre. Thus barley yielding as this did, 37.1 bushel per acre nets more than 25 bushels of wheat per acre, as No. 1 Northern is also 96 cents per bushel. Mr. Spokely's yield is machine measure and it will run nearly a bushel more by weight.

A great deal of rye is running as high as 40 bushels per acre, which at present prices, 68 cents, brings 27.20 per acre, a figure which will buy some of the land, though of course, most of it is held for a considerable higher figure.

The wheat that has been theshed thus far is running from 16 to as high as 31 bushels per acre, though but few fields will yield over from 20 to 25 bushels and not enough has been threshed to place an average on the entire yield, as the barley and rye is all being threshed first.—Crookston Times.

Dr. Johnson and Fruit.

The return of the strawberry season was always heartily welcomed by Dr. Johnson, for, as he once declared, of strawberries and cream he never could have too much. Fortunately he sometimes had opportunity to indulge his taste to the full, for his friend, Dr. Taylor of Lichfield, whom he contrived when possible to visit at strawberry time, was rather a noted fruit grower, and when at his house it was, as Johnson said, with gusto, "Strawberries and cream, toujours strawberries and cream!" A voracious eater at any time, Johnson's appetite for fruit was almost limitless. Mrs. Thrale tells us that he used often to eat half a dozen peaches before breakfast, and then frequently she had heard him complain that never in all his life had he quite as much wall fruit as he desired, save once. The exceptional occasion was during a visit to Lord Sandys' seat at Ombersley. The exact quantity he then devoured has not been recorded, but he was accused of clearing a whole wall side.—Pall Mall Gazette.

There are few, if any, weeds that have a more generous capacity for seed production than the purslane plant, which has a spread of three feet. Myriads of seed capsules are matured, and each of these is chock full of seed.

While the rank of the two breeds is about the same from the standpoint of pork production, the Duroc-Jersey has this point in its favor as compared with the Poland China—that the litters which the sows farrow contain about 25 per cent more pigs.

Rarely does a boy or girl run away from a farm where there are conveniences for doing work in the kitchen, a gang plow pulled with four horses, blooded stock in barn or yard and the name of the farm on a signboard at the front of the farmstead. The why of this is well worth inquiring into.

Beginning with July 1, the salary of rural mail carriers was raised to $1,000 per year. Considering the number of serviceable horses they have to keep and that they are expected to make their rounds in all kinds of weather, there will be very few people who will consider the new salary too much.

The chief objection to the grade sire lies in the fact that, while he may be an excellent animal himself, he is not likely to possess in a marked degree the established traits of his pure bred ancestor. With such sires there is likely to be an outcropping in the offspring of the unlovely traits or marks of some scrub predecessor.

More than one slough has been as effectually drained by sinking a well through the stratum of shale or clay beneath it to a porous sand or gravel stratum as by tile draining it in the usual manner. This plan is especially worth looking into in the case of low tracts from which there is not an opportunity for effective surface drainage.

At the close of a season when pasturage and many kinds of feed have been short there will be a big temptation as soon as the field corn dents to overdo the matter of feeding the pigs with it. It is far better to keep the pigs on a short ration than to get their digestive apparatus all out of kink by loading them up with new corn and possibly putting them in right condition for an epidemic of cholera.

About the only service we ever heard of the English sparrow performing a friend related to us the other day. A nearby willow hedge had been well nigh defoliated by myriads of fat, juicy willow worms. One morning just at daybreak a cloud of sparrows, evidently summoned from miles around, lit down on these willows, and in less time than it takes to tell had devoured the last worm. This was a spasm of usefulness that it is a pity the sparrow tribe is not oftener seized with.

All kinds of grief, disappointment and hard cash might be saved by prospective land buyers if they would more often observe the simple precaution of gathering reliable data concerning the new country's rainfall, temperature in spring and fall, soils and adaptability to growing given crops. This information can be got without charge by writing letters of inquiry to the agricultural department at Washington and to the directors of the agricultural experiment station in the state in which the land is located.

Unlike our own greatest river, the Mississippi, whose overflowing following the melting of snow and spring rains deals havoc to the rich lowlands bordering its lower channel, the annual overflow of the river Nile is taken as a matter of course and not only does no damage, but yearly deposits hundreds of thousands of tons of rich virgin soil, brought from the mountains, whence the stream and its tributaries have their rise. Thus it has been for scores of centuries, the annual seedtime following the recession of the waters.

A friend brought us a specimen of a weed the other day which was a total stranger to us. The stalk was about eighteen inches high, the leaves were compound and somewhat more finely divided than the common wild vetch, and the fruit it bore was a small light brown bur, having a solid core about the size and shape of a bean. The botanist at the state experiment station, to whom a specimen of the weed was sent, states that it is the wild licorice, related to and resembling the licorice of commerce. The weed is a troublesome one in the Utah basin, but is readily held in check elsewhere by thorough cultivation.

FILLING THE SILO.

Many a farmer will be confronted in the course of a few weeks with the job of filling the silo for the first time. For such a few suggestions taken from an Iowa bulletin which gives the silo experience of dairymen and feeders in different parts of the country will be timely. As to the proper time for cutting corn for the silo there seems to be quite general agreement that it is ready to cut when it would be ready to shock—that is, when the kernels are dented and when the outer husks and lower leaves are turning brown. While the length into which the corn should be cut vary with different users, from one-half to three-fourths of an inch gives a finer silage which can be packed into the silo more closely, in which there is less waste in feeding and which increases the capacity of the silo considerably. Slow and rapid filling have points in their favor, but the latter method is followed by a majority, as it gives a more uniform quality of silage, obviates the necessity of putting up corn that is too green or too dry and is also the more economical way. With rapid filling a second filling is usually necessary about ten days after the first silage has been put in. The more uniformly and thoroughly the silage is packed down as it is put in the better the quality and the longer it will keep. In distributing the silage the outer edge should be kept about two feet higher than the center and kept especially well packed. The work of tamping may be done by foot, but cement tampers give even better results. This tends to make the silo more completely air tight and reduces loss from mold to a minimum. In the case of wooden silos any opening that would let air into the silage should be filled with soft clay. In case the corn used is overmature and dry the silage should be moistened as it is run in. In topping off the silo some use chaff or cut straw; others soak the top with water and seed with oats, which sprout and form a nearly air tight mat. The cost of filling the silo varies with different outfits from 40 cents to $1 per ton—that is, this is the total cost from the standing corn in field to the shredded product packed in the silo. The larger the outfit the lower the cost of filling, as a rule. The process of fermentation which converts the green corn into silage requires about ten days. If not used at once the top, which is likely to become moldy, should be removed and used as manure, as the feeding of it is often accompanied with serious results.

HOMESTEADING IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

Not with a view to creating prejudice against the vast country lying between meridian 100 and the Rocky mountains, but simply as a warning to some who have made entry on homesteads in the semiarid country and who have had no experience with dry farming methods, we would bring two or three things to their attention which may save them a lot of grief in the end. In the country referred to, where the annual rainfall is less than sixteen or eighteen inches per year, it is only practicable to raise a crop every other year, the land having to lie fallow each alternate season in order that enough moisture may be stored up to insure a crop the following year. This means that one must have considerable ready cash before starting out in such a dry country, not only for the purchase of necessary equipment for the working of a half section or more of land (it does not pay to work less than this), but a surplus to tide one over seasons when nothing is produced. It is well to remember, too, that in years of extreme drought, such as the last two have been, practically nothing can be produced. In one instance the writer knows of a homesteader who went to the country referred to has had just one decent paying crop in eleven years. A little was produced in three or four other seasons, but hardly enough to furnish forage for the animals which had to be kept on the farm. This may be an extreme experience, but it is cited as showing what some men run up against when they cast their lot in the semiarid country.

THE TORRENS TITLE SYSTEM.

If there is any one need more than another that is apparent in the realm of civil procedure it is that of a simpler system of transferring title to real estate. In numerous cases this matter of giving a clear title is a veritable bugbear, not only from the standpoint of a possibility that some flaw will be found in it, but also in the matter of securing an abstract of title. Cases are not infrequent in which such transcript of the pedigree of real estate will run from $50 to $200. It is apparent that if the welfare of land holders were considered a new system would shortly be adopted, but the system so generally in vogue gives a fat revenue for lawyers and abstractors; hence it is kept up. The Torrens title system lately adopted in Canada gives relief from the expense and red tape of the American method. On the transfer of a parcel of land the seller surrenders to the purchaser his title. This is sent to the government department having charge of land records, together with a nominal fee. Thereupon there is made out and sent to the buyer of the land a title thereto, which, though not larger than half a sheet of note paper, is evidence of absolute ownership, safeguarding the owner against scheming lawyers, clerical errors and pusillanimous technicalities of one kind and another.

An All-American Fertilizer.

The field force of the United States Geological Survey is prosecuting searches for deposits of minerals which shall furnish the three necessary elements of plant food that are contained in "complete fertilizer," namely, phosphate rock, nitrate salts, and potash salts. The Survey has already discovered and surveyed enormous deposits of phosphate rock, and 2,398,590 acres of public land containing phosphate, withdrawn at the reccommendation of the Geological Survey, are now waiting legislation by Congress to enable their development. In order, however, to insure an "all american" fertilizer, regardless of importations from other countries, it remains to discover deposits of nitrate of soda and potash salts. As both of these minerals are readily soluble and are not to be found as "outcrops" like ordinary rocks, the mission of the Survey is not an easy one. Nevertheless, it is believed that geological conditions prevailing throughout a large portion of the arid West favored the accumulation, during earlier periods of the world's history, of both these salts and that if these still exist in concentrated deposits, it is only a question of search to discover them. Hardly anything could be suggested which would be of greater assistance to the American farmer than the discovery of commercial deposits of either of these necessary fertilizing minerals.

Government Wants Land Back.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 29—More than 1,000 chancery cases, each involving from one to five subpoenas, have been started in the United States District Court at Fergus Falls, in the big blanket equity suit in which the United States is seeking to recover title to land in Becker, Clearwater and Mahnomen counties which was transferred to white people by Indians.

The government alleges that when mixed blood Indians where authorized to sell the patents to their land on the reservation, the full blooded Indians, seeing the half breeds flush of money, offered theirs for sale, making affidavits that they were of mixed blood.

13,000 Register At Opening.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 29.—Two-thirds of the registration period for the opening of the Berthold Indian reservation is now over, and the total registration at the five points is 13,249. This has been an average of 1,100 a day. The daily average at the various places has been as follows: Minot, 680; Bismarck, 315; Plaza, 45; Garrison, 38; Ryder, 29.

It is now estimated that the total registration will be between 16,000 and 18,000 at the five points. Judge Witten expects a rather busy week next week as many people plan to register at the last end, so that they will not have to wait so long for the drawing, which will take place on September 6.

Every state in the Union has now been represented at the registration at Minot. Nevada was the last state to come in line when a citizen of that state registered yesterday. Twenty-three states were represented in yesterday's registration alone.

Rain Delays Harvesting.

Rain which has been falling almost daily for the past week, has delayed the threshing so that little progress has been made since last week. The grain was not injured by the rain; however, and practically all of it is in the shock. The cutting of flax has commenced and will proceed as soon as it ripens. The moisture is expected to help the meadows and pasture and provide fall food for the cattle. Though the temperature has been down rather low several times in the past week no frosts were reported.

Roller Rink Opens.

—The Mozark Roller Rink will be open every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evening from 7:30 to 10:30, and Saturday afternoons from 2:30 to 5:30. On Saturday afternoons children under 12 years old will be furnished use of skates for 10c. A charge of 25c per month will be made for reserving skates and boxes. Everything has been put in the very best shape possible for the winter's entertainment.

Why not become graceful and improve the appetite with this pleasant exercise?

Cotton-Seed Meal Makes Corn Go Farther.

It seems probable that the selling value of corn will be higher during the coming twelve month, as a consequence of a diminished crop in most of the great corn states. Minnesota farmers have learned, however, that its feeding value is almost invariably higher than its selling value, and that the largest gain comes from feeding it to their cattle and hogs, and thus keeping on the farm the bulk of the fertilizing elements which are lost when the corn is sold. It is claimed however, that by substituting a limited amount of cottonseed meal for a portion of the corn ration, in fattening beeves, a gain of from one-fourth to one-third can be secured upon each bushel of corn fed. This seems to be verified by experiments at both the Indiana and Iowa stations. Therefore it may well be that by making such substitution the Minnesota farmer may find himself in position to turn a portion of his corn into money, this year, not only without detriment to his stock, but to its decided gain; while his farm will suffer practically no loss of fertilizer by the change. So the experiment is worth trying.—C. R. B.

HOW TO MAKE COUNTRY EARTH ROADS BETTER.

Work First and Talk Afterward. Make a Drag and Use It.

First.—Go to work yourself—talk afterward. Get a log eight feet long and eight inches thick, split it in half, back it together by diagonal stakes thirty inches apart, with the split sides facing the front. Fasten a chain to each end of the front log, hook a team to the middle of the chain, get the drag out on the country road after a rain and start in to haul the drag over the road at an angle of forty-five degrees, moving the dirt from the side gutters to the center of the road.

UPPER—SAWING LOG TO MAKE ROAD DRAG. LOWER—USING ROAD DRAG.

If you do this work yourself you will learn more about how to make country earth roads better in two hours than anybody could tell you in print in fourteen weeks.

The second thing is: Study the needs of the little stretch of road upon which you actually do your work. Make that stretch of road a model of a good roadway in every particular. See to it that every individual who drives over your road becomes a talking advertisement for highway improvement. If you must blast out rock to afford good drainage for the side gutters along your road why blast them out. Don't wait to talk about it.

Earth and water spell mud, and a muddy road is not a good road, and you cannot get rid of water until the water has the right slope of a drainage channel to carry it off.

Third.—If you will let no obstacle discourage you and if you will keep sublimely on, plugging ahead as the old tortoise did in its race with the hare, which slept by the wayside thinking because of its fleetness it could overcome the slow going tortoise; if you make the improvement of country earth roads a study of pleasure and a sort of philanthropic religion, your achievements for highway betterment will be swift and sure throughout whichever country district you may work.

OILING ROADS KILLS FLIES.

Massachusetts Man Says Tarvia Destroys the Eggs and Larvae.

A Lenox (Mass.) entomologist asserts that the absence of flies along oiled highways is due to the destruction of the eggs and larvae by the application of tarvia and the byproducts of oils which are being used to prevent dust. After conducting a series of experiments the Lenox man has found that there is almost a total absence of the stable or biting fly.

The Lenox experimenter says that tarvia has practically killed the breeding places of the stable fly and that there are fewer houseflies.

Since it has been established that typhoid germs are carried by flies, also Asiatic cholera, and that there is strong evidence that the fly is also the carrier of tuberculosis and other diseases, the discovery that oiling highways lessens the common fly and almost entirely exterminates the stable fly appears to be of the highest importance.

PLAN LONG HIGHWAY.

Improved Road to Be Built From Mexico to Alaska.

That a well improved road from the Mexican boundary to the Alaskan north is now a certainty was the expression before the annual meeting of the Pacific Highway association in Portland, Ore. Delegates from California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia told of the work that is being accomplished and said that sentiment is now strong for the highway project.

The report of A. E. Todd of Victoria, B. C., was especially encouraging, he reporting that the road from Victoria to Hazelton, eighty miles from the Alaskan boundary, would be open next year.

New Road to Cost $199,750.

The county commissioners of Wilkes-barre, Pa., have made application to the court for permission to build a macadam road between Wilkesbarre and Hazleton by way of White Haven. The road will be twenty and one half miles long, and the estimated cost is $199,750.

Extremes of Temperature.

Science reasons that the lowest temperatures at the earth's surface are not found directly at the poles, but at some distance to the south of the north pole and to the north of the south pole. Likewise the greatest degree of heat is not, as might be supposed, to be found at the equator, but prevails at some distance to the north and to the south of that imaginary line. The coldest place on the earth's surface of which there is authentic record is in Siberia. The lowest temperature ever recorded in the open air was 90 degrees below zero F. at Werchajansk, central Siberia, on Jan. 15, 1885. The highest temperature of which there is an authentic record is 124 degrees above zero F. in Algeria, northern Africa, on July 17, 1879. These places of extreme heat and extreme cold give a range of temperature covering the whole inhabited world of 214 degrees, or two degrees more than from zero to the boiling point.

Don't Breathe Lazily.

"If you are consumptive, if you think you are drifting into consumption, sing!" said a medical man.

"Of course singing alone will not save you from consumption or cure you. Besides singing you must have plenty of fresh air and good food. And, speaking of fresh air, I must say that not one person in a hundred knows how to inhale it. People seldom breathe deeply enough. They seldom properly ventilate their lung cavities, which resemble stuffy, insanitary apartments, where all germs thrive undisturbed. Acquire the habit of taking the big, deep breath which is a primary requisite for any kind of singing, bad or good, and the physical joy derived from it will never allow you to relapse into lazy breathing. Furthermore, the mere effort of singing compels the singer to stand straight and to throw out the chest, a good corrective for the bad physical habits of weak chested people."

Killed by a Shout.

A joyful shout thoughtlessly given by an Italian smuggler on having eluded the customs guards on the Swiss frontier was the cause of his six companions being killed by an avalanche. The party, coming from the Grisons, had, with a thousand precautions, successfully negotiated the Forcola pass on the Swiss-Italian border. Five of the men were loaded with valuable contraband goods, and two acted as guides and scouts. When they were all safely on Italian soil one of the guides named Maretoli gave vent to a joyful yodel. In the still air the least sound causes a vibration which may set enormous masses of snow moving. This is what occurred here. A quarter of a million tons of snow detached itself from the mountain side and came thundering down upon the party, who were swept in an instant into an abyss. Maretoli alone was able to extricate himself.

Checkmate!

In these days, when various schemes are being suggested by which the loser of personal property may recover it without offering an extreme reward, it is interesting to note two advertisements which appeared last summer in a German paper. In these advertisements nothing so bald as a suggestion of reward appeared. They seem merely to present two wits fencing, and the reader forgets the matter at stake:

Berlin, Aug. 5.—The gentleman who found a purse, valuable beyond explanation, in the Blumenstrasse, is requested graciously to forward it to the address of the loser, as he is recognized.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—The recognized gentleman who found a purse, valuable beyond explanation, begs that the loser will call at his house at the earliest convenient hour.

The Green Kind.

A naval officer who has seen considerable service in South American waters once brought home two parrots, one of which he gave to the housemaid and the other to the cook.

For a long time there ensued animated discussions as to the merits of their respective birds. Finally the housemaid said:

"Your parrot may be a better talker than mine, though I don't believe it." Then, with an air of presenting the final clinching argument in her favor, she added, "Besides, you'll have to admit that mine has the most beautiful foliage."—Lippincott's.

Honored the Old Men.

A unique festival occurred in Paris in 1797 in honor of the old men. The idea was the encouragement of the family circle, and the old man who was a happy grandfather was held up to the younger generations to follow in his footsteps. "A gracious Hebe crowned their white locks with garlands of roses, while the soldiers of France presented arms in their honor."

Legislatively Expressed.

"No one can go wrong if he follows the Ten Commandments," said the sincere citizen.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "the only trouble about the Ten Commandments arises from the amendments people try to tack to them."—Washington Star.

Miss Highsee—But it is time for the guests to leave. Hostess—Yes; that's why I want you to sing.—New York Sun.

Good Money After Bad.

It is a curious fact that many men, level headed enough about other things, seem to lose their wits entirely when they become involved in lawsuits. In one case recently concluded in the German courts a Berlin merchant paid out over $900 to recover the value of a five cent postage stamp. He had written a letter asking for an address and inclosing postage for reply. Failing to get an answer, he sued for the stamp.

The famous Missouri watermelon case was just as trifling and even more disastrous. The seed was planted on one farm, but the vine crept through a crack in the rail fence, and the melon grew on the other side. Both farmers claimed it, and instead of perceiving the humor of the situation they went to law. To add to the puzzling features of the question of ownership there was the further complication in that the fence stood on a county line, whereupon a question of the jurisdiction of the courts came up. The farmers bankrupted themselves without obtaining a decision as to the ownership.—Green Bag.

Liquid Dynamite.

The Mexicans have a native brandy called aguardiente, which is a species of liquid dynamite, as palatable as corrosive sublimate and as full of potential deviltry as an egg is of meat. When you find a Mexican gentleman adorned with a belt full of deadly weapons decorating and deluging his interior with aguardiente it is the part of prudence to retire to a bombproof. There is another tipple, a white, innocent looking fluid called mescal, which is distilled from a cactus of the same name, which has in it all the combined energy, activity and homicidal possibilities of a volcano mixed up with the gable end of a mule. In former days the Apache Indians made a crude distillation of the same stimulant, which they called tis-win, and as a preliminary to a raid among ranches and settlements it was a great success from an Indian point of view.—Boston Herald.

The Crocodiles Dived.

The cunning of wild animals in concealing themselves in moments of danger is well known. A party, spending a week on the Nile, were watching eight or ten crocodiles sunning themselves on the surface of a small lagoon. It was determined to trap these monsters, if possible. The water was breast deep, including about two feet or more of heavy mud. Four nets were tied together, so as to make one long enough to reach across the lagoon, and this was weighted on the bottom. This net was drawn with long poles from each shore, and behind the net came a line of men a yard apart, prodding the mud with poles. The scheme looked like an admirable one, but the crocodiles sleepily dived, and that was the last seen of them. The water was dragged backward and forward, but they had burrowed so deeply in the mud that not one could be found.

A Political Genius.

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, as he had not managed to make himself a power in congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said, "You live near the center of the United States, don't you?" "Yes." "Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district?" The congressman introduced the bill, and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next congress, and, although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee, his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes in color like a marine chameleon. It would appear, from studies of this creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissue of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

Corrected Him.

A reporter was once interviewing Thomas A. Edison.

"And you, sir," he said to the inventor, "made the first talking machine?"

"No," Mr. Edison replied, "the first one was made long before my time—out of a rib."

Three Not of a Kind.

Sir Henry Maine's famous political diagnosis is worth quoting. The king of England reigns, but does not govern. The president of the United States governs, but does not reign. The president of France neither reigns nor governs.—Boston Herald.

Usual Reason.

"He used to be a straight enough young chap. What made him get crooked?"

"Trying to make both ends meet, I believe."—Toledo Blade.

His Strong Face.

"Bilkely's is a strong face or I'm no judge of physiognomy."

"It ought to be. He and his whole family are living on it."—Buffalo Courier.

Obedience is not truly performed by the body of him whose heart is dissatisfied.—Saadi.

FARM · ORCHARD AND GARDEN BY F. E. TRIGG CENTRAL POINT ROGUE RIVER VALLEY OREGON CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

With spring chickens running all over the place and fetching only 9 or 10 cents, there is mighty little profit in the farmer selling them and buying beef at 15 cents and bacon at 20 to 25 cents.

The items you now and then run across about making ice cream out of hailstones are interesting in a way, but it is a distinction a fellow usually likes to have claimed by some one over in the next county.

Considering the money invested and cost of keep, there is no product sold from the farm that represents so large a measure of profit as that from the poultry yard. And these profits could be increased greatly were more pains taken.

Where one wishes to keep chickens in town the Asiatic breeds are preferable to the lighter and more excitable breeds, such as the Leghorns and Black Spanish. However, the natural docility of the Cochin and Brahma should not be allowed to serve as an excuse for not making them scratch for their rations.

Ask the real estate agent representing any new section of the country if clover or alfalfa will grow there and not only have his word for it, but make him show you thrifty fields of the growing stuff. Human beings can stand any climate that alfalfa or clover can, while either one will mean forage for dairy cows or beef steers, and these will mean a living.

It is not an uncommon thing for the butter producing capacity of the offspring of a herd of common cows to be increased by from fifty to a hundred pounds per year over that of their dams as a result of the use of a prepotent purebred dairy sire. In many cases this would be the difference between skinning along on bare bones and profitable dairying, between the star boarder and the money maker.

Some little time ago a reader of these notes wrote, asking details of a method of making butter from skim-milk, which he claims he saw reference to in these notes. The writer wishes to say that no such hope has ever been held out in this department, however much he wishes such alchemy might be possible. It is impossible to make a whistle out of a pig's tail or butter out of milk from which the natural oil has been removed.

An item reported the other day in the daily press told of a farmer losing seven head of fine beeves as a result of a breaking of the wire which held the windmill in gear. A week later he found every animal in the pasture dead from thirst. This incident suggests the wisdom of keeping a closer tab on animals that may be confined at some distance from home, and particularly as in this case, where the water supply is an artificial one.

Location and rarity have much to do with determining popular feeling toward many things which are technically styled weeds. In the central and eastern states the fern is prized as a woodland plant and is used as a beautifier of lawns and gardens. On the Pacific coast it is a positive nuisance for several years following the clearing of timberland. In New England the golden rod and daisy are plant nuisances, but in the middle west rare enough to be greatly admired and used in autumn floral decorations.

A word of caution to buyers of Canada land: Notwithstanding the fact that soil and rainfall may be all that could be desired (and it's well to be pretty sure on this latter point) steer shy of any section where the grain is likely to be frozen stiff in the field just before time to cut. A friend who moved to such a district not many years ago later left for a warmer clime because he lost his grain crop three years out of five in the above manner. Farming under such conditions is altogether too tough on a fellow's nervous system, let alone the strain on his bank account.

A few weeks ago there was organized near Winchester, Ill., an alfalfa growers' association. A number of farmers already engaged in growing the legume or planning to do so met on the farm of one who has been a successful grower of the crop for the last twenty years. Naturally the new association will do all in its power to promote the growing of alfalfa, the introduction of hardy and thrifty types, and the good to come from pursuing these objects is bound to be considerable. There are many localities where alfalfa growing is in its infancy, where such an organization would be of practical and definite value.

We once knew a home so poor that the wife couldn't afford a decent gingham dress or the soap with which to wash it, yet there were kept on the place (and fed) four old dogs and seven pups, on which the dog taxes amounted to from $12 to $14. Queer financiering this.

Some one has said that women are far more successful than men in breaking heifers to milk. If this be so it may be due to the fact that they haven't words at command to give their feelings so vehement expression, and as a result the bovine does not divine their real state of mind.

We know of two farmers who want to tile, but the neighbor below them is an agricultural standpatter and won't co-operate. They have decided to tile to his line and let the water go where it will. He will be converted by the time their drainage systems are in operation when the next wet season rolls around.

Individuals in many droves of hogs continue as runts and sometimes die from an infestation of their interior anatomy with the long white worm. There are a number of worm killers which if given in time will put the worms out of business. Suspicious cases should be looked into and the remedy applied as soon as possible.

While nature seems to have endowed birds with an instinct which guards them against nesting too late in the season, the writer remembers several years ago finding a nest of little waxwings in pinfeathers in the orchard late in October after the apples were harvested. If these little chaps did not get chilled in the weeks following for lack of proper clothing we miss our guess.

The much debated question of how to keep the boy on the farm may be boiled down to this: The boy can be kept on the farm when life there is so arranged that it will arouse his interest and give impetus to his energies and when the reward which he may reasonably expect for his labor is commensurate with that which he would get in other lines of work. Discussion of the problem which does not take into account these general truths is beside the question and largely futile.

Laws which have been passed in a number of states enable farm owners to have their farm name copyrighted by the payment of a dollar fee. Too many go on the principle that it is better not to name the farm until certain improvements and cleaning up have been done. The writer holds it a better plan to put the name of the farm on a neat signboard at the front of the premises. Then if the condition of the premises is not on a par with the dignity of the name chosen there is a constant incentive to make it so.

Now and then one runs across a brother or sister whose name is found on the church book, but whose religion does not seem to safeguard either against the temptation involved in the simple transaction of the sale of a quart of milk. In one case of this kind not long ago, in which the writer's family was a victim, it seemed that the morning when the milk was most innocent of butter fat a posy (two roses and three zenias) tied with a white string used to be placed beside the pail of milk when it was delivered.

The secret of real contentment lies not in having more money, better clothes, a bigger house or a later model of automobile than one's neighbor, but rather in making much of the blessings with which any home may be endowed if its inmates so will—love, kindliness, sympathy, usefulness, temperate living, largeness and breadth of view, appreciation of and gratitude for the splendid common things, fresh air, blue sky, the pink of dawn, the gold of sunset, for flowers, for trees, for grass, for birds. These latter, after all, are the only things really worth while.

Recent investigations seem to have proved that the owl, skunk and badger are, on the whole, friends rather than enemies of the farmer and gardener. And now comes a writer putting up a pretty strong plea for the crow, based on recent investigations by the biological survey at Washington. The contents of the stomachs of 1,000 crows killed during every month in the year were carefully examined. While it was demonstrated that the crow dug up corn, killed young chickens and raided hens' nests, it was found that the part of the corn destroyed while growing formed only 3 per cent of the total and that the damage to chickens and eggs was small compared to service rendered in destroying mice and many harmful insects.

There is money to be made in growing ginseng and mushrooms, but just as much can be made with no more work and less risk by growing onions, potatoes or tomatoes. With clean straw worth from $6 to $8 per ton, many a farmer might with profit carry out the English practice of putting a small boy and a pony on the stack as the straw comes from the machine and having him tramp it down until the stack is two-thirds built. On settling such stack will have a solid center and sloping sides, which will shed the rain. Such stack properly topped out and sides raked down will keep two years in better condition than the average loosely built stack will two months. And this year, if ever, there will be good money in taking this extra precaution.

AN EGG LAYING CONTEST.

Beginning on the first day of next November and continuing for a year, there will be held at the Missouri state poultry farm at Mountain Grove, a national egg laying contest. The expenses will be met by state funds and the contest will be held under the direction of the secretary of the Missouri poultry board, T. E. Quisenberry, who will be assisted by poultry experts from the Kansas, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota state agricultural colleges. Those in charge expect the data gathered to be of great practical value to poultry raisers and the poultry business generally. The question of economy in housing and feeding, the food value of certain diets, methods of increasing egg yields and the differences in profit between egg yields and the differences in profit pens that make the highest records and those that make a poorer showing, will be carefully studied and determined. Prizes will be given monthly to the pen which makes the best showing in egg production, to the pen which lays the greatest weight of eggs, and to the individual hens that lay the greatest number of eggs each month and for the year. The hens will also be tested for fertility and hatchability of eggs and vigor and vitality of chicks hatched therefrom. More than 150 applications have been received from poultrymen in twenty-five states, and doubtless many more entries will be made before the contest starts. Practically all of the well known laying breeds will be represented in the contest, and the announcement of the best laying breed at the close of the test will be awaited with keen interest.

ABOUT BAKED BEANS.

Properly prepared, there is scarcely any dish the good housewife can cook that surpasses a pot of baked beans, this both from the standpoint of toothsomeness and nutritive quality. But, for all this, scores of messes of beans are spoiled before being put into the oven. This comes through soaking the beans overnight and throwing away this water, boiling them up a couple of times more and doing the same. At this stage of the game the beans are just about ready to be dumped out into the back alley, as all the distinctive flavor and snap they possess have been soaked out and thrown away. If the family has been indifferent to baked beans in the past try the following: Soak the beans overnight if old and hard; if new, bring to a boil on top of the stove, add a pinch of soda, two level teaspoonfuls and a half of salt, sugar to suit, a teaspoonful of mustard—these amounts to a quart of dry beans—and bestow the pieces of pork so the rind will cook crisp. Put this combination on in the morning on baking day and serve in the evening with brown bread, boiled potatoes and sliced onions, and you have a dish fit for a king.

THE BOY AND THE STATE FAIR.

If the boy has shown evidence of a lack of interest in the farm operations and there is reason to believe that the farm work is sort of palling on him it would be a pretty good idea to take a couple of days off and go with him to the big state fair. After he has seen the blue ribbon horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, the poultry, the latest machinery, products of the field in the shape of flower and fruit and grain the chances are that the agricultural profession will advance several notches in his esteem. However, to be most effective such a visit should be followed up by an attempt on the part of this boy's father to put some of the better methods into practice on the home farm and possibly to undertake the raising of some kind of pure bred stock, giving the boy an interest in the enterprise. Such a course as the above we believe would make over literally hundreds of farm boys who find country life prosy and uninteresting and who are already beginning to gaze with longing eyes toward the cities with their brilliant lights, variety and attractiveness.

A CHIGGER CURE.

Dr. Crumbine, one time secretary of the Kansas board of health, got hold of a chigger remedy from a Texan a number of years ago and made it public. It is simple, as follows: Take a few ounces of hyposulphite of soda, which retails for about 10 cents a pound at any drug store, and make a saturated solution in a small quantity of water—that is, dissolve in the water all it will hold. Moisten or bathe spots where chiggers have burrowed. The solution apparently penetrates to them and kills them. The solution has no harmful effect aside from causing a slight smarting on parts which have been scratched or irritated. The solution will not only relieve chigger bites, but applied to the skin and allowed to dry will prevent them from working for a day or two.

THE NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.

In a resolution passed at its last session the New York legislature provided for an investigation into the sewage of cities. Those who have made a study of the matter estimate that in the cities of the Empire State alone there is a loss of $25,000,000 worth of plant food annually. This is chiefly in the form of nitrogen, and under sewage methods at present in vogue running into streams or burning is entirely lost. This certainly is a conservation problem of such proportion as to merit serious and effective attention.

TEACHING GOOD ROADS LESSONS

Farmers In Missouri Are Learning at School.

ENGINEER INSTRUCTS THEM.

Novel Method of Trying to Keep Roads In Good Condition by Telling People How to Do It Given a Successful Trial at Columbia, Mo.—Fifty Farmers Attend First Day.

At Columbia, Mo., P. S. Quinn, highway engineer of Boone county, has organized a class in road building. At the first meeting of the class more than fifty farmers, all dressed in their working clothes, assembled in the circuit court room in the county courthouse and sat in a semicircle around the judge's desk. On the bench was Mr. Quinn, acting as professor in the new branch of school instruction. The pupils were the newly elected road overseers.

"Boone county is going to have better roads in the future," was Mr. Quinn's first announcement, "and if you men are to be responsible for the condition of these roads then you must know something about road building yourselves. That's why I have organized this class, and if you show yourselves apt pupils there should be no more complaint about the condition of the highways here."

Quinn believes that such a school is necessary if the county is to have good roads. Much of the time of the first session of the class was devoted to acquainting the overseers with the provisions of the road laws. "Promptness" was the keynote of his instructions.

"Ditch your roads right away," he said. "Remove everything from the roads and ditches in spite of what the landowners say; also make the landowners keep their hedges trimmed."

He made it plain to the overseers that they had authority and that he wanted them to make use of it. The men were interested too. Some of them had bad trouble with the landowners, and they wanted to know what to do.

"Tell me how to make a single man work on the roads," one suggested.

"Make him do it; make him do it," Quinn replied: "It's like getting blood from a turnip, but make him do it."

"What would you do when you get your roads in good condition and all of your neighbors travel on it in preference to some other and cut it all to pieces?" was the question of another.

"How can you make the rich man do any work?" came from a third man.

Hundreds of similar questions were discussed by the overseers and Quinn, all with a view of solving the question of how to improve the country roads. There were instructions as to the use of teams and when to do the work.

Other sessions of the class in road building have been held since the first lesson.

GOOD ROADS SOON IF—

Each State Spends $4,000,000 For the Improvement of Highways.

Between half a billion and a billion dollars would be saved annually in the United States if every state would improve its main highways to the highest point of efficiency.

Calculations just made by the United States office of public roads show that to effect this enormous saving throughout the country it will be necessary to improve only about 20 per cent of the roads.

There are now about 2,150,000 miles of road in the United States. Two hundred thousand miles, or about 9 per cent, are improved in some manner. To bring the number of miles up to 20 per cent it will be necessary to improve 250,000 more miles. While this task may seem stupendous, it is estimated that it can be accomplished by a probable average expenditure of $7,000 a mile, or $1,750,000,000 for a fairly complete system. Were each state to put $4,000,000 into the improvement of its roads the work could be accomplished in a very short time.

Importance of Good Roads.

The salvation and uplift of rural America depend more upon the building of good roads than upon any one other thing. The farmer and the people of the small towns and villages do not understand this now, wherefore they need to be educated to the fact that money spent for good roads is not money thrown away, whereas money spent for makeshift improvements is worse than thrown away. They must be taught that good roads are not a luxury, but a necessity, and that the cost of their building is not extravagance begotten of the automobile, but simply a wise investment, on the part of every community everywhere, without regard to what sort of vehicle is favored by those who travel over the roads.—Motor Print.

A Big Difference.

The localities in the state where good roads have been built are becoming richer, more prosperous and more thickly settled, while those which do not possess transportation advantages are either at a standstill or are becoming poorer and more sparsely settled.—Wichita Falls (Tex.) Times.

Secret Baseball Signals.

"Perhaps you never realized that there is an exact science in coaching and signaling," says Hugh S. Fullerton, writing on the secret tricks of baseball coaching in the American Magazine; "that the two men out there near first and third bases, who seem to be making fools of themselves or trying to annoy the majestic man in blue serge, are the wigwag men signaling to runners or batters just what the general sitting on the bench wants them to try to do. Sometimes the general is on the lines himself, looking just as foolish as the wigwag men or more so, but somewhere, hidden in his meaningless or hackneyed phrases or his wild gestures, there is a meaning. He is telling the batter not to hit the next ball or to bunt it or informing him that the next will be a straight fast ball and at the same time informing the base runner that the batter intends to hit and that he must start at top speed when the pitcher starts to wind up."

Salt Water Bathing.

Dr. Copeman of Brighton, England, writing in the Practitioner, London, gives some advice on sea bathing. "The best time to bathe is about two hours after breakfast, the period of greatest vital activity," says Dr. Copeman. "The one time which must be avoided by all is after a full meal. During the process of digestion the vessels of the internal organs are already engorged with blood, and the shock of the cold water is apt to produce a very dangerous condition of congestion, the least of many penalties that may accrue being an acute attack of indigestion. With many keen bathers it is an article of faith to bathe before breakfast. But business men, after months of unremitting toil, those who are below par or who are getting on in years, should avoid taxing their system by bathing at such a time. Even the most robust would be wise to partake of a cup of hot milk before leaving the house."

Salt.

Salt production is about the oldest industry in the world. In Italy, the cradle of the salt industry, it has been manufactured commercially for 2,500 years. Salt is so necessary to existence that in some parts of the world tribes will sell the members of their families in exchange for salt. Salt has been the cause of wars, and so important has it always been considered that in some places the passing of salt is established as a token of friendship, and women throw salt on a visitor as a friendly greeting. In some countries salt is so scarce that it is obtained through the ashes of grasses and a species of palm and other plants. While salt is produced in almost every country in the world, it is stated that nowhere can salt of such purity be obtained at anything like the cost for mining as in Louisiana.—Manufacturers' Record.

A Real Gas Plant.

There are two varieties of gas plant. One is a manufacturing establishment where coal is converted into gas for illuminating and heating purposes. The other variety is a real growing plant called the fraxinella. Few know why the fraxinella is called the "gas plant." This is because at certain times it releases a volatile oil that actually ignites if allowed to come in contact with a lighted match. The fraxinella is also noted for its fragrance and longevity if not disturbed. One plant in a New England garden is doing its best to outlive a third generation, and elsewhere a clump is still flourishing after no less than thirty-seven years on a grave—one of the most difficult of places for a perennial to keep up a long struggle for existence, let alone a normal life.—New York World.

Gifted.

"I don't know what I'm ever going to make of that son of mine," complained a prominent Cleveland business man the other day. The old chap is self made, a graduate of the university of hard knocks and all that, and it naturally grieves him to have a son who is not aggressive.

"Maybe your son hasn't found himself yet," we consoled. "Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted! I should say he is! He ain't got a darned thing that wasn't given to him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Big William Penn.

The statue of William Penn at the city hall in Philadelphia weighs thirty tons and is thirty-seven feet high. Some other dimensions are: Hat rim, twenty-three feet in circumference; nose, thirteen inches long; eyes, twelve inches long and four inches wide; hair, four feet long; arms, twelve feet six inches long; waist, twenty-four feet in circumference; legs, from ankle to knee, ten feet; calf, eight feet eight inches in circumference.

Beats a Good Wife.

An orator holding forth in favor of woman—dear, divine woman—concluded thus:

"Oh, my friends, depend upon it, nothing beats a good wife."

"I beg your pardon," replied a woman. "Sure, a bad husband always does."—London Telegraph.

Early Rising.

The difference between rising in the morning at 5 and 7 o'clock in the space of forty years—supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night—is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a life of threescore years and ten.

Where is the man who has the power and skill to stem the torrent of a woman's will?—Old English Proverb.

INTEREST IN GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT INCREASING.

Delaware Company Proposes Highway Between New York and Washington.

That interest in the betterment of roads is growing steadily in the United States has been evidenced by the almost simultaneous publication in the newspapers of the country of two items of news which should bring joy to the heart of automobilists and users of humbler means of conveyance.

One was the announcement of the coming incorporation in Delaware of a company that proposes to build a great boulevard between New York and Washington.

The other was the offer of General T. Coleman du Pont, president of the Du Pont Powder company, to build a fine highway across the state of Delaware, a distance of over 100 miles.

For a short part of the way the route of both these proposed highways may be made identical. The promoters of the New York-Washington road are in communication, therefore, with General du Pont in the hope of making some arrangement for joint construction work along the stretch where their proposed highway and that of the millionaire powder manufacturer will coincide.

RAISING MONEY FOR ROADS.

Missouri Women Hold Ice Cream Sociable to Procure Funds.

An ice cream sociable was held at St. Charles and Handley roads, in Lindhurst, Mo., Aug. 12, for an unusual purpose. The Mothers' club of that district, affiliated with the National Mothers' Congress, has set out to build a good road there and to raise the money with which to do it.

While their purpose is to make the roads passable at all times for the sake of child welfare, yet any road building which they may do will naturally be of wide interest to the motorists of St. Louis and vicinity.

The Mothers are also encouraging the organization of road scout troops among the boys of their school district. These scouts are pledged to patrol the roads around about their school for eight or ten miles and to report to the road overseer or the county engineer any bad spots or broken bridges which may be found.

The money which was realized at the sociable Aug. 12 was turned over at once to the county court to apply it to building the road.

WAKING UP.

Wyoming Business Men Plan Building New Roads.

The people of Wyoming and especially the business men are awaking to the advantages of building good automobile roads across the state. The large influx of tourists in automobiles this year has brought the good roads question forcibly to the attention of Wyoming people, and a state wide movement looking to the building of new roads and the betterment of old ones is being inaugurated.

The people of Evanston, in the southwest corner of the state, have joined with Utah in improving the road between Evanston and Ogden, and as soon as this work is completed the work will be continued eastward to the boundary line between Uinta and Sweetwater counties.

Good Roads Boosters to Meet.

The greatest good roads gathering the nation has ever known will be held at Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 to 15. The first annual meeting of the American Association For Highway Improvement will be held in that city, and President Taft is expected to make the principal address.

PROFIT AND LOSS.

The difference between good and bad roads is often equivalent to the difference between profit and loss. Money wisely expended for this purpose is sure to return tenfold, and now that the states are expending in the aggregate $1,000,000 a day for road improvement conditions in the country are likely to be so improved that the trend toward the city will be stopped and the overflow in the cities will turn to the country.

The Light of Crystals.

All diamonds do not shine in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light, but some do to a remarkable degree. A diamond rubbed with a woolen cloth or against a hard surface will sometimes shine brilliantly. The emission of light is a property belonging to many if not all kinds of crystals.

A variety of white marble found at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., gives out a flame colored glow when pounded and bright flashes when scratched with steel. In northern New York is found a kind of stone known locally as "hell fire rock," which exhibits bright sulphur colored streaks when scratched in the dark. Pieces of rose quartz rubbed together exhibit brilliant flashes, sometimes bright enough to illuminate the hands of the person holding them. Smoked quartz and other varieties sometimes show a similar phenomenon.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Lively.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her memoirs, edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life. The plan is monotonous until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert and it gains interest through vastness.

There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"Well, t'missis and me, we've been married nigh on fifty years, and we've never had one quarrel."

The old woman looked at me with a twinkle in her eye and said:

"It wur varie conscientious, but varie dool."

The Bloody Hand.

The noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates a wager that ended in a crime. Sir Thomas Holte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London Globe.

The Tyrolese.

You may find the artistic temperament among the peasants in the villages of Bavarian Tyrol. They talk still of the King Ludwig, who lavished money on palaces and died an insane suicide and murderer. You remind them that they are still paying off the debts of the mad king. They reply cheerfully that they are glad of it, for Ludwig loved music and gave us Wagner.—London Chronicle.

A Stirring Appeal.

The following epistle was sent by an angry tenant to his landlord:

Dear Sir—I want them sellar steps fixed right off. My wife fel down last nite and like to broke her blame neck. Please send blumber and fix our bath tub. It will soon be time now for us to use him agen and oblige. Yours truly. —Everybody's.

FORTUNE IN HAY LANDS

Plenty of Undeveloped Land In This County Which Can be Used to Raise Hay.

Value of Hay Is Going and there Is Always an Outside Reward for It.

There is in Pennington and surrounding counties much good hay land—undeveloped and unused for any purpose, and for for sale at from $6 to $20 an acre. There is great economic loss in this waste of rich opportunity.

And every year of late hay has been scarcer and higher priced in the markets than the year before. This scarcity is a general condition. Market reports from New York indicate a shortage again this year. In that city the following prices are offered for large bales per ton:

Choice timothy $20, light clover mixed $20 to $22.50, rye straw $11, oat straw $8.

Clover grows wild all over this region, and on improved land it thrives wonderfully. No region on earth produces finer or larger yields of clover. Timothy does almost as well, and so does alfalfa. It is an ideal hay region. Prices have always been good in the markets, and the general hay markets indicate such a demand that there can never be overproduction. If at any time in the future the local markets do not need it all, the high shipping value will remain.

These facts, if generally known, would bring settlers by thousands. For opportunity it can be beaten by nothing except a lucky strike in gold mining.

A recent new York market circular says:

"The 1910 hay crop of the United States amounted to, in round figures, 60,978,000 tons, a decrease of 3,960,000 tons under the 1909 crop, which was 63,938,000 tons. The crop of 1908 was 70,798,000 tons. The heaviest loss was in the northern central states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota; Iowa leading the rest with a loss of nearly two million tons, and Wisconsin next with very nearly one million tons loss; Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois show decreases. Only ten states show no change either way. From present reports, the outlook for the 1911-12 crop would indicate a shortage of close one million tons less than 1910, which of itself, was nearly four million tons less than the 1909 crop."

It is doubtful if marketing this wild hay and vine crop, even for so large returns as present market prices will bring, is as profitable as feeding it to dairy cows and realizing on the milk and cream which these "breadwinners" would produce.

More dairy cows to use the "raw material" natural wild feed in "manufacturing" butter fat is what is needed.

$30,000 Potato Crop.

It seems almost incredible, but it looks as though Louis Altenbernd, one of the prominent potato farmers at Sabin, nine miles from Moorhead, will net, this year, $30,000 profit out of his his crop from 300 acres of potatoes.

Mr. Altenbernd is now marketing his output at the existing prices which range about 75 cents a bushel for the best of eating stock. Three cars were sold in Moorhead yesterday afternoon, to local dealers at 75 cents a bushel. Already Mr. Altenbernd has shipped out twenty-seven cars of potatoes as eating stock—not seed, for that market is not open yet. He says if the present yield keeps up, and there is every indication that it will, he says he will clear $100 an acre upon his 300 acres.—Norman County Herald.

Seed Corn.

That the corn crop of Minnesota today promises not only a larger aggregate yield, but a larger return per acre than ever before, is fairly due—at least in large measure—to the strenuous effort put forth last year, by the Extention Division of our College of Agriculture, to induce a careful selection of seek by the farmers, followed by careful drying and storage. A sufficient number of farmers would appeared to have followed these methods to exercise a marked influence on the size of the crop. Their success affords the best demonstration possible of the superiority of the new over the old haphazard methods.

It is with renewed confidence, therefore, that the Extention Division again urges the immediate adoption, by every farmer, of the plans heretofore recommended for the selection and care of seed-ears. Let every one take note, as he passes through his cornfield, of the stalks showing the most vigorous, stocky growth, and bearing the plumpest, best-developed (not the biggest) ears, and showing the earliest maturity. The latter point is desirable; for every day's gain in the time of maturity, in a variety otherwise already reasonably successful, is so much additional insurance against a possible loss by an early frost.

Those farmers who this spring planted a seed-plot for the "ear-to-row" test, are on the right track for winning still further advantages in the effort to raise the standard of production per acre, in Minnesota, to the level reached in other states. Persistency in this plan is certain to bring large rewards.

Some foolish alarmists have put forth the claim that all this endeavor to raise the standard of production by selection of seed will be futile; because, they say, it is practically "in-breedin," and the law of "revision to type," as they claim, will operate to counteract, eventually, the gains now being made. The claim is absurd. There can be no in-breeding unless the corn of each stalk is fertilized year after year by pollen from stalks of the same immediate progeny. In a field it is as likely to be fertilized by pollen from plants several yards away as in any other way. Instead of in-breeding, therefore, that healthiest kind of breeding occurs, which comes from the union of the offspring of different families of the same vigorous race.—C. R. Barns, Ex. Div., Minn., Col. of Agriculture.

Our Schools of Agriculture.

The Minnesota School of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park, was at the last term fairly swamped by the number of students seeking its advantages. The legislature voted a sum of money for additional buildings, but they will not be available for use during the ensuing term; therefore the conditions of overcrowding, and overwork for instructors, seem likely to be repeated.

It is earnestly urged that all intending students, to whom the new schools at Crookston and Morris are geographically more convenient, should register at those schools. Whatever seeming advantages the St. Anthony Park school may have, from its location and its connection with the State Experiment Station, are probably more than offset by the greater amount of individual attention from instructors which the student will enjoy at the smaller schools. Whatever difference in expenses may exist is probably in favor of Crookston and Morris.

The necessary expenses of the six months' term at St. Anthony Park, aside from traveling expenses and the cost of a military uniform, do not exceed $100. The next term opens Monday, October 23.

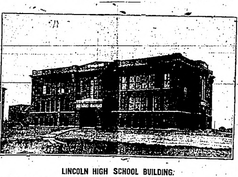
Schools Open For Year's Work.



LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING.

The public schools within the city including the newly completed Lincoln high school opened for the years work Tuesday morning. Though exact figures of the attendance have not been compiled yet, the number of pupils is estimated 1000 of which 200 attend the high school. The numbers are expected to increase within the next month and especially when the special term of 5 months opens Oct 1 for those pupils who can attend in the winter.

The Lincoln high school building which was completed last December is the pride of Thief River Falls and the most up to date and best equipped high school of northern Minnesota outside of Duluth. Besides the regular class rooms, there are rooms especially fitted up for manual training, domestic science and commercial work. The latest devices in sanitation, ventilation, heating and lighting are used and the building only needs a visit of inspection to convince one that it is up-to-date in every particular. Since the above photograph was taken, cement walks have been laid and the grounds leveled and improved.

Seed Corn Week September 11-16.

Governor Eberhart by proclamation has designated September 11-16 as "seed corn week."

As an experiment a seed corn week was designated last year and the result was that commercial corn has been produced in every county of the state with an aggregate corn crop that is the greatest in the history of the state. It has added millions to Minnesota's agricultural wealth.

In his proclamation Governor Eberhart gives credit for this development to the extension division of the Minnesota College of Agriculture. Supplementing the proclamation is an extension bulletin issued by the college of agriculture, which will be distributed to the farmers of the state telling them how to select and store seed corn.

The success of Minnesota's corn crop, coming as it does now when the corn is short in recognized corn states, fixes the state permanently in the corn belt.

New Depot for Crookston.

A special train carrying several of the officials of the Northern Pacific Railway, stopped here Tuesday for a few hours while on its way to St. Paul, returning from Winnipeg, where the officials had been on an inspection trip. The officials met about fifty of our citizens at the commercial club rooms and the proposition of building a new depot here was discussed. It is quite probable that plans will be made for a new structure before very long, as the officials found that the company's business in this city is sufficient to warrant the expenditure.—Crookston Press.

Chicken Season Opens Today.

Awaiting the opening of the chicken season a number of hunting parties left last night for the country to be early in the field this morning and get the first chance at the chickens. The game is said to be unusually thick this year and we will soon be hearing stories of the large number of chickens bagged. The majority of the hunting parties went to the north and east of the city into the territory recently drained where the chickens are said to be so thick that you can't cross a field without raising a covey. The game is also said to be plentiful west of the city. There will be little duck shooting in this vicinity this year however. Mud Lake which used to be a stopping place for the ducks flying south is now drained dry and there is no lake or pond near the city where the birds would be apt to feed.

In Favor Of Extra Session.

The Duluth Herald last week completed a canvass of the members of the state legislature which showed that the majority are in favor of an extra session of the legislature this winter. There were 66 who favored the extra session with 27 who opposed it and 9 non-committal. Four members, among whom was D. P. O'Neill of this city, were opposed to increasing the gross earnings tax of the railroads, with 13 non-committal, the rest being in favor of it.

In explaining his position Mr. O'Neill wrote to the Herald as follows:

"I do not favor an increase in the railroad gross earnings tax at this time while action is pending. Second—and this is a selfish reason—I do not favor increased railroad taxes because the people, and not the railroad pay the tax. Third, the three big counties pay over 50 per cent of the tax and the agricultural counties pay over 75 per cent of the freight; so that by increasing the tax for the benefit of the cities, we increase the freight in the country.

"I would favor an extra session for only one purpose. That would be to give fair representation to Northern Minnesota. I do not think the governor could control. The southern senators would do just as they pleased regardless of his wishes.

With kindest regards, respectfully,
D. P. O'Neill.

The Hotel Question.

The following communication from a knight of the road is published because it shows clearly what a large part of the traveling public think of our hotel accommodations:

To the citizens of Thief River Falls:

Although you could support a good hotel you have two poor ones. A poor hotel looks bad for a town of your size. Of course, we do not expect, in this part of the country, a hotel of elaborate magnificence, which has a pillared office supplied with leather cushioned easy chairs and divans, faultless elevator service, and a Hungarian band to play at meals. But we do want a good cooked meal and a clean bed.

Citizens, your hotels are very poor; I might say, a bad advertisement. Take this to heart, citizens of Thief River Falls; get people who know how to run a hotel, and try to give the traveling public some accommodations of which the hotels you have at present are lacking in. Then we traveling men will advertise your hotels.

Hoping that these few lines will reach the right spot, I beg to remain,
Your's truly,
A Travelingman.

Many Buffalo Skulls.

Conductor Withey of the G. N. says that there are several hundred buffalo heads lying around on the flat stretch of country to the west of the G. N. Ry. between Middle River and Strathcona. The fire that passed through there last fall uncovered them and he saw them while out hunting, but the heads are so brittle that they crumble to pieces when handled. Evidently a big herd of buffalo had perished in that district at some time in the remote past, and all of them has decayed except the heads.—Warroad Pioneer.

Investing In Wire Grass.

Karlstad, Minn., Aug. 30.—Nobody suspected two years ago that the swamp land to the east of this town would be of value until it had been drained. But now it is becoming one of the most valuable assets of the county, nearly $100,000 having been invested in this locality on its account since spring, while it is furnishing profitable work for hundreds of persons.

—A grass matting factory of Oshkosh, Wis., has bought several thousand acres of the swamp and has secured options on several thousand acres more, because of the abundance of almost pure wire grass from which it manufactures rugs, art squares and carpets. The company built two large grass camps which furnish homes for about 150 men, who will have work until snow flies. Each camp consists of three main buildings, the cookhouse, bunkhouse and barn, beside several smaller ones and many tents.

The company has spent $70,000 for land, buildings, materials and machinery, and by the first of the year will have spent $75,000 more for buildings and wages. It will build a 60x250 warehouse at Karlstad, with a spinning mill in connection. The mill will employe twenty-five men and will be in operation almost the year around. The company has put up already about 1,000 tons of grass and expects to put up about 2,000 and 3,000 more.

The horses used in the swamp wear shoes made of pieces of plank 12 inches square, to keep them from slipping through the bog turf. The grass is first cut with a self rake reaper, then gathered up by binders and bound after it has cured, after which it is stacked to be hauled or shipped to the nearest spinning mill.

H. B. Waters of Emerson, Man., is district wire grass superintendent, with headquarters here. F. H. Steiger of Oskosh is the manager and was here last week looking over the situation. He says that this is the largest and best wire grass district in the state and fully as good as the camp he has at Vito, Man.

ALL READY TO BUILD PLANT

Specifications Prepared and Bids Advertised for New Steam Plant.

Bids for Bond Issue Will be Opened Sept. 16 and Contract Let Sept 19.

Preparations for the building of the city's new steam plant are now complete and it may be expected that within two or three months the electric light and power will be furnished independent of the water power.

Bids for the bonds issued at the recent election and the contract for building the plant have been advertised for. The bids on the bonds will be opened Sept. 16th and the bids on the contract Sept. 21.

The specifications call for a brick building 105 by 60 feet. Two steam engines, boilers and dynamos will be the principal equipment. The engines will be 300 and 150 horse power. The larger one will be used for the day load and the smaller one will work with it from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. when the load is the heaviest. As was stated previously the plant will be constructed on the city's own ground near the pumping station and the Soo tracks. Negotiations are under way now, to have the Soo build a side track up to the steam plant so that car loads of coal can be unloaded at the building.

A committee composed of Mayor T. P. Hamre, Goodnow Torrison and Leonard Peterson, who have been investigating the problems in connection with building the plant returned to the city Monday from Minneapolis and announced that everything is now in readiness to proceed with the work.

$2,700 from Timothy Seed.

Will Casselman was down from Lockhart Monday and speaking of his big crop of timothy seed says he was never more surprised in his life when he threshed and sold the crop from 160 acres for $2,700. This is the fourth year since the timothy was planted and he would have been willing to have sold the hay for $200. Fortunately, however, he did not and realized a small fortune from it. The weather this year was favorable for timothy seed and others have realized handsome sums, although not as much as Mr. Casselman.—Norman County Index.

Wheat Yield is Very Good.

Wheat threshing in this vicinity was commenced on Tuesday by the Ellingson-Knudson threshing rig at the Otto Johnson farm northeast of Holt. The yield turned out better than was expected and proved to be a little over 25 bushels per acre. The grain is of a very fine quality and is expected to grade up to the top notch when hauled to the elevator. Business men and others in this vicinity, who were familiar with the Johnson field, are now predicting that wheat will average from 20 to 25 bushels per acre in this neighborhood, though there are some spots where rust has damaged the crop slightly.—Holt Northern Light.

SOCIALIST NATIONAL AND CITY PLATFORM

Latter Drafted By Local Platform Committee and Adopted By Referendum of Local Organization.

SOCIALIST PARTY PLATFORM.

Issued by the National Executive Committee Socialist Party. 180 Washington Street, Chicago.

Principles. Human life depends upon food, clothing and shelter. Only with these assured are freedom, culture and higher human development possible. To produce food, clothing or shelter, land and machinery are needed. Land alone does not satisfy human needs. Human labor creates machinery and applies it to the land for the production of raw materials and food. Whoever has control of land and machinery controls human labor, and with it human life and liberty.

Today the machinery and the land used for industrial purposes are owned by a rapidly decreasing minority. So long as machinery is simple and easily handled by one man, its owner cannot dominate the sources of life of others. But when machinery becomes complex and expensive, and requires for its effective operation the organized effort of many workers, its influence reaches over wide circles of life. The owners of such machinery become the dominant class.

In proportion as the number of such owners compared to all other classes decreases, their power in the nation and in the world increases. They bring ever larger masses of working people under their control, reducing them to the point where muscle and brain are their only productive property. Millions of formerly self-employing workers thus become the helpless wage slaves of the industrial masters.

As the economic power of the ruling class grows it becomes less useful in the life of the nation. All the useful work of the nation falls upon the shoulders of the class whose only property is its manual and mental labor power—the wage worker—or of the class who have little land and little effective machinery outside of their labor power—the small traders and small farmers. The ruling minority is steadily becoming useless and parasitic.

A bitter struggle over the division of the products of labor is waged between the exploiting propertied class on the one hand and the exploited propertyless class on the other. In this struggle the wage working class cannot expect adequate relief from any reform of the present order at the hands of the dominant class.

The wage workers are therefore the most determined and irreconcilable antagonists of the ruling class. They suffer most from the curse of class rule. The fact that a few capitalists are permitted to control all the country's industrial resources and social tools for their individual profit, and to make the production of the necessaries of life the object of competitive private enterprise and speculation is at the bottom of all the social evils of our time.

In spite of the organization of trusts, pools and combinations, the capitalists are powerless to regulate production for social ends. Industries are largely conducted in a planless manner. Through periods of feverish activity the strength and health of the workers are mercilessly used up, and during periods of enforced idleness the workers are frequently reduced to starvation.

The climax of this system of production are the regularly recurring industrial depressions and crises which paralyze the nation every fifteen or twenty years.

The capitalist class, in its mad race for profits, is bound to exploit the workers to the very limit of their endurance and to sacrifice their physical, moral and mental welfare to its own insatiable greed. Captialism keeps the masses of workingmen in poverty, destitution, physical exhaustion and ignorance. It drags their wives from their homes to the mill and factory. It snatches their children from the playgrounds and schools and grinds their slender bodies and unformed minds into cold dollars. It disfigures, maims and kills hundreds of thousands of workingmen annually in mines, on railroads and in factories. It drives millions of workers into the ranks of the unemployed and forces large numbers of them into beggary, vagrancy and all forms of crime and vice.

To maintain their rule over their fellow-men, the capitalists must keep in their pay all organs of the public powers, public mind and public conscience. They control the dominant parties and, through them, the elected public officials. They select the executives, bribe the legislature and corrupt the courts of justice. They own and censor the press. They dominate the educational institutions. They own the nation politically and intellectually just as they own it industrially.

The struggle between wage workers and capitalists grows ever fiercer, and has now become the only vital issue before the American people. The wage-working class, therefore, has the most direct interest in abolishing the capitalist system. But in abolishing the present system, the workingmen will free not only their own class, but also all other classes of modern society. The small farmer, who is to-day exploited by large capital more indirectly but not less effectively than is the wage laborer; the small manufacturer and trader, who is engaged in a desperate and losing struggle for economic independence in the face of the allconquering power of concentrated capital; and even the capitalist himself, who is the slave of his wealth rather than its master. The struggle of the working class against the capitalist class, while it is a class struggle, is thus at the same time a struggle for the abolition of all classes and class privileges.

The private ownership of the land and means of production used for exploitation, is the rock upon which class rule is built; political government is its indispensable instrument. The wage-workers cannot be freed from exploitation without conquering the political power and substituting collective for private ownership of the land and means of production nesd for exploitation.

The basis for such transformation is rapidly developing within present capitalist society. The factory system, with its complex machinery and minute division of labor, is rapidly destroying all vestiges of individual production in manufacture. Modern production is already very largely a collective and social process. The great trusts and monopolies which have sprung up in recent years have organized the work and management of the principal industries on a national scale, and have fitted them for collective use and operation.

There can be no absolute private title to land. All private titles, whether called fee simple or otherwise, are and must be subordinate to the public title. The Socialist Party strives to prevent land from being used for the purpose of exploitation and speculation. It demands the collective possession, control of management of land to whatever extent may be necessary to attain that end. It is not opposed to the occupation and possession of land by those using it in a useful and bona fide manner without exploitation.

The Socialist Party is primarily an economic and political movement. It is not concerned with matters of religious belief.

In the struggle for freedom the interests of all modern workers are identical. The struggle is not only national but international. It embraces the world and will be carried to ultimate victory by the united workers of the world.

To unite the workers of the nation and their allies and sympathizers of all other classes to this end, is the mission of the Socialist Party. In this battle for freedom the Socialist Party does not strive to substitute working class rule for capitalist class rule, but by working class victory, to free all humanity from class rule and to realize the international brotherhood of man.

Platform.

The above are the principles of the National Socialist Party platform, adopted in May 1908, and it expresses perfectly the principles and aim of the Socialist Party.

It is, of course, impossible for us the Public Ownership Party of Thief River Falls, to attain a full realization of these ultimate aims in this city. But we nevertheless, pledge ourselves to work for all measures, calculated to strengthen the working class in their fight, for the realization of the co-operative Commonwealth, and to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression.

We pledge ourselves to work for:

First. Honesty, economy and efficency in the administration of the city's affairs.

Second. Eight hour working day, at ten hours pay for all workers engaged directly on municipal work.

Third. The abolition of the contract system on all municipal work.

Fourth. That the city extend the municipal ownership as much as practical and to this end we will work for, to establish publically owned coal and wood yards and also ice house to furnish these necessaries to the citizens at cost. Alsa the preseravtion of all municipal owned buildings, industries and resources.

Fifth. The establishment of a free employment agency, to be conducted by the police department.

Sixth. To give the city a more modern charter, insuring democracy in government, including direct legislation through the initiative and referendum, and the recall of officers by their constituents.

Seventh. In view of the fact that the liquor traffic has been more subjected to state and municipal regulations than any other capitalis institution, but is almost as unregulated as ever, and the clamor is for more regulations, without knowing the simple truth that society can not regulate what it does not own. The Public Ownership Party maintains: That the profits derived from the liquor traffic is the cause of the evils of that traffic, and therefore, the only solution of the problem will be for society to own the distillires, breweries and places where it is disposed off and to sell it to the public at cost, and then society will not be hindered by private interest in the regulations of that traffic. The masses will still have to learn that the escence of regulation is ownership, and when that is acquired, then the temperance work will be crowned with success. But this is a state issue more than a local one. Locally we pledge ourselves to work for the enforcement of the present laws—if such a thing be possible under our high license system.

Eight. Realizing that to preserve the health of the people of Thief River Falls, is of the utmost importance, we pledge ourselves to work for the we pledge ourstlves to work for the establishment of all sanitary measures possible. To this end we will first; do away with the present method of disposing of the refuse of the city and establish more modern methods. Second, to co-operate with the citizens for beautifying the city. Third, to secure efficient hospital accommodation.

Ninth. We pledge every candidate that runs for office on the Public Ownership ticket to sign his resignation from office before election, dated blank and to be placed in the hands of the Public Ownership Party.

Tenth. It is not claimed that by winning an issolated victory in a city like Thief River Falls, we can have the collective ownership of production and distribution, i. e. Socialism. But such a victory would be a step forward, a milestone on the way of human progress.

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

WILL AID RATE CASE APPEAL

Committee of Railroad Commissioners From Seven States Decide to Assist Minnesota.

Briefs in argument of the appeal of the Minnesota rate case decision are to be prepared by a committee of railroad commissioners chosen at the convention at Omaha of commissioners from seven states.

These will be presented to the supreme court when the appeal from Judge Sanborn's decision is argued.

Officials of the state railroad commissions attended from Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Nebraska and New Jersey. The decision to fight the case was unanimous.

The members of the state railroad commissions and the state physical valuation engineers, in conference, adopted the report of a committee on permanent organization and thereby completed the initial steps in the formation of a national body to include these two groups of officials.

The new body will be largely taken from the Mississippi Valley states, although New Jersey is one of the states to be represented.

The report states that the association is to be formed for the purpose of mutual benefit and exchange of information, more specifically to bring about uniform methods of physical valuation and of accounting. No political significance is hinted at.

TRIBUTE TO HINCKLEY DEAD

People of Northern Minnesota paid their tribute to the pioneers of the Minnesota forests when they gathered around the granite shaft in the little cemetery near Hinckley where lie the remains of more than half of those that perished in the fire which devastated that village and much of the adjoining territory seventeen years ago.

The annual memorial exercises took added interest this year on account of the presence of the governor of the state and other high officials, who added their tribute to those who had given their lives while opening up a new country.

CALLS TAFT DICTATORIAL

Clapp Says President Doesn't Know How to Handle People.

"The knowledge that he has no chance of re-election has made President Taft ill tempered, dictatorial and bullheaded."

This is the opinion of Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota, expressed in an interview before his departure from Long Beach, Cal., for Fresno.

"Taft doesn't know how to handle the people," Clapp continued, "and nobody knows that better than Taft himself. This knowledge has made him sour, peevish and fretful."

Two thousand persons heard Clapp defend the initiative, referendum, recall and woman's suffrage.

TWO DIE IN DULUTH BAY

Sewer Workmen Try to Climb Out Over Each Other.

They were George Gurich, aged thirty years, and Steve Nerich, aged twenty-five. A small boy living in the neighborhood was the only eyewitness.

Neither man could swim. One stood on the other's shoulders and tried to get up the muddy bank. He failed and then the other tried. Finally both gave up the struggle and sank.

A new angle was added to the affairs in which Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, has been the stellar light, by the entrance into the affair of the United States authorities, who through the district attorney's office at St. Paul had Dr. Dumas brought before H. A. Simons of Bemidji, United States commissioner for the district, to answer to the charge of conspiracy with Mike Davis and Martin Behan to rob the postoffice at Puposky.

The doctor was accompanied by his attorney, Judge Spooner of Bemidji; his father, Frederick Dumas of Minneapolis, and J. W. Johnson of Cass Lake. Dr. Dumas waived examination and Judge Simons fixed bail at $10,000 for his appearance at the term of the United States district court at Fergus Falls in November. Indian Policeman on White Earth Staff Blows Out His Brains.

Indian Policeman Hutchins of the White Earth agency staff blew off his head with a revolver at a squaw dance held at Big Bend. Several Indians and halfbreeds are under arrest on a charge of selling liquor.

Drunk and almost crazy with whisky Hutchins pulled out his gun and blew out his brains. After his death the dance proceeded. Two other Indian policemen appeared on the scene and Policeman Star Bad Boy seized the whisky and obtained proof against the men who brought the whisky from Detroit.

After spending three days in cruising over the waters of Lake Pepin and St. Louis bay, the Minnesota-Wisconsin boundary commission virtually have agreed to disagree, but the negotiations are not entirely terminated and the boards will meet again Dec. 6 in the Minnesota capitol.

The mayor, the Commercial club and other civic bodies will extend to President Taft an invitation to visit that city during his trip through the West in September. To go there would take him out of his regular itinerary, but it is believed he may accept Duluth's invitation.

M. Beggs, who owns a large farm north of Hallock, has this year harvested a $30,000 crop of timothy. Mr. Beggs came to Minnesota from Colorado two years ago, where he was in the mercantile business. He has made a fortune in a single season.

LITTLE CHANCE OF REVISION

Lindbergh Thinks Congress Cannot Pass Tariff Bills.

There is little probability of any tariff revision by the next session of congress, according to Representative C. A. Lindbergh of Little Falls, who was in St. Paul to attend the reception to Gifford Pinchot. There will be a great deal of other work to do, including all the annual routine work and the appropriation bills to pass, he said. He looks for a report from the tariff board, however, and efforts undoubtedly will be made to pass some revision bills.

When asked regarding the report that he might be a candidate for United States senator next summer Mr. Lindbergh evaded a direct answer by saying that he had not thought about the matter. "I am trying not to think about politics yet for a few months," he said. "Next March will be time enough to think of politics."

WOULD LABEL CANNED MILK

Duluth Pure Food Convention Discusses Question.

Condensed, canned and evaporated milk was discussed by the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, meeting at Duluth. Commissioner G. B. Taylor of Louisiana declared that this product, when improperly labeled, had caused the death of almost countless infants in the South. Mention of embalmed milk precipitated a discussion that lasted throughout nearly the entire afternoon session and resulted in the introduction of a resolution demanding the passage of a law which would require manufacturers of evaporated milk to state on the cans just the amount of water necessary to bring the evaporated milk up to the exact point of whole milk.

Good Money After Bad.

It is a curious fact that many men, level headed enough about other things, seem to lose their wits entirely when they become involved in lawsuits. In one case recently concluded in the German courts a Berlin merchant paid out over $000 to recover the value of a five cent postage stamp. He had written a letter asking for an address and inclosing postage for reply. Failing to get an answer, he sued for the stamp.

The famous Missouri watermelon case was just as trifling and even more disastrous. The seed was planted on one farm, but the vine crept through a crack in the rail fence, and the melon grew on the other side. Both farmers claimed it, and instead of perceiving the humor of the situation they went to law. To add to the puzzling features of the question of ownership there was the further complication in that the fence stood on a county line, whereupon a question of the jurisdiction of the courts came up. The farmers bankrupted themselves without obtaining a decision as to the ownership.—Green Bag.

Liquid Dynamite.

The Mexicans have a native brandy called aguardiente, which is a species of liquid dynamite, as palatable as corrosive sublimate and as full of potential deviltry as an egg is of meat. When you find a Mexican gentleman adorned with a belt full of deadly weapons decorating and deluging his interior with aguardiente it is the part of prudence to retire to a bombproof. There is another tipple, a white, innocent looking fluid called mescal, which is distilled from a cactus of the same name, which has in it all the combined energy, activity and homicidal possibilities of a volcano mixed up with the gable end of a mule. In former days the Apache Indians made a crude distillation of the same stimulant, which they called tis-win, and as a preliminary to a raid among ranches and settlements it was a great success from an Indian point of view.—Boston Herald.

The Crocodiles Dived.

The cunning of wild animals in concealing themselves in moments of danger is well known. A party, spending a week on the Nile, were watching eight or ten crocodiles sunning themselves on the surface of a small lagoon. It was determined to trap these monsters, if possible. The water was breast deep, including about two feet or more of heavy mud. Four nets were tied together, so as to make one long enough to reach across the lagoon, and this was weighted on the bottom. This net was drawn with long poles from each shore, and behind the net came a line of men a yard apart, prodding the mud with poles. The scheme looked like an admirable one, but the crocodiles sleepily dived, and that was the last seen of them. The water was dragged backward and forward, but they had burrowed so deeply in the mud that not one could be found.

A Political Genius.

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, as he had not managed to make himself a power in congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said, "You live near the center of the United States, don't you?" "Yes." "Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district?" The congressman introduced the bill, and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next congress, and, although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee, his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes in color like a marine chameleon. It would appear, from studies of this creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissue of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

Corrected Him.

A reporter was once interviewing Thomas A. Edison.

"And you, sir," he said to the inventor, "made the first talking machine?"

"No," Mr. Edison replied, "the first one was made long before my time—out of a rib."

Three Not of a Kind.

Sir Henry Maine's famous political diagnosis is worth quoting. The king of England reigns, but does not govern. The president of the United States governs, but does not reign. The president of France neither reigns nor governs.—Boston Herald.

Usual Reason.

"He used to be a straight enough young chap. What made him get crooked?"

"Trying to make both ends meet, I believe."—Toledo Blade.

His Strong Face.

"Bilkvin's is a strong face or I'm no judge of physiognomy."

"It ought to be. He and his whole family are living on it."—Buffalo Courier.

Obedience is not truly performed by the body of him whose heart is dissatisfied.—Saadi.

GOOD ROADS ESSENTIAL, SAY TWO GOVERNORS.

Patrol System and National Legislation Favored by Bass and Crothers.

Governor Bass of New Hampshire is taking a verbal interest in road improvement throughout that state and in a recent interview expressed himself as being strongly in favor of the improvement and extension of the New Hampshire highways. This is the first time that Governor Bass has come out so forcibly in favor of better roads. In addition, the governor also said that he favored a road commission which shall not change under different administrations.

GOVERNOR BASS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

"Another feature that should be adopted," said Governor Bass, "is the system of patrols. By this I mean that all the roads should be divided into sections of five miles and each section placed in charge of a competent man, who will see that it is kept in good condition."

"I not only indorse national legislation for good roads," says Governor Austin L. Crothers of Maryland, "but I believe that before the present Democratic congress adjourns it should enact laws giving most liberal financial and moral support that will result in the building of four great national highways from ocean to ocean and from the Canadian line to the gulf of Mexico and the Mexican borders.

"Every rural route should be made a post road or branch to the national highways and thus not only save the federal government millions of money in the quick and safe delivery of the mails, but the immediate and cheap transportation of our farm products to the railroad stations. To accomplish this the unemployed labor in America could be utilized and clean, respectable employment given millions of men.

"'Government aid in public highways improvement' today overshadows any and all other measures before congress. The city man and the citizen of the country should and will demand it."

A GOOD ROADS "CRANK."

Highway Bill Passed Through Efforts of Minnesota Enthusiast.

The legislature of Minnesota has passed a road law that places that rocky, icebound state far in the van of the progressive states of the union, and this great forward step is the direct result of the labor of Robert C. Dunn, a fighting Irishman, familiarly known throughout the state as "Baldheaded Bob." He is a character of the unique and unusual sort, and because of his undying devotion to the good roads idea the following appreciation of him, which appeared recently in a Minnesota paper, is here given:

Robert C. Dunn's good roads bill has passed without opposition. If this bill becomes a law, and there is every prospect that it will, "Baldheaded Bob" will have accomplished more to establish himself as a public benefactor for all time to come than he would have had he been fortunate enough to have been elected governor for life and served out his full term.

If this measure is enacted Minnesota will have put herself on record as the first state to adopt a sensible, feasible system of establishing permanent and uniform highways within her borders.

The bill had many other able, earnest advocates and supporters, but to Bob must be accorded the lion's share of credit for this achievement.

Bob began talking good roads before he left the "old sod," and he has been talking them ever since, in season and out of season, in three different languages, Irish, lumberjack and profanity. He talked good roads when he had to talk to himself, for he could get nobody to listen to him. He has worked for good roads in the daytime and dreamed about them through all the night long, and now that he has achieved the desire of his heart surely no one will begrudge the grizzly, grouchy old warrior his hour of triumph.

BRICK FOR WEIGHT.

Makes Good Road Material For Heavy Traffic.

Erie county is the most important in the state in the matter of road maintenance, according to H. K. Bishop, first deputy highway commissioner. Westchester county, with its roads leading into New York, is the next, but it does not concern the commission so much because the city takes care of the main roads. Erie county has nearly 200 miles of state roads, a considerable portion of which have been paved with brick. Mr. Bishop considers that brick paving is peculiarly adapted to the roads about Buffalo because of the heavy traffic. While the initial cost is greater than macadam or asphalt macadam, Mr. Bishop believes it will be economical in the long run. Macadam roads, he explains, will stand up well under light usage, but it is another proposition where heavy wagon and automobile traffic is concerned. The automobiles alone would not wear macadam greatly. In fact, by applying an oil coating they tend to pack the road, but when the wheels of wagons and the calks of horses' shoes loosen the covering the auto traffic tends to whip off the surface.

The kind of green goods, shell game, blue sky real estate propositions that folks are getting caught on most every day leads to the very trite observation that a person should have graduated from diapers and a nursing bottle before undertaking an investment of thousands of dollars in new country, the only knowledge of which has been obtained through the alluring descriptions of real estate agents. This kind of sucker seems to be thicker than spatter and is born and caught every day.

The evolutionary theory of animal development which holds that the wren harks back to the same ancestor as the eagle, a mouse the same as a monkey, seems strangely negatived in the sterility of the hybrid crosses of even species that are closely allied—e. g., the jack and mare, the buffalo and domestic cow, the Canada and tame goose. The offspring of these unions are barren, but why the most distinguished evolutionists cannot tell. Nature has put up her finger and said, "Thus far shalt thou go, but no farther."

The tremendous force of a lightning bolt is shown in many instances which are of common occurrence. Perhaps in no way is this power more effectively shown than when a bolt shatters a large tree. This happened a short time ago during a storm which passed over the section in which the writer lives. The lightning struck a huge cottonwood tree and knocked it to splinters. One of these, more than four feet long and as big as one's wrist, was hurled a distance of twelve rods from the front of one farm home across the road and into the yard of a neighbor.

A lot of folks of both genders who show good sense in most lines seem to be lacking in it when they hitch a horse to a shade tree. Time and again we have seen such trees much marred or mutilated as a result of this type of thoughtlessness.

The drought has been very disastrous from the standpoint of crop production, but it is well to look on the other side and realize that not in a dozen years have conditions been so favorable for destroying weeds of all kinds. The benefit of this condition will continue for several years.

If the rains which have been falling copiously in northern central states for the past two weeks continue until Nov. 1 wild ducks will be quacking on many and erstwhile pond which the owner probably was congratulating himself he would not even have to tile drain to get it to produce a bumper crop of flax or corn.

While the pure paint and varnish laws passed in a number of states have resulted in increasing the price of these commodities somewhat, one has the satisfaction of knowing when he buys them that he is getting what he pays for. Besides this should be taken into account the fact that paints mixed with good oil are far more durable than those adulterated.

It is interesting to note the efforts of both corn and potatoes just now to recuperate from the effects of a long continued drought and reproduce themselves. Stalks of corn with lower leaves fired are putting out new silks and pathetic tassels, while potato vines that it did not seem possible could survive have been feathered out at their tips with new green shoots.

Entered at the postoffice at Thief River Falls, Minn., as second class matter.

The bad weather is just as bad for the threshers as it is for the state fair.

With the hunting season and the state fair both coming at the same time, the city is rather deserted this week.

On another page the NEWS publishes the platform adopted by the local Socialist organization for the coming campaign, not because we believe in that doctrine, but because we believe the public has the right to know all the issues in a campaign and judge for itself.

President Taft in his tour of the northwest this month has a rather peculiar route marked out. Leaving the Pacific Coast he proceeds east to Billings, Montana, where instead of continuing through North Dakota and Northern Minnesota he turns south and passing through South Dakota and southern Minnesota makes a short stop at the Twin Cities and then leaves for home. When the first announcement of his trip was made it was said that the President would invade the northwest where the farmers are opposed to reciprocity and explain the benefits that would come to them under it. In North Dakota and the Red River Valley, the raisers of No. 1 Northern hard wheat were waiting to hear why the price of wheat is lower than last year under approximately the same conditions, but apparently Mr. Taft is not going to take the trouble to visit them personally. Wheat was the chief bone of contention in the debate on reciprocity and when the time comes to explain the measure to the people directly concerned with its workings, the President prefers talking to the fruit growers and lumber men of the coast, to the miners of Montana, to the corn growers of South Dakota and to the dairymen of southern Minnesota rather than to the farmers who raise the best quality of hard wheat in the world.

Rains Delay Threshing.

The anxiety to finish threshing operations was emphasized Sunday when practically every machine in this section of the county was seen running full blast, and if there were any tinges of conscience they were all quieted Monday when a steady downpour started which will delay threshing till today at least and longer if the weather is not bright with a breeze.

The threshing returns continue very satisfactory. Very little wheat is going below 16 bushels and a great deal is averaging around 20 bushels per acre, while extra fine fields run up to 24 and as high as 28 bushels per acre.

Oats are also an immense crop. The oats and barley both bring more money than wheat, this being the first time in the history of the valley that barley has sold for more per bushel than wheat.

However, some good threshing weather is badly needed. There has not been a stretch of more than three days without rain thus far since harvest and not over one-fourth of the threshing is done, and hardly that much.

School Notes.

The enrollment on Tuesday was much larger than that of one year ago. Several of the rooms are crowded and an additional teacher for the seventh grades has been found necessary and will be secured this week. In the grades the enrollment consists practically of Thief River Falls children. The three beginning rooms remind one forcibly of the story of the old woman in a shoe. Those who predicted a falling away of population on the closing of a local industry last spring would have their views badly shattered were they to pay a visit to the school rooms this week.

Mrs. Will Korstad is substituting for Miss Anna Connelly for a few weeks. It is expected that Miss Connelly will soon have recovered from the serious accident which befell her last Sunday.

Miss Thompson of the Washington building was unable to be present for work this week on account of the dangerous illness of a brother. Miss Esther Wilson has charge of her room for a few days.

The high school courses of study have been enlarged and remodeled to meet the requirements of the Putnam act and the state high school board. Among other changes, Norwegian has been added to the curriculum. A thorough study and knowledge of this language is certainly as cultural useful and practical to the youth of the Northwest as are German and Latin, both of which occupy prominent places on every high school course. The state university regards all languages as of equal importance from a cultural standpoint.

Students failing to enroll on the opening of school cannot expect to make satisfactory progress or to maintain their places in their grades and classes. Those who enter late must take their own chances of promotion. It is also a mistake to think that school work does not begin in earnest for a few days. On Tuesday, opening day, books were assigned and why the children cannot recite as well on Wednesday as on a day a month hence is hard to undertand. The school is organized for work immediately on opening.

The high school courses of study will be published in the NEWS next week.

Twice as many persons offered to board and room the teachers this year as on any former year. All of the instructors are now comfortably settled and have taken hold of the work in a commendable spirit.

Revenue Fund at Low Ebb.

Seldom in the history of the state has the balance been so low in the revenue fund. At the close of the month's business Thursday only $153,304.32 was in the fund, and this condition will necessitate calling in of a major portion of the $3,090,589.00, which the state has on deposit in the various banks of the state.

It is believed the call for funds will commence about September 18. Usually the state does not call in these funds until late in October.

Will Exhibit at State Fair.

Though Pennington County will have no official exhibit at the state fair, it will not be entirely unrepresented. D. P. O'Neill left for Minneapolis last week, taking with him some samples of the grain raised here and other products. Pamphlets describing the resources of the county will also be distributed.

Civil Service Exams.

The government will hold civil service examinations this fall for a number of widely different positions including engineers, draftsmen, teachers, stenographers etc. The demand for male stenographers is said to be greatly in excess of the supply. Fuller information may be secured at the local postoffice or from the Board of Civil Service Examiners at St. Paul.

REDS' TIMBER TO BE CUT

Government Will Sell 7,500,000 Feet of Red Lake Timber.

Will Be Sold this Fall and Cut in Thief River Falls Saw Mill

The letter below which was recently received by Congressman Steenerson, explains itself in regard to the sale of Red Lake timber.

The first part of last July the Indians held a council at the reservation and asked the government to sell their dead, down and fire damaged timber. Though there is probably fifty million feet of this timber the government has authorized the sale of only seven and a half million feet at present. When sold this timber will of course be cut in the Thief River saw mill. The letter follows:

Department Of The Interior
Office of Indian Affairs
Washington, Aug. 31st, 1911.

Hon. Halvor Steenerson,
House of Representatives,
Sir:—

Referring again to your letter of August 17, 1911, entitled "Sale of Red Lake Timber", inclosing a petition signed by certain chiefs and headmen of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians, Minnesota requesting the sale of timber from their tribal lands, I have the honor to inform you that under authority granted by the President on Aug. 22, 1911, the Department on August 28, 1911, approved Regulations for the sale of approximately 7,500,000 feet of dead and fire damaged timber of the Red Lake Reservation.

Arrangements have been made for the advertisement of this timber, sealed bids therefor to be received by the Superintendent of the Red Lake Indian Reservation School up to 12 o'clock noon of November 9, 1911. The minimum price fixed on the timber is $6 per thousand feet for norway pine and $8 per thousand feet for white pine.

Respectfully,
(Signed) R. G. VALENTINE
Commissioner.

Roughage Essential to Stock.

Grain should be fed with roughage, as then it goes into the first stomach, and then will be rechewed. If the grain is eaten alone, it is apt to the third stomach and to miss the rechewing. To make sure that the feed is thoroughly chewed feed it with roughage. The best way is to cut hay or straw, mix the grain feed with it; then it will go the whole grinding process.

We once knew a home so poor that the wife couldn't afford a decent gingham dress or the soap with which to wash it, yet there were kept on the place (and fed) four old dogs and seven pups, on which the dog taxes amounted to from $12 to $14. Queer financiering this.

Some one has said that women are far more successful than men in breaking heifers to milk. If this be so it may be due to the fact that they haven't words at command to give their feelings so vehement expression, and as a result the bovine does not divine their real state of mind.

We know of two farmers who want to tile, but the neighbor below them is an agricultural standpatter and won't co-operate. They have decided to tile to his line and let the water go where it will. He will be converted by the time their drainage systems are in operation when the next wet season rolls around.

Individuals in many droves of hogs continue as runts and sometimes die from an infestation of their interior anatomy with the long white worm. There are a number of worm killers which if given in time will put the worms out of business. Suspicious cases should be looked into and the remedy applied as soon as possible.

While nature seems to have endowed birds with an instinct which guards them against nesting too late in the season, the writer remembers several years ago finding a nest of little waxwings in pinfeathers in the orchard late in October after the apples were harvested. If these little chaps did not get chilled in the weeks following for lack of proper clothing we miss our guess.

The much debated question of how to keep the boy on the farm may be boiled down to this: The boy can be kept on the farm when life there is so arranged that it will arouse his interest and give impetus to his energies and when the reward which he may reasonably expect for his labor is commensurate with that which he would get in other lines of work. Discussion of the problem which does not take into account these general truths is beside the question and largely futile.

Laws which have been passed in a number of states enable farm owners to have their farm name copyrighted by the payment of a dollar fee. Too many go on the principle that it is better not to name the farm until certain improvements and cleaning up have been done. The writer holds it a better plan to put the name of the farm on a neat signboard at the front of the premises. Then if the condition of the premises is not on a par with the dignity of the name chosen there is a constant incentive to make it so.

Now and then one runs across a brother or sister whose name is found on the church book, but whose religion does not seem to safeguard either against the temptation involved in the simple transaction of the sale of a quart of milk. In one case of this kind not long ago, in which the writer's family was a victim, it seemed that the morning when the milk was most innocent of butter fat a posy (two roses and three zenias) tied with a white string used to be placed beside the pail of milk when it was delivered.

The secret of real contentment lies not in having more money, better clothes, a bigger house or a later model of automobile than one's neighbor, but rather in making much of the blessings with which any home may be endowed if its inmates so will—love, kindliness, sympathy, usefulness, temperate living, largeness and breadth of view, appreciation of and gratitude for the splendid common things, fresh air, blue sky, the pink of dawn, the gold of sunset, for flowers, for trees, for grass, for birds. These latter, after all, are the only things really worth while.

Recent investigations seem to have proved that the owl, skunk and badger are, on the whole, friends rather than enemies of the farmer and gardener. And now comes a writer putting up a pretty strong plea for the crow, based on recent investigations by the biological survey at Washington. The contents of the stomachs of 1,000 crows killed during every month in the year were carefully examined. While it was demonstrated that the crow dug up corn, killed young chickens and raided hens' nests, it was found that the part of the corn destroyed while growing formed only 3 per cent of the total and that the damage to chickens and eggs was small compared to service rendered in destroying mice and many harmful insects.

There is money to be made in growing ginseng and mushrooms, but just as much can be made with no more work and less risk by growing onions, potatoes or tomatoes. With clean straw worth from $6 to $8 per ton, many a farmer might with profit carry out the English practice of putting a small boy and a pony on the stack as the straw comes from the machine and having him tramp it down until the stack is two-thirds built. On settling such stack will have a solid center and sloping sides, which will shed the rain. Such stack properly topped out and sides raked down will keep two years in better condition than the average, loosely built stack will two months. And this year, if ever, there will be good money in taking this extra precaution.

FILLING THE SILO.

Many a farmer will be confronted in the course of a few weeks with the job of filling the silo for the first time. For such a few suggestions taken from an Iowa bulletin which gives the silo experience of dairymen and feeders in different parts of the country will be timely. As to the proper time for cutting corn for the silo there seems to be quite general agreement that it is ready to cut when it would be ready to shock—that is, when the kernels are dented and when the outer husks and lower leaves are turning brown. While the length into which the corn should be cut vary with different users, from one-half to three-fourths of an inch gives a finer silage which can be packed into the silo more closely, in which there is less waste in feeding and which increases the capacity of the silo considerably. Slow and rapid filling have points in their favor, but the latter method is followed by a majority, as it gives a more uniform quality of silage, obviates the necessity of putting up corn that is too green or too dry and is also the more economical way. With rapid filling a second filling is usually necessary about ten days after the first silage has been put in. The more uniformly and thoroughly the silage is packed down as it is put in the better the quality and the longer it will keep. In distributing the silage the outer edge should be kept about two feet higher than the center and kept especially well packed. The work of tamping may be done by foot, but cement tampers give even better results. This tends to make the silo more completely air tight and reduces loss from mold to a minimum. In the case of wooden silos any opening that would let air into the silage should be filled with soft clay. In case the corn used is overmature and dry the silage should be moistened as it is run in. In topping off the silo some use chaff or cut straw; others soak the top with water and seed with oats, which sprout and form a nearly air tight mat. The cost of filling the silo varies with different outfits from 40 cents to $1 per ton—that is, this is the total cost from the standing corn in field to the shredded product packed in the silo. The larger the outfit the lower the cost of filling, as a rule. The process of fermentation which converts the green corn into silage requires about ten days. If not used at once the top, which is likely to become moldy, should be removed and used as manure, as the feeding of it is often accompanied with serious results.

HOMESTEADING IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

Not with a view to creating prejudice against the vast country lying between meridian 100 and the Rocky mountains, but simply as a warning to some who have made entry on homesteads in the semiarid country and who have had no experience with dry farming methods, we would bring two or three things to their attention which may save them a lot of grief in the end. In the country referred to, where the annual rainfall is less than sixteen or eighteen inches per year, it is only practicable to raise a crop every other year, the land having to lie fallow each alternate season in order that enough moisture may be stored up to insure a crop the following year. This means that one must have considerable ready cash before starting out in such a dry country, not only for the purchase of necessary equipment for the working of a half section or more of land (it does not pay to work less than this), but a surplus to tide one over seasons when nothing is produced. It is well to remember, too, that in years of extreme drought, such as the last two have been, practically nothing can be produced. In one instance the writer knows of a homesteader who went to the country referred to has had just one decent paying crop in eleven years. A little was produced in three or four other seasons, but hardly enough to furnish forage for the animals which had to be kept on the farm. This may be an extreme experience, but it is cited as showing what some men run up against when they cast their lot in the semiarid country.

THE TORRENS TITLE SYSTEM.

If there is any one need more than another that is apparent in the realm of civil procedure it is that of a simpler system of transferring title to real estate. In numerous cases this matter of giving a clear title is a veritable bugbear, not only from the standpoint of a possibility that some flaw will be found in it, but also in the matter of securing an abstract of title. Cases are not infrequent in which such transcript of the pedigree of real estate will run from $50 to $200. It is apparent that if the welfare of land holders were considered a new system would shortly be adopted, but the system so generally in vogue gives a fat revenue for lawyers and abstractors; hence it is kept up. The Torrens title system lately adopted in Canada gives relief from the expense and red tape of the American method. On the transfer of a parcel of land the seller surrenders to the purchaser his title. This is sent to the government department having charge of land records, together with a nominal fee. Thereupon there is made out and sent to the buyer of the land a title thereto, which, though not larger than half a sheet of note paper, is evidence of absolute ownership, safeguarding the owner against scheming lawyers, clerical errors and pusillanimous technicalities of one kind and another.

... [illegible] the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hopping out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the rump strap or monkeyed with the tug or bridle a bit and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and, like others, we have sat for a good half hour, with the thermometer registering 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

While the pure paint and varnish laws passed in a number of states have resulted in increasing the price of these commodities somewhat, one has the satisfaction of knowing when he buys them that he is getting what he pays for. Besides this should be taken into account the fact that paints mixed with good oil are far more durable than those adulterated.

The kind of green goods, shell game, blue-sky real estate propositions that folks are getting caught on most every day leads to the very trite observation that a person should have graduated from diapers and a nursing bottle before undertaking an investment of thousands of dollars in new country, the only knowledge of which has been obtained through the alluring descriptions of real estate agents. This kind of sucker seems to be thicker than spatter and is born and caught every day.

The evolutionary theory of animal development which holds that the wren harks back to the same ancestor as the eagle, a mouse the same as a monkey, seems strangely negatived in the sterility of the hybrid crosses of even species that are closely allied—e. g., the jack and mare, the buffalo and domestic cow, the Canada and tame goose. The offspring of these unions are barren, but why the most distinguished evolutionists cannot tell. Nature has put up her finger and said, "Thus far shalt thou go, but no farther."

The tremendous force of a lightning bolt is shown in many instances which are of common occurrence. Perhaps in no way is this power more effectively shown than when a bolt shatters a large tree. This happened a short time ago during a storm which passed over the section in which the writer lives. The lightning struck a huge cottonwood tree and knocked it to splinters. One of these, more than four feet long and as big as one's wrist, was hurled a distance of twelve rods from the front of one farm home across the road and into the yard of a neighbor.

The beneficial effects coming from putting in extensive intercounty drainage systems in a number of sections of Minnesota and Iowa are now fairly apparent. Country that previously would grow practically nothing in wet seasons but wild hay are this year covered with bumper crops of corn or have produced paying crops of wheat, oats or flax. This condition has been hastened by two dry seasons, but in seasons of normal rainfall the improvement in the condition of the soil as a result of proper drainage will be very noticeable. It has taken a whole lot of persuasion and some litigation to get a few farmers to look at this drainage proposition in the right light, but after the next rainy season they stay converted.

The drought has been very disastrous from the standpoint of crop production, but it is well to look on the other side and realize that not in a dozen years have conditions been so favorable for destroying weeds of all kinds. The benefit of this condition will continue for several years.

A Political Genius.

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, as he had not managed to make himself a power in congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said, "You live near the center of the United States, don't you?" "Yes." "Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district?" The congressman introduced the bill, and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next congress, and, although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee, his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes to color like a marine chameleon. It would appear, from studies of this creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissue of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Extremes of Temperature.

Science reasons that the lowest temperatures at the earth's surface are not found directly at the poles, but at some distance to the south of the north pole and to the north of the south pole. Likewise the greatest degree of heat is not, as might be supposed, to be found at the equator, but prevails at some distance to the north and to the south of that imaginary line. The coldest place on the earth's surface of which there is authentic record is in Siberia. The lowest temperature ever recorded in the open air was 90 degrees below zero F. at Werchajansk, central Siberia, on Jan. 15, 1885. The highest temperature of which there is an authentic record is 124 degrees above zero F. in Algeria, northern Africa, on July 17, 1879. These places of extreme heat and extreme cold give a range of temperature covering the whole inhabited world of 214 degrees, or two degrees more than from zero to the boiling point.

Don't Breathe Lazily.

"If you are consumptive, if you think you are drifting into consumption, sing!" said a medical man.

"Of course singing alone will not save you from consumption or cure you. Besides singing you must have plenty of fresh air and good food. And, speaking of fresh air, I must say that not one person in a hundred knows how to inhale it. People seldom breathe deeply enough. They seldom properly ventilate their lung cavities, which resemble stuffy, insanitary apartments, where all germs thrive undisturbed. Acquire the habit of taking the big, deep breath which is a primary requisite for any kind of singing, bad or good, and the physical joy derived from it will never allow you to relapse into lazy breathing. Furthermore, the mere effort of singing compels the singer to stand straight and to throw out the chest, a good corrective for the bad physical habits of weak chested people."

Killed by a Shout.

A joyful shout thoughtlessly given by an Italian smuggler on having eluded the customs guards on the Swiss frontier was the cause of his six companions being killed by an avalanche. The party, coming from the Grisons, had, with a thousand precautions, successfully negotiated the Forcola pass on the Swiss-Italian border. Five of the men were loaded with valuable contraband goods, and two acted as guides and scouts. When they were all safely on Italian soil one of the guides named Maretoli gave vent to a joyful yodel. In the still air the least sound causes a vibration which may set enormous masses of snow moving. This is what occurred here. A quarter of a million tons of snow detached itself from the mountain side and came thundering down upon the party, who were swept in an instant into an abyss. Maretoli alone was able to extricate himself.

Checkmate!

In these days, when various schemes are being suggested by which the loser of personal property may recover it without offering an extreme reward, it is interesting to note two advertisements which appeared last summer in a German paper. In these advertisements nothing so bald as a suggestion of reward appeared. They seem merely to present two wits fencing, and the reader forgets the matter at stake:

Berlin, Aug. 5.—The gentleman who found a purse, valuable beyond explanation, in the Blumenstrasse, is requested graciously to forward it to the address of the loser, as he is recognized.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—The recognized gentleman who found a purse, valuable beyond explanation, begs that the loser will call at his house at the earliest convenient hour.

The Green Kind.

A naval officer who has seen considerable service in South American waters once brought home two parrots, one of which he gave to the housemaid and the other to the cook.

For a long time there ensued animated discussions as to the merits of their respective birds. Finally the housemaid said:

"Your parrot may be a better talker than mine, though I don't believe it." Then, with an air of presenting the final clinching argument in her favor, she added, "Besides, you'll have to admit that mine has the most beautiful foliage."—Lippincott's.

Honored the Old Men.

A unique festival occurred in Paris in 1797 in honor of the old men. The idea was the encouragement of the family circle, and the old man who was a happy grandfather was held up to the younger generations to follow in his footsteps. "A gracious Hebe crowned their white locks with garlands of roses, while the soldiers of France presented arms in their honor."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "the only trouble about the Ten Commandments arises from the amendments people try to tack to them."—Washington Star.

Secret Baseball Signals.

"Perhaps you never realized that there is an exact science in coaching and signaling," says Hugh S. Fullerton, writing on the secret tricks of baseball coaching in the American Magazine; "that the two men out there near first and third bases, who seem to be making fools of themselves or trying to annoy the majestic man in blue serge, are the wigwag men signaling to runners or batters just what the general sitting on the bench wants them to try to do. Sometimes the general is on the lines himself, looking just as foolish as the wigwag men or more so, but somewhere, hidden in his meaningless or hackneyed phrases or his wild gestures, there is a meaning. He is telling the batter not to hit the next ball or to bunt it or informing him that the next will be a straight fast ball and at the same time informing the base runner that the batter intends to hit and that he must start at top speed when the pitcher starts to wind up."

Salt Water Bathing.

Dr. Copeman of Brighton, England, writing in the Practitioner, London, gives some advice on sea bathing. "The best time to bathe is about two hours after breakfast, the period of greatest vital activity," says Dr. Copeman. "The one time which must be avoided by all is after a full meal. During the process of digestion the vessels of the internal organs are already engorged with blood, and the shock of the cold water is apt to produce a very dangerous condition of congestion, the least of many penalties that may accrue being an acute attack of indigestion. With many keen bathers it is an article of faith to bathe before breakfast. But business men, after months of unremitting toil, those who are below par or who are getting on in years, should avoid taxing their system by bathing at such a time. Even the most robust would be wise to partake of a cup of hot milk before leaving the house."

Salt.

Salt production is about the oldest industry in the world. In Italy, the cradle of the salt industry, it has been manufactured commercially for 2,500 years. Salt is so necessary to existence that in some parts of the world tribes will sell the members of their families in exchange for salt. Salt has been the cause of wars, and so important has it always been considered that in some places the passing of salt is established as a token of friendship, and women throw salt on a visitor as a friendly greeting. In some countries salt is so scarce that it is obtained through the ashes of grasses and a species of palm and other plants. While salt is produced in almost every country in the world, it is stated that nowhere can salt of such purity be obtained at anything like the cost for mining as in Louisiana.—Manufacturers' Record.

A Real Gas Plant.

There are two varieties of gas plant. One is a manufacturing establishment where coal is converted into gas for illuminating and heating purposes. The other variety is a real growing plant called the fraxinella. Few know why the fraxinella is called the "gas plant." This is because at certain times it releases a volatile oil that actually ignites if allowed to come in contact with a lighted match. The fraxinella is also noted for its fragrance and longevity if not disturbed. One plant in a New England garden is doing its best to outlive a third generation, and elsewhere a clump is still flourishing after no less than thirty-seven years on a grave—one of the most difficult of places for a perennial to keep up a long struggle for existence, let alone a normal life.—New York World.

Gifted.

"I don't know what I'm ever going to make of that son of mine," complained a prominent Cleveland business man the other day. The old chap is self made, a graduate of the university of hard knocks and all that, and it naturally grieves him to have a son who is not aggressive.

"Maybe your son hasn't found himself yet," we consoled. "Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted! I should say he is! He ain't got a darned thing that wasn't given to him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Big William Penn.

The statue of William Penn at the city hall in Philadelphia weighs thirty tons and is thirty-seven feet high. Some other dimensions are: Hat rim, twenty-three feet in circumference; nose, thirteen inches long; eyes, twelve inches long and four inches wide; hair, four feet long; arms, twelve feet six inches long; waist, twenty-four feet in circumference; legs, from ankle to knee, ten feet; calf, eight feet eight inches in circumference.

Beats a Good Wife.

A. STENSETH.

It is a far cry from the Chinese wheatfield of two or three acres, hand planted and hand hoed, to the 1,000 acre grain ranch in the Dakotas and Montana, where thirty acres a day are plowed with a gas or steam tractor hooked on to eight or ten plows and where all subsequent operations, including disking, seeding, reaping and thrashing, are done by the same power and on a like scale.

In certain districts of England the guinea pig is being put to a very practical use as an exterminator of weeds on private lawns and golf grounds. The area to be cleared is surrounded with low wire fencing and the little fellows turned in. They attack the dandelion, plantain and daisy in the order named, and, while they keep the grass nibbled close, they do not kill it. Here would seem to be a cheap substitute for a lawn mower and elbow grease.

The secret of digging out from an indebtedness incurred in the purchase of a farm, if secret there be, consists in a complete concentration of both energy and funds on the one object in view. This means that the farmer who would quit paying interest at the earliest possible moment should not get balled up with a steam thrashing outfit or attempt to handle an automobile agency. Either one is enough to dissipate the energies of the best man that ever lived.

The beneficial effects coming from putting in extensive intercounty drainage systems in a number of sections of Minnesota and Iowa are now fairly apparent. Country that previously would grow practically nothing in wet seasons but wild hay are this year covered with bumper crops of corn or have produced paying crops of wheat, oats or flax. It has taken a whole lot of persuasion and some litigation to get a few farmers to look at this drainage proposition in the right light, but after the next rainy season they stay converted.

TEACHING GOOD ROADS LESSONS

Farmers In Missouri Are Learning at School.

ENGINEER INSTRUCTS THEM.

Novel Method of Trying to Keep Roads in Good Condition by Telling People How to Do It Given a Successful Trial at Columbia, Mo.—Fifty Farmers Attend First Day.

At Columbia, Mo., P. S. Quinn, highway engineer of Boone county, has organized a class in road building. At the first meeting of the class more than fifty farmers, all dressed in their working clothes, assembled in the circuit court room in the county courthouse and sat in a semicircle around the judge's desk. On the bench was Mr. Quinn, acting as professor in the new branch of school instruction. The pupils were the newly elected road overseers.

"Boone county is going to have better roads in the future," was Mr. Quinn's first announcement, "and if you men are to be responsible for the condition of these roads then you must know something about road building yourselves. That's why I have organized this class, and if you show yourselves apt pupils there should be no more complaint about the condition of the highways here."

Quinn believes that such a school is necessary if the county is to have good roads. Much of the time of the first session of the class was devoted to acquainting the overseers with the provisions of the road laws. "Promptness" was the keynote of his instructions.

"Ditch your roads right away," he said. "Remove everything from the roads and ditches in spite of what the landowners say; also make the landowners keep their hedges trimmed."

He made it plain to the overseers that they had authority and that he wanted them to make use of it. The men were interested too. Some of them had had trouble with the landowners, and they wanted to know what to do.

"Tell me how to make a single man work on the roads," one suggested.

"Make him do it; make him do it," Quinn replied. "It's like getting blood from a turnip, but make him do it."

"What would you do when you get your roads in good condition and all of your neighbors travel on it in preference to some other and cut it all to pieces?" was the question of another.

"How can you make the rich man do any work?" came from a third man.

Hundreds of similar questions were discussed by the overseers and Quinn, all with a view of solving the question of how to improve the country roads. There were instructions as to the use of teams and when to do the work.

Other sessions of the class in road building have been held since the first lesson.

GOOD ROADS SOON IF—

Each State Spends $4,000,000 For the Improvement of Highways.

Between half a billion and a billion dollars would be saved annually in the United States if every state would improve its main highways to the highest point of efficiency.

Calculations just made by the United States office of public roads show that to effect this enormous saving throughout the country it will be necessary to improve only about 20 per cent of the roads.

There are now about 2,150,000 miles of road in the United States. Two hundred thousand miles, or about 9 per cent, are improved in some manner. To bring the number of miles up to 20 per cent it will be necessary to improve 250,000 more miles. While this task may seem stupendous, it is estimated that it can be accomplished by a probable average expenditure of $7,000 a mile, or $1,750,000,000 for a fairly complete system. Were each state to put $4,000,000 into the improvement of its roads the work could be accomplished in a very short time.

Importance of Good Roads.

The salvation and uplift of rural America depend more upon the building of good roads than upon any one other thing. The farmer and the people of the small towns and villages do not understand this now, wherefore they need to be educated to the fact that money spent for good roads is not money thrown away, whereas money spent for makeshift improvements is worse than thrown away. They must be taught that good roads are not a luxury, but a necessity, and that the cost of their building is not extravagance begotten of the automobile, but simply a wise investment, on the part of every community everywhere, without regard to what sort of vehicle is favored by those who travel over the roads.—Motor Print.

A Big Difference.

The localities in the state where good roads have been built are becoming richer, more prosperous and more thickly settled, while those which do not possess transportation advantages are either at a standstill or are becoming poorer and more sparsely settled.—Wichita Falls (Tex.) Times.

"THE KING'S HAT" IS REBUILT

Landmark Near Stockholm Had Been Destroyed by Vandals—Norwegian Workingmen Aiding Their Unemployed Brethren to Leave the Country—Copenhagen Journalist Uses a Novel Method of Convincing Authorities That the National Gallery Is Inadequately Protected.

SWEDEN.

"Kungshatt"—"The King's Hat"—has again been erected. There are perhaps few Swedish people in any section of the globe that have not at some time or other heard of "Kungshatt." It was erected about a mile from Stockholm, on a little island in the Malaren, some twenty-five years ago and every tourist steamer and all launches that passed by this place could always see "The King's Hat" loom up on a prominent cliff. But a few months ago some foolish young men on mischief bent went to work and tore down the hat, much to the chagrin and disappointment of all Stockholmians and other Swedes, who were proud of their country every time they passed it. "Kungshatt" is the name of a saga, rather a poem so entitled, which tells of a brave Swedish king, who, when he was pursued by the Danes, jumped horse and all into the Malaren and swam to the other side. So says the contents of the poem, at any rate, and because the famous poet, K. A. Nicander, wrote it, a patriotic Stockholmian again caused a hat of copper to be erected, and it has been so substantially built that it will be difficult for any mischievous boys to pull it down from now on.

The Paris paper Excelsior has been conducting an interesting vote in which it asked its 54 000 subscribers which city in the world they would choose to live in. Out of the votes cast Naples received the largest number, it being the choice of not less than 8,000 Parisians. Next followed Venice, with 7,000, Brussels 5,000, then Geneva, Algiers, Monte Carlo, Rome, London, San Remo, Vienna and Florence. Of Northern European cities St. Petersburg received seventy votes, Copenhagen just as many and Christiania fifteen. But Stockholm—often called the "Paris of the North," did not receive a single vote. This seems doubly peculiar since so many hundreds of French tourists visit the Swedish capital every summer and have been profuse in their praise of its hospitable citizens and charming environs. Yet it must be that Frenchmen do not thrive in Northern climes.

The entire country is gasping for rain, says a Stockholm correspondent. The sun continues to shine hot over the national capital and from all over the country districts come reports of continued drought. Naturally enough, therefore, the grains have suffered much and the harvest throughout the country has been damaged in many places. In Gellivara some little rain has fallen, but not from one of the meteorological stations throughout the country is there a single report of any rain. Hundreds of wells have run dry and in many country districts there is great difficulty in securing enough water for the cattle. August has been the warmest month on record in Sweden for the past fifty years.

Prince William distinguished himself the other day when he jumped into the water at Marstrand and saved a boy from drowning. Sixten Nilsson, a nine-year-old boy, fell in the water while walking up the gang plank to board a cruiser which was anchored in the harbor at Marstrand. Prince William, who stood close by and noted the boy's fall into the water, jumped in and pulled him out before any other assistance could reach him.

P. M. Wikstrom's donations now amount to about 300,000 crowns, of which amount Vasterbottens "lan" will receive 100,000 crowns. The so called Stockholm's Workingmen's union receives 50,000 crowns. Large sums have also been donated by the same person to various charitable institutions in the city of Stockholm and other cities in Sweden.

The Nobel company's powder factory in Bofors was set on fire by lightning the other day and a terrific explosion followed which practically destroyed the plant. Fortunately none of the laboring men were present, the explosion occurring shortly after all the men had left the plant. The damage is estimated at 100,000 crowns.

Queen Victoria, who has returned to Sweden after an extended visit on the Continent, celebrated her forty-ninth birthday at Tullgarn Aug. 7, where she enjoyed the day with the crown prince and crown princess. The Duchess of Sodermanland was also present.

Professor Quensel of Upsala, Sweden, has presented the museum in Gothenburg with a thousand engravings dating back to the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries. It is said to be the finest collection of its kind in the world.

NORWAY.

Says a Christiania correspondent: "The sacrifice which the Norwegian workingmen are making for each other is striking the outsiders with wonder and admiration. About $13,500 has been set aside as traveling expenses for the unemployed men who wish to leave the country and those who have investigated the matter recommend Canada and the Pacific slope. It is said that the above amount will be doubled. There is a comic phase to this movement. The capitalists of Norway have locked out the men and the comrades of the latter raise money to send them to America. At the same time the capitalists of Norway, headed by the king, have organized a national anti-emigration society, the aim of which is to prevent people from emigrating on the one hand, and to work for the return of those already emigrated. The plain man looks at the situation in this light—the moneyed men compel the ablest workmen to leave the country, and at the same time they try to induce wornout Norwegians abroad to return to Norway."

Gustav Henrickson of Christiania, president and general manager of the United States-Norway Steamship line, which will be in operation within a year, arrived in St. Paul the other day from the Pacific coast. Mr. Henrickson noted that business conditions in the Western states and Canada seem to be on a sound footing. The new steamship line, Mr. Henrickson says, will cut three days from the time of the Danish line, the only competitor of the new company. The complete trip from Christiania and Bergen to New York, he says, will be made in eight or nine days. Mr. Henrickson has now left for the Eastern cities. The new line will start with two steamers and Mr. Henrickson will order their construction as soon as he reaches Norway.

Christiania children under fourteen years are forbidden to attend so called moving picture shows by order of the city council. The papers have praised the council for its new regulation and believe that it is a move in the right direction. It would not be a bad idea if the various city councils of great American cities would follow the example of the Christiania city fathers in this respect.

Albert Arveschoug, the well known Norwegian barytone, is lying seriously ill at the Good Samaritan hospital in Portland, Ore. His physicians hope, however, to pull him through, but declare that several months will elapse before he can hope to regain his former health. Mr. Arveschoug was billed for a series of concerts on the Pacific coast this fall.

The city council of Christiania will appropriate 300,000 crowns to the great exposition, which will be held in that city in 1914. Great preparations are already being made and judging from all indications the exposition of 1914 will be the greatest public undertaking on record in Norway. The exposition will be international in character.

The so called "Folkets Hus" in Christiania will undergo a thorough renovation and will also be enlarged. An adjoining property valued at 140,000 crowns has been purchased.

A society in Trondhjem has been organized for the purpose of erecting a People's museum to be known as Trondelagens museum.

DENMARK.

A young member of the editorial staff of a newly started paper, the Riget, entered the National gallery in Copenhagen a few days ago with the intention of proving that its supervision was inadequate. Though the gallery was filled with American and German tourists the journalist succeeded in taking an old Dutch picture of great value, painted by Molanear and called "The Peasant in the Inn." He covered the picture with a waterproof coat and went away without being noticed. Later the editor of Riget telephoned to the director of the gallery asking if the rumor that a picture had been stolen was true. The director replied that nothing was missing. In the afternoon the reporter delivered the stolen picture to the chagrined director.

The Danish steamship companies are, according to recent dispatches from Copenhagen, facing a serious strike of engineers and officers. It is the first time, so far as is known here, that officers have threatened to strike. Negotiations have been carried on for several months, but the companies have refused to accede to the principal demands made and the chairman of the Engineers' association says it will be necessary to use some drastic methods in order to bring about compliance with what he terms reasonable demands. The president of the Scandinavian-American line considers the situation critical.

According to the census taken during the month of February of the present year Denmark has a population of 2,757,076. Since the last census, taken in 1906, the population has increased 168,157, or an annual increase of 1.27 per cent. The increase is attributed not to an increase of births, but to the fact that emigration has decreased. About three-fifths of the population are in the country districts, but the cities have been gaining on the country. Copenhagen had an annual increase of 1.70 per cent, the cities in the provinces 1.57 per cent, and the country districts 1.02 per cent. MARION S. NORELIUS.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

The Southern Pacific Railroad company, through Julius Kruttschnitt, vice president and director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman lines, rejected a demand for recognition of the federation of shop employes, comprising five shop crafts unions and 25,000 men. That such recognition, with its implications, would hamper the company in performing its duty to the public was the position taken by its officials.

Between gulps of intense emotion Paul D. Beattie, cousin of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., the young Virginian who stands indicted for the murder of his wife, revealed on the witness stand that the accused told him twenty-four hours after the murder how sorry he was he had done it, a circumstance relating to the crime that the witness hitherto had suppressed.

Lucius A. Stevely, who was known as a "good fellow" around Chicago cafes, is under arrest at Dubuque, Ia., on a charge of embezzlement preferred by the Patent Vulcanite Roofing company of Chicago, of which he was cashier. His employers allege that an examination of his books shows a shortage of $17,000.

The eight-year-old stepson of Mrs. Paul Anderson is dead, his father is shot and Mrs. Anderson is suffering from a flesh wound inflicted by a revolver bullet. Mrs. Anderson is in jail at Audubon, Ia., near where the tragedy occurred, charged with killing the boy and attempting the life of her husband.

The jury in the case of Paul Geidel, the seventeen-year-old bellboy charged with the murder of William H. Jackson in the Iroquois hotel at New York on July 26, returned a verdict of murder in the second degree. The punishment is twenty years to life imprisonment.

Grief over the death of his wife led Edward Bennett, an Englishman and a graduate of Oxford university, who had been a resident of Thomaston, Me., for the last six years, to murder his three children and then take his own life.

Three robbers held up the southbound Oregon express on the Southern Pacific railroad a mile and a half north of Lamoine, Cal. They blew open both safes in the express car, rifled them and escaped.

A tong war which has been threatened for some time broke out in Chicago's Chinatown and as a result Lee Yip Wing, a merchant, is dead and Moy Dong Tong, a laundryman, is in a critical condition.

Horace Gribble, a white farmer, was killed in a battle between whites and negroes near Caddo, Okla.

THE DEATH RECORD.

News has been received at New York of the death of Peter B. Sweeney, known as Peter "Brains" Sweeney, because he was credited with possessing the brains of the "Boss" Tweed ring of politicians which controlled New York in the late sixties and early seventies. He died at Lake Mahopac, N. Y., at the age of eighty-six, having received fatal injuries by slipping and falling on a stairway.

Stephen Frowell died in a hospital at Oklahoma City, Okla., as a result of hemorrhage started by sneezing. He began to sneeze Aug. 24 and at the same time his nose began to bleed. Physicians could not check the bleeding and death resulted from loss of blood.

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

So severe has the drought been in the vicinity of De Smet, S. D., that a number of settlers have shot their emaciated live stock to put them out of misery rather than allow them to starve to death.

In nine cases out of ten the fellow who cannot "afford" to buy clothes for himself and his wife good enough so that they would feel justified in attending church spends yearly more than the amount needed for this purpose on booze and tobacco.

The average peaty soil contains an excess of humus, but is deficient in phosphoric acid. This can be supplied in the form of barnyard manure or even more effectively in the shape of the commercial phosphates. This can be got at about $55 per ton, and its application gives a generous return.

The artificial leg of a farmer we read of the other day got overheated and exploded with a sound like a battleship gun, going into a thousand pieces in the midst of a cloud of smoke. This should be a solemn warning to the careless to keep shy of mower sickles and railroad tracks or to buy legs guaranteed all cork.

It is a commendable precaution to tie horses when one has to go some distance from them. True, one may leave them without tying fifty times without harm resulting. Yet the next time something may happen to frighten them, and a runaway is the result, in which vehicle or machinery may not only be damaged, but the team seriously injured. Insurance against such a fracas is worth the time required to make a team secure.

What is considered a rather unusual market incident was the sale of 280 American sheep on the Toronto (Canada) market a short time since at $5.50 per hundredweight. A duty of 88 cents a head was paid on these sheep, and they sold for 16 cents per hundredweight more than the Canadian animals. If conditions with reference to other commodities are at all like this, the new reciprocity agreement bids fair to be a boon rather than a detriment to the farmer on this side the line.

It has been quite generally supposed that seed of most any kind brought from a distance would produce better and larger crops than that grown near home. Some experiments recently concluded by the Missouri experiment station prove quite conclusively that, while this principle seems to work out all right in the case of seed potatoes, it does not hold in the case of imported seed corn. In fact, the best results have been secured with seed which was acclimated to the conditions under which it is grown.

A York state miser had no faith in banks and so put $47,000 which he had hoarded during many years in what he thought a safe nook in his house. But the structure caught fire the other day, and the savings of many years went up in smoke. Notwithstanding the fact that instances like the above are of almost daily occurrence there are a whole lot of folks who still believe that an old trunk, a tin can or a stove is a better place of safety than a bank

A question that naturally comes to the Ohio or Illinois farmer who goes to the southwest is whether listing as a method of planting corn is preferable to plowing and planting by the check row method. This matter has been given a pretty thorough test at several experiment stations in states where listing is practiced, and if there is any difference at all in the yield of corn secured by the two methods it is slightly in favor of the latter method.

There are a good many sections this year in which the only farmers who will harvest a crop of corn worth speaking of will be those who persist in frequent cultivation even after the time when the field is usually laid by. If the drought persists the cultivation should be continued with single horse cultivators or, what gives just as satisfactory results, an old mower wheel hauled between the rows of corn just as it lies on the ground. This levels and pulverizes the soil and gives the desired dust mulch.

It has always been beyond the writer's ken why, instead of making an appetizing, substantial and wholesome loaf of bread, bakeries—most of them—still persist in putting good flour into a loaf that is punky, unsubstantial and unsatisfying—just an aggregation of cells of carbonated air, the consumption of which is reduced greatly because of its flimsy character.

Riding a Giraffe.

General Wood of the English army was the hero of many adventures, but the one he called the strangest is the time he rode a giraffe in India. With a party of friends he was being entertained by the rajah of Jowra, who exhibited his rare collection of wild animals to his guests. General (then Major) Wood was a daring horseman and on a wager offered to ride the giraffe with no bridle save a rope. The rajah warned him of the danger, but he would not listen. So the giraffe was brought to a balcony, from which the major vaulted on its back. Instantly the great creature was off like the wind, and, once fairly started, it settled down into a curious gallop that soon made the rider so sick and dizzy that he fell off like a log, receiving a blow on the head from the animal's knee and then in the face from its foot. He was unconscious for an hour, and the first use he made of his voice was to resolve that he would never ride a giraffe again.

Morgan as a Mathematician.

J. P. Morgan was almost bred a mathematician. While at Gottingen Morgan specialized in mathematics, and with the professor of mathematics he would spend long hours at problems. Some years ago a number of New Yorkers who had been at the Gottingen university together held a dinner and invited their old professor of mathematics, who happened to be visiting this country, to be present. The German stood his ground—he gave them his own idea. Looking at Mr. Morgan, he said that he was indeed very glad his old pupil had succeeded so well as a banker. "But I regret," he went on, "that you did not remain at the university. Had you stayed with me you would have been my assistant as long as I lived, and unquestionably at my death you would have been appointed professor of mathematics in my place."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Dust Whirls.

Seaward flowing waters are not alone responsible for the denudation of soils. Those who have watched dark dust storms approaching will be interested to know that estimates of solid material suspended in the air run from 160 to 126,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The aeolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

Millepedes.

The little creature which possesses the distinction of having more legs than any other animal is that which belongs to the family of insects known as millepedes or thousand footed. There are several different species of these, but they all possess the common characteristic of having segmented bodies, each segment of which is provided with its own pair of feet. These are set so closely along the body as to resemble hairs, and when they move one after another with perfect regularity the effect is precisely the same on a small scale as that of a field of oats undulating under the influence of the wind. Some species of millepedes have as many as 250 separate and distinct legs. They are all perfectly harmless

Encouragement Enough.

"But why should you be so dreadfully surprised and disappointed when I decline your offer?" she asked recently. "I am certain that I never gave you the least encouragement to propose to me."

"You did!" he cried bitterly. "You gave me the greatest encouragement."

"When?"

"When you told me your income was $25,000 a year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sarcastic Wills.

One eccentric Frenchman directed that a new cooking recipe should be pasted on his tomb every day, and another Frenchman, who was a lawyer, left $30,000 to a lunatic asylum, declaring that it was simply an act of restitution to the clients who were insane enough to employ his services.

"I couldn't take a small part like that."

"You are evidently not used to society drama. The butler has his share of the epigrams."—Pittsburg Post.

Do We Sleep Too Much?

Perhaps, on account of popular opinion and personal habit, we waste much time in a jellyfish condition that could be more profitably spent in active pursuit of our ambitions. The answer, of course, depends upon the nature of our occupation. If there is much muscular effort involved, with a corresponding large amount of waste in the cells and blood, eight hours or more are probably necessary. But if our work is of a sedentary nature and mainly of the brain there is naturally a smaller quantity of accumulated waste, and less time is required for its removal. Many are the instances of great men, past and present, who have lived healthfully and worked unceasingly and strenuously on only four or five hours of sleep, or half the laborer's portion. Surely we are not to suppose that those men were or are physically different from others, but rather that by inclination or necessity they have developed a habit of sleeping intensely for a short period instead of lightly for a longer period, with resulting gain of time and efficiency.—Atlantic Monthly.

Kings Are Useful.

A king is a hand embroidered gentleman trimmed with metals, faced with whiskers and thatched with a metal roof that would never keep off the rain. Nominally he is the head of the nation; actually he is a figurehead, and that is figuratively speaking only, for he is generally too fat to claim a figure and seldom has much of a head—except on the morning after a celebration.

Once upon a time the king was the big tuba of the band. Now he is merely an oboe—until there is a revolution, and then he becomes a real live hobo.

However, a king has his place, although he is yearly finding it more difficult to stay in it.

Kings are found to be very useful in poker games, and by society ladies who wish to be presented to somebody they can brag of having met when they get back home to their long left loved ones.—Detroit Free Press.

Light and Sound Waves.

With reference to our ability to tell the direction from which sound proceeds, attention may be called to an interesting difference between the eyes and the ears in relation to the size of the waves that strike them. The average wave length of light is about one ten-thousandth of the diameter of the pupil of the eye. On the other hand, according to Rayleigh, the waves of sound proceeding from a man's mouth are about eight feet long, whereas the diameter of the passage of the ear is quite small and could not well have been made a large multiple of eight feet. One consequence of the minuteness of light waves in comparison with the size of the eyes is that the lenses of the eyes are able to concentrate rays of light upon the retina with great efficiency.—Scientific American.

According to Orders.

In employing men to work at his Palo Alto farm in California the late Senator Stanford gave strict orders that they were never to strike, kick or whip a horse. On one occasion, while at dinner, one of the drivers insisted that he must see the senator. He was ushered in, with blood over his face, which was badly cut. "John knocked me down," explained the man, referring to one of the trainers. "What did you do?" asked the senator. "Nothing," replied the man. "But you must have done something. I want the truth," persisted the senator. "Well, I only kicked a horse," growled the man, "and John knocked me down." "Those were John's instructions," said the senator emphatically, "and he did just right."

Gallant.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt once told of a gallant to whom she had been introduced. "His compliments," she said, "were so glowing that at last I cried out:

"'But, monsieur, remember, I am sixty-four years old!'

"'Madam,' he replied, 'to me you are just thirty-two, for I, seared as I have been by scandal, am too charitable ever to believe more than half of what I hear.'"

Some Squeeze.

A judge was questioning an old Irishman.

"He took you by the throat and choked you, did he?" asked the judge.

"He did, sor," said Pat. "Sure, sor, he squazed me throat till I thought he would make cider out o' me Adam's apple."—London Telegraph.

Her Aim.

Mr. Binks (after an absence)—And so you shot a burglar while here and unprotected. You are a brave little woman. What became of him? Mrs. Binks—The other burglar carried him off. Mr. Binks—Which other burglar? Mrs. Binks—The one I aimed at.—Puck.

Experience Teaches.

She—Dearie, shall I learn to make biscuits the way your mother used to make them? He (with a shudder)—No, darling. She used to beat 'em, and my poor father always thought that was how she developed her muscle.—Exchange.

The fear of being found out is often mistaken for the prickings of conscience.

The Light of Crystals.

All diamonds do not shine in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light, but some do to a remarkable degree. A diamond rubbed with a woolen cloth or against a hard surface will sometimes shine brilliantly. The emission of light is a property belonging to many if not all kinds of crystals.

A variety of white marble found at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., gives out a flame colored glow when pounded and bright flashes when scratched with steel. In northern New York is found a kind of stone known locally as "hell fire rock," which exhibits bright sulphur colored streaks when scratched in the dark. Pieces of rose quartz rubbed together exhibit brilliant flashes, sometimes bright enough to illuminate the hands of the person holding them. Smoked quartz and other varieties sometimes show a similar phenomenon.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Lively.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her memoirs, edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life. The plan is monotonous until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert and it gains interest through vastness.

There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"Well, t'missis and me, we've been married nigh on fifty years, and we've never had one quarrel."

The old woman looked at me with a twinkle in her eye and said:

"It war varie conscientious, but varie lool."

The Bloody Hand.

The noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates a wager that ended in a crime. Sir Thomas Holte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London Globe.

The Tyrolese.

You may find the artistic temperament among the peasants in the villages of Bavarian Tyrol. They talk still of the King Ludwig, who lavished money on palaces and died an insane suicide and murderer. You remind them that they are still paying off the debts of the mad king. They reply cheerfully that they are glad of it, for Ludwig loved music and gave us Wagner.—London Chronicle.

A Stirring Appeal.

The following epistle was sent by an angry tenant to his landlord:

> Dear Sir—I want them cellar steps fixed right off. My wife fel down last nite and like to broke her blame neck. Please send blumbber and fix our bath tub it will soon be time now for us to use him agen and oblige. Yours truly,

ROSEAU WINS FIRST PLACE

Northern Minnesota Well Represented With Exhibits at State Fair.

Roseau County Receives Highest Honors of Northern Minnesota Counties.

Northern Minnesota more than did herself proud by the splendid showing made by the different counties at the state fair last week, and especially as one of the counties won first honors among all counties represented in the state. It is especially pleasing to note that with the exception of only two, namely Marshall and Carlton counties, each of the counties representing Northern Minnesota scored over 800 points and shared in the pro rata distribution of the prize money.

Roseau county not only lead the northern division, but took home an additional $75 awarded as first premium for beauty of design. This county and Aitkin, which was a close contestant for the first prize, scored a high total by having a large, well balanced display. Several counties scored better in individual respects, as in the case of Marshall county, which scored high in grain, but failed to get within the 800 mark, on a failure of not having on exhibition specimens of canned fruits. Carlton county made almost a perfect score in potatoes and in stock vegetables but fell way short in grains.

Following is the score of the counties in the northern division, on a basis of 1,200 as a perfect score:

	Place	Score	Pro Rata	Place	Total
*Roseau	1	971	$199.05	$75	$324.05
Aitkin	2	970	198.85	60	258.85
Clearwater	3	958	196.39	50	246.39
Beltrami	4	938	192.29	45	237.29
Cass	5	935	191.67	40	231.67
Polk	6	882	180.81	35	216.81
Itasca	7	875	179.37	30	202.37
Kittson	8	857	175.68	25	200.25
Hubbard	9	853	174.86	20	194.86
*Red Lake	10	847	173.63	15	203.63
Koochiching	11	821	168.20		168.20
Becker	12	812	166.46		166.46
Marshall	13	790
Carlton	14	784

Wherever a star indicates an additional amount is added for beauty.

It is a thing that is much to be regretted that Pennington county was not more extensively represented at the state fair held at Minneapolis last week. The counties in the northern part of the state are deserving of the highest praise for their excellent exhibits, and there is no reason why Pennington county could not get together one that would have been the equal of most of the exhibits at the fair. Taking as an example the counties of Beltrami, Marshall and Red Lake who had fine displays of fruits, cereals and garden stuff, and most particularly that of Roseau county, the most northerly county in the state, which had an exhibit, that, in addition to its cereal and garden stuff, had a display of fruits not excelled by those raised in some of the counties in the southern part of the state. These exhibits were gotten together without a great deal of trouble and expenditure of money and will bring results ten-fold.

Pennington, being a new county, is in need of advertising, and this kind of advertising will bring more results than all the literature that could be crammed into a box car.

Hunting Season Now Open.

With the opening of the hunting season last Thursday every man or boy large enough to carry a gun that has been able to get away have hied off to the fields in quest of birds. Reports from different parts are to the effect that the birds are quite plentiful but the great number of hunters are keeping them in constant terror, and under these circumstances they are hard to get at, nevertheless several good bags have been brought in from the fields within the last few days.

Rye for Early Spring Pasture.

In the spring of the year, nearly every farmer is confronted with a shortage of feed for his live stock. Rye offers one of the best means of providing early spring pasture, especially for hogs and sheep. Few farmers can afford to operate their places without at least from one to five acres of winter rye, to furnish pasture for their stock early in the spring. Rye will not only furnish good pasture, but will do much to help eradicate weeds. It also offers an opportunity for growing another forage crop, like fodder corn or millet, on the same field later in the season.

Rye for spring pasture should be sown during the early part of September, and in no case later than the first of October. In order to live through the winter, it must get a got a good start before cold weather sets in. The land should be plowed deep, and well prepared before the crop is sown. A good seed bed is essential, as this crop may suffer for want of moisture, and from a severe winter. A good start in the fall will do much to put it through the winter in good shape.

The rye for pasture should be sown at the rate of about two bushels per acre, with a grain drill, and harrowed several times after the grain is sown.

In the spring as soon as warm weather sets in, the rye will make rapid growth, and when from six to eight inches high, it will be ready for the hogs or sheep. Minnesota farmers have not made as good use of the rye crop for pasture as they should. If you have not already planned to sow a field of rye, give it a trial this year, and reap the benefit of this crop as early pasture on your farm. —W. H. Tomhave, Ex. Div. Minn. Col. of Agriculture.

Corn and Frost.

The problem in corn-growing in Minnesota is to select varieties of corn that can be matured between frosts. From May 15th to September 1st, inclusive, there are 110 days. For the northern half of Minnesota, it is unsafe to plan on a longer season than this; and, in the extreme north, 100 days is the limit of the safety. It often happens, however, in favorable years, that there are from 120 to 140 days in which to mature a crop, and this usually results in difficulty, as the tendency always is to select the largest ears of corn, and one usually feels safe in selecting any corn that he has grown on his own farm. This practice, however, should be avoided, and the effort should always be to select corn, for seed, that has matured not later than the date of the expected first frost. This will mean, in northern Minnesota, to select corn very early in September. In the south part of the state, where 120 days can be counted on, the selection of seed corn may be deferred until the middle of September.

The selection of varieties of corn that are unsafe almost universally results in discouragement. A crop failure, or a crop of soft corn, is very likely to dampen one's ardor for the corn crop; while early-maturing varieties, adapted to this state, are capable of yielding from 40 to 75 bushels per acre; which makes corn the cheapest possible feed that can be produced in Minnesota.—A. D. Wilson, Extension Division, Minn. Col. of Agriculture.

LAND SHOW AT ST. PAUL

John Bruegger, Vice President of Development League, Tells What North Dakota Has Done.

He Is Enthusiastic Over Land Show—W. C. Gilbreath Will Prepare Exhibit.

"Every state in the Northwest should have a liberal appropriation for state publicity and immigration work," said John Bruegger, vice president of the Northwest Development league for North Dakota. Mr. Bruegger is a general merchant at Williston and interested in lands and irrigation projects which are making his section of the state attractive to settlers.

My reason for saying every state should have an appropriation is that North Dakota is one of the pioneers in state publicity and immigration work and we know the results of such work. When W. C. Gilbreath was employed as commissioner of agriculture he started out to advertise North Dakota.

"Gilbreath took an exhibit to the St. Louis exposition and it was one of the finest in the whole show. He obtained the names and addresses of hundreds, even thousands of people. He followed this up with exhibits of our products at numerous state and county fairs, land shows and similar expositions.

Mr. Bruegger is enthusiastic over the Northwest Development league and its work.

"We are fortunate in being able to join in the work," he said. "I am going back to raise $1000, not to buy space in the land show, but to place in the general treasury of the Northwest Development league. Mr. Campbell has outlined the work the league intends to do and I have no hesitancy in saying it is the most businesslike plan ever proposed.

"Business men of the Twin Cities have made a great hit by agreeing to pay for an equal amount of space for the seven states in the Northwest Development league. I guess North Dakota was the only state in the seven that could have purchased this space from state funds. Funny that other states do not get their Legislatures to pass appropriations which will enable them to increase the value of every piece of real estate in the state by bringing in other settlers."

Agriculture for Rural Schools.

The State Department of Public Instruction and the Agricultural Extension Division are co-operating in a systematic effort for the introduction of Agriculture into the rural schools this year. The plan is to send a special leaflet called "Rural School Agriculture" to every rural school teacher in the state. This leaflet will be sent out monthly from the Extension Division, and will contain a few simple, timely, and practical exercises which can be carried out in the rural schools. The idea is to interest the boys and girls, each month, in those things which are being done on the farm and in the home during that month. The experiments are to be conducted at home, and the reports brought to school for discussion. Carried out in this way, Agriculture need take but little time in the school. Most of the work is easily correlated with the regular branches of school work. A few minutes each day, for important questions and sharp, enthusiastic discussion of reports and experiments, is sufficient time for the general agricultural work.

The greatest handicap upon the introduction of Agriculture into our rural schools is the lack of properly trained teachers. "Rural School Agriculture" is so prepared that a teacher with no agricultural training, but with plenty of enthusiasm, should have no difficulty in handling the work. The rural school is not the place to teach "Scientific Agriculture." One of the commonest mistakes made by teachers is to try to teach too much. It is not how many facts the child learns, but how interested he becomes, that counts. Spirit and enthusiasm, connected with a few well-known and practical agricultural facts, make the teacher's best equipment for introducing Agriculture into the rural schools.—T. B. Lamson, Extension Division.

Do It Now.

Minnesota is making a record as a corn-growing state, and if the coming year is going to bear any comparison to this year, our corn growers must now bestir themselves and gather the seed for next year's planting. Forego the State Fair if you must; neglect your politics if you like; but make the saving of seed corn the all-important consideration of the month. It is not a big job, and because of this many farmers are apt to neglect it; but it is a consideration which has a direct and important bearing upon next year's corn crop; and is one that no wise corn-grower can overlook.

With a sack slung from the shoulder, get out into the best portion of this year's crop and get busy. Look first for those ears that are already quite well matured. Frost may come earlier next year, and it is well to be ahead of it if you can. The ear should be well developed in every way, through to the type and variety you are looking for, and come from a non-suckering, thrifty stock.

Good seed-corn is desirable property any year, and when it is being gathered it is an excellent plan to gather several times the amount that will be needed for next year's planting. Cure it by hanging in a nice, dry place, where there is a good, free circulation of air.

A day spent in timely field selection is worth a week of selection at husking time, and even more of crib selection next spring. Do it now, while the impulse of "Seed Corn Week" is with you. It is a business proposition not to be neglected.—O. M. Olson, Ex. Div. Minnesota College of Agriculture.

TO REDUCE FIRE WASTE

Governor Eberhart Announces a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress

To Which Citizens Are Generally Invited. Cause Is an Excellent One.

Gov. Eberhart is to make a determined effort to reduce the enormous fire waste in the state of Minnesota and to that end has issued the following proclamation, containing valuable information, to secure a large attendance at a big meeting to be held in St. Paul Nov. 8th, at which an organization will be effected to take steps to prevent disastrous and costly fires. The proclamation follows:

STATE OF MINNESOTA
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
PROCLAMATION.

That the fire waste is increasing year by year and becoming more and more appalling within the state of Minnesota, is certain.

I.

To determine by a congress of representative men, interested in the preservation of the wealth of our state, what the loss of property has been by reason of fire, the causes therefor, and how such waste can be reduced, will contribute greatly to the advancement of this state and to the economic welfare of its people.

The magnitude of loss of property by fire, as well as the cost of fire prevention is not grasped by the average man. It is estimated that approximately one half a billion dollars is annually expended dy the people of the United States for this purpose,—a sum one half as great as the annual budget of our federal government.

Nearly two hundred fifty million dollars represents the loss by fire. A sum which would be equalled if a per capita tax of $2.71 were collected from every man, woman and child in the United States. In no European country does the per capita loss exceed 50 cents.

During the past fifteen years computations indicate that approximately two billion dollars and twenty thousand lives have been "sacrificed to fire."

Minnesota has borne too great a part of this enormous loss of property.

The loss of timber in our state by forest fires is almost beyond computation.

Property destroyed by fire is a total and absolute loss. Every indication points to an increase of loss by fire in our state during the year 1911.

II

The season of the year when fires are wont to increase in numbers is at hand. The heating stove of the householder is again to be utilized, and the smoke therefrom must penetrate the swallow's nest before escaping.

It is believed that more than fifty per cent of our fire loss is due to incendiarism or negligence. Much can be done for the prevention of fires by criminals, or through carelessness, in the use of fire and lights in housekeeping is common. Carelessness in the use of matches is universal. Inflammable rubbish in factories is too often found. Dark and dirty hallways where matches are scratched and where cigars and cigarette stubs are thrown are too frequently the cause of fires. Tenants visit dark basements by means of candles, or old fashioned oil lamps. Unsafe oil stoves are sold or employed. Oily waste is not unrarely found in packing houses, factories and lumber yards. Property is not carefully watched and those things which produce fire are improperly guarded.

III.

It is meet that our people should be instructed and caused to realize the fire waste is impoverishing our commonwealth.

Taking into account these vital considerations for the welfare of our state, I do hereby proclaim the 8th day of November, 1911, to be known as Minnesota Fire Prevention day, and urge that it is so recognized and observed in all departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of our people. It is urged that the press, as the strongest factor in the development of public sentiment, impress the importance of this movement upon our people.

And I do further proclaim the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress, to be held in the Palm, St. Paul Hotel, in the city of St. Paul, on said 8th day of November, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate and cooperate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

A. O. Eberhart,
Governor.

Land Lottery at an End.

Two thousand additional winners at the opening of the Berthold Indian reservation were announced by Judge Witten Friday, marking the close of the drawing which began Wednesday. Judge Witten left that afternoon for Washington. His assistants in charge of F. W. Wood, will remain to finish the compilation of the names, and will then leave for Gregory, S. D. to assist in the opening of the Rosebud reservation. Minot has settled down to a normal state. Most of the land seekers have left the city.

"The registration and drawing was orderly throughout", said Judge Witten, who made a ruling Friday that every locator who accepts money for locating any of the winners on the reservation must make a sworn statement as to the character and topography of the tracts and must swear they personally examined the land.—Minneapolis Journal.

Those from this city who drew a number in the lottery are the following and the number of their choice:

258—W. Beck,
938—N. D. Boyce,

Bundle Corn.

One of the cheap farm feeds is bundle corn. Minnesota has more corn than ever before. There is in some sections a shortage, hence a larger proportion of the corn stover will be needed than is usually saved. If corn is cut and husked from the bundle, a large amount of labor is required, more than is necessary to pick the corn from the standing stalks in the field. But by cutting the corn and feeding from the bundle, no more labor is required than to pick it, and the larger part of the labor can be performed by horse power.

An acre of corn, yielding 40 bushels, will have 2,800 pounds of ear-corn. It will have about 3,000 pounds of stover. It will cost approximately $10 per acre to grow, harvest and haul to the barn such a crop. This will mean a cost of 25 cents a bushel, with the stalks attached. A very liberal feeding for a fattening steer would be one peck of corn per day, or 17 pounds. In connection with this 17 pounds of ear-corn, there would be approximately 20 pounds of stover. This would make a liberal day's feed, at a cost of six or seven cents.

There is probably no way by which the same amount of feed can be produced and saved more cheaply than in bundle corn. If a small amount of good clover or alfalfa hay can be fed in conjunction with bundle corn, it is a most desirable feed for most kinds of stock kept on our farms.—A. D. Wilson Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

FARM · ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG
CENTRAL POINT
ROGUE RIVER VALLEY
OREGON
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

So severe has the drought been in the vicinity of De Smet, S. D., that a number of settlers have shot their emaciated live stock to put them out of misery rather than allow them to starve to death.

In nine cases out of ten the fellow who cannot "afford" to buy clothes for himself and his wife good enough so that they would feel justified in attending church spends yearly more than the amount needed for this purpose on booze and tobacco.

The average peaty soil contains an excess of humus, but is deficient in phosphoric acid. This can be supplied in the form of barnyard manure or even more effectively in the shape of the commercial phosphates. This can be got at about $55 per ton, and its application gives a generous return.

The artificial leg of a farmer we read of the other day got overheated and exploded with a sound like a battleship gun, going into a thousand pieces in the midst of a cloud of smoke. This should be a solemn warning to the careless to keep shy of mower sickles and railroad tracks or to buy legs guaranteed all cork.

It is a commendable precaution to tie horses when one has to go some distance from them. True, one may leave them without tying fifty times without harm resulting. Yet the next time something may happen to frighten them, and a runaway is the result, in which vehicle or machinery may not only be damaged, but the team seriously injured. Insurance against such a fracas is worth the time required to make a team secure.

What is considered a rather unusual market incident was the sale of 280 American sheep on the Toronto (Canada) market a short time since at $5.50 per hundredweight. A duty of 88 cents a head was paid on these sheep, and they sold for 16 cents per hundredweight more than the Canadian animals. If conditions with reference to other commodities are at all like this, the new reciprocity agreement bids fair to be a boon rather than a detriment to the farmer on this side the line.

It has been quite generally supposed that seed of most any kind brought from a distance would produce better and larger crops than that grown near home. Some experiments recently concluded by the Missouri experiment station prove quite conclusively that, while this principle seems to work out all right in the case of seed potatoes, it does not hold in the case of imported seed corn. In fact, the best results have been secured with seed which was acclimated to the conditions under which it is grown.

A York state miser had no faith in banks and so put $17,000 which he had hoarded during many years in what he thought a safe nook in his house. But the structure caught fire the other day, and the savings of many years went up in smoke. Notwithstanding the fact that instances like the above are of almost daily occurrence there are a whole lot of folks who still believe that an old trunk, a tin can or a stove is a better place of safety than a bank.

A question that naturally comes to the Ohio or Illinois farmer who goes to the southwest is whether listing as a method of planting corn is preferable to plowing and planting by the check row method. This matter has been given a pretty thorough test by several experiment stations in states where listing is practiced, and if there is any difference at all in the yield of corn secured by the two methods it is slightly in favor of the latter method.

There are a good many sections this year in which the only farmers who will harvest a crop of corn worth speaking of will be those who persist in frequent cultivation even after the time when the field is usually laid by. If the drought persists the cultivation should be continued with single horse cultivators or, what gives just as satisfactory results, an old mower wheel hauled between the rows of corn just as it lies on the ground. This levels and pulverizes the soil and gives the desired dust mulch.

It has always been beyond the writer's ken why, instead of making an appetizing, substantial and wholesome loaf of bread, bakeries—most of them—still persist in putting good flour into a loaf that is punky, unsubstantial and unsatisfying—just an aggregation of cells of carbonated air, the consumption of which is reduced greatly because of its flimsy character.

Riding a Giraffe.

General Wood of the English army was the hero of many adventures, but the one he called the strangest is the time he rode a giraffe in India. With a party of friends he was being entertained by the rajah of Jowra, who exhibited his rare collection of wild animals to his guests. General (then Major) Wood was a daring horseman and on a wager offered to ride the giraffe with no bridle save a rope. The rajah warned him of the danger, but he would not listen. So the giraffe was brought to a balcony, from which the major vaulted on its back. Instantly the great creature was off like the wind, and, once fairly started, it settled down into a curious gallop that soon made the rider so sick and dizzy that he fell off like a log, receiving a blow on the head from the animal's knee and then in the face from its foot. He was unconscious for an hour, and the first use he made of his voice was to resolve that he would never ride a giraffe again.

Morgan as a Mathematician.

J. P. Morgan was almost bred a mathematician. While at Gottingen Morgan specialized in mathematics, and with the professor of mathematics he would spend long hours at problems. Some years ago a number of New Yorkers who had been at the Gottingen university together held a dinner and invited their old professor of mathematics, who happened to be visiting this country, to be present. The German stood his ground—he gave them his own idea. Looking at Mr. Morgan, he said that he was indeed very glad his old pupil had succeeded so well as a banker. "But I regret," he went on, "that you did not remain at the university. Had you stayed with me you would have been my assistant as long as I lived, and unquestionably at my death you would have been appointed professor of mathematics in my place."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Dust Whirls.

Seaward flowing waters are not alone responsible for the denudation of soils. Those who have watched dark dust storms approaching will be interested to know that estimates of solid material suspended in the air run from 160 to 126,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The aeolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

Millepedes.

The little creature which possesses the distinction of having more legs than any other animal is that which belongs to the family of insects known as millepedes or thousand footed. There are several different species of these, but they all possess the common characteristic of having segmented bodies, each segment of which is provided with its own pair of feet. These are set so closely along the body as to resemble hairs, and when they move one after another with perfect regularity the effect is precisely the same on a small scale as that of a field of oats undulating under the influence of the wind. Some species of millepedes have as many as 350 separate and distinct legs. They are all perfectly harmless.

Encouragement Enough.

"But why should you be so dreadfully surprised and disappointed when I decline your offer?" she asked recently. "I am certain that I never gave you the least encouragement to propose to me."

"You did!" he cried bitterly. "You gave me the greatest encouragement."

"When?"

"When you told me your income was $25,000 a year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sarcastic Wills.

One eccentric Frenchman directed that a new cooking recipe should be pasted on his tomb every day, and another Frenchman, who was a lawyer, left $50,000 to a lunatic asylum, declaring that it was simply an act of restitution to the clients who were insane enough to employ his services.

Do We Sleep Too Much?

Perhaps, on account of popular opinion and personal habit, we waste much time in a jellyfish condition that could be more profitably spent in active pursuit of our ambitions. The answer, of course, depends upon the nature of our occupation. If there is much muscular effort involved, with a corresponding large amount of waste in the cells and blood, eight hours or more are probably necessary. But if our work is of a sedentary nature and mainly of the brain there is naturally a smaller quantity of accumulated waste, and less time is required for its removal. Many are the instances of great men, past and present, who have lived healthfully and worked unceasingly and strenuously on only four or five hours of sleep, or half the laborer's portion. Surely we are not to suppose that those men were or are physically different from others, but rather that by inclination or necessity they have developed a habit of sleeping intensely for a short period instead of lightly for a longer period, with resulting gain of time and efficiency.—Atlantic Monthly.

Kings Are Useful.

A king is a hand embroidered gentleman trimmed with metals, faced with whiskers and thatched with a metal roof that would never keep off the rain. Nominally he is the head of the nation; actually he is a figurehead, and that is figuratively speaking only, for he is generally too fat to claim a figure and seldom has much of a head—except on the morning after a celebration.

Once upon a time the king was the big tuba of the band. Now he is merely an oboe—until there is a revolution, and then he becomes a real live hobo.

However, a king has his place, although he is yearly finding it more difficult to stay in it.

Kings are found to be very useful in poker games, and by society ladies who wish to be presented to somebody they can brag of having met when they get back home to their long left loved ones.—Detroit Free Press.

Light and Sound Waves.

With reference to our ability to tell the direction from which sound proceeds, attention may be called to an interesting difference between the eyes and the ears in relation to the size of the waves that strike them. The average wave length of light is about one ten-thousandth of the diameter of the pupil of the eye. On the other hand, according to Rayleigh, the waves of sound proceeding from a man's mouth are about eight feet long, whereas the diameter of the passage of the ear is quite small and could not well have been made a large multiple of eight feet. One consequence of the minuteness of light waves in comparison with the size of the eyes is that the lenses of the eyes are able to concentrate rays of light upon the retina with great efficiency.—Scientific American.

According to Orders.

In employing men to work at his Palo Alto farm in California the late Senator Stanford gave strict orders that they were never to strike, kick or whip a horse. On one occasion, while at dinner, one of the drivers insisted that he must see the senator. He was ushered in, with blood over his face, which was badly cut. "John knocked me down," explained the man, referring to one of the trainers. "What did you do?" asked the senator. "Nothing," replied the man. "But you must have done something. I want the truth," persisted the senator. "Well, I only kicked a horse," growled the man, "and John knocked me down." "Those were John's instructions," said the senator emphatically, "and he did just right."

Gallant.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt once told of a gallant to whom she had been introduced. "His compliments," she said, "were so glowing that at last I cried out:

"'But, monsieur, remember, I am sixty-four years old!'

"'Madame,' he replied, 'to me you are just thirty-two, for I, scared as I have been by scandal, am too charitable ever to believe more than half of what I hear.'"

Some Squeeze.

A judge was questioning an old Irishman.

"He took you by the throat and choked you, did he?" asked the judge.

"He did, sor," said Pat. "Sure, sor, he squazed me throat till I thought he would make cider out o' me Adam's apple."—London Telegraph.

The Light of Crystals.

All diamonds do not shine in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light, but some do to a remarkable degree. A diamond rubbed with a woolen cloth or against a hard surface will sometimes shine brilliantly. The emission of light is a property belonging to many if not all kinds of crystals.

A variety of white marble found at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., gives out a flame colored glow when pounded and bright flashes when scratched with steel. In northern New York is found a kind of stone known locally as "hell fire rock," which exhibits bright sulphur colored streaks when scratched in the dark. Pieces of rose quartz rubbed together exhibit brilliant flashes, sometimes bright enough to illuminate the hands of the person holding them. Smoked quartz and other varieties sometimes show a similar phenomenon.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Lively.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her memoirs, edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life. The plan is monotonous until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert and it gains interest through vastness.

There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"Well, t'missis and me, we've been married nigh on fifty years, and we've never had one quarrel."

The old woman looked at me with a twinkle in her eye and said:

"It war varie conscientious, but varie lool."

The Bloody Hand.

The noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates a wager that ended in a crime. Sir Thomas Holte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London Globe.

The Tyrolese.

You may find the artistic temperament among the peasants in the villages of Bavarian Tyrol. They talk still of the King Ludwig, who lavished money on palaces and died an insane suicide and murderer. You remind them that they are still paying off the debts of the mad king. They reply cheerfully that they are glad of it, for Ludwig loved music and gave us Wagner.—London Chronicle.

A Stirring Appeal.

ROSEAU WINS FIRST PLACE

Northern Minnesota Well Represented With Exhibits at State Fair.

Roseau County Receives Highest Honors of Northern Minnesota Counties.

Northern Minnesota more than did herself proud by the splendid showing made by the different counties at the state fair last week, and especially as one of the counties won first honors among all counties represented in the state. It is especially pleasing to note that with the exception of only two, namely Marshall and Carlton counties, each of the counties representing Northern Minnesota scored over 800 points and shared in the pro rata distribution of the prize money.

Roseau county not only lead the northern division, but took home an additional $75 awarded as first premium for beauty of design. This county and Aitkin, which was a close contestant for the first prize, scored a high total by having a large, well balanced display. Several counties scored better in individual respects, as in the case of Marshall county, which scored high in grain, but failed to get within the 800 mark, on a failure of not having on exhibition specimens of canned fruits.

Carlton county made almost a perfect score in potatoes and in stock vegetables but fell way short in grains.

Following is the score of the counties in the northern division, on a basis of 1,200 as a perfect score:

	Place	Score	Pro Rata	Place	Total
*Roseau	1	971	$199.05	$75	$324.05
Aitkin	2	970	198.85	60	258.85
Clearwater	3	968	196.39	50	246.39
Beltrami	4	938	192.29	45	237.29
Cass	5	935	191.67	40	231.67
Polk	6	882	180.81	36	216.81
Itasca	7	875	179.37	30	209.37
Kittson	8	857	175.68	25	200.25
Hubbard	9	853	174.86	20	194.86
*Red Lake	10	847	173.63	15	203.63
Koochiching	11	821	168.20		168.20
Becker	12	812	166.46		166.46
Marshall	13	790
Carlton	14	784

Wherever a star indicates an additional amount is added for beauty.

It is a thing that is much to be regretted that Pennington county was not more extensively represented at the state fair held at Minneapolis last week. The counties in the northern part of the state are deserving of the highest praise for their excellent exhibits, and there is no reason why Pennington county could not get together one that would have been the equal of most of the exhibits at the fair. Taking as an example the counties of Beltrami, Marshall and Red Lake who had fine displays of fruits, cereals and garden stuff, and most particularly that of Roseau county, the most northerly county in the state, which had an exhibit, that, in addition to its cereal and garden stuff, had a display of fruits not excelled by those raised in some of the counties in the southern part of the state. These exhibits were gotten together without a great deal of trouble and expenditure of money and will bring results ten-fold.

Pennington, being a new county, is in need of advertising, and this kind of advertising will bring more results than all the literature that could be crammed into a box car.

Hunting Season Now Open.

With the opening of the hunting season last Thursday every man or boy large enough to carry a gun that has been able to get away have hied off to the fields in quest of birds. Reports from different parts are to the effect that the birds are quite plentiful but the great number of hunters are keeping them in constant terror, and under these circumstances they are hard to get at, nevertheless several good bags have been brought in from the fields within the last few days.

Rye for Early Spring Pasture.

In the spring of the year, nearly every farmer is confronted with a shortage of feed for his live stock. Rye offers one of the best means of providing early spring pasture, especially for hogs and sheep. Few farmers can afford to operate their places without at least from one to five acres of winter rye, to furnish pasture for their stock early in the spring. Rye will not only furnish good pasture, but will do much to help eradicate weeds. It also offers an opportunity for growing another forage crop, like fodder corn or millet, on the same field later in the season.

Rye for spring pasture should be sown during the early part of September, and in no case later than the first of October. In order to live through the winter, it must get a good start before cold weather sets in. The land should be plowed deep, and well prepared before the crop is sown. A good seed bed is essential, as this crop may suffer for want of moisture and from a severe winter. A good start in the fall will do much to put it through the winter in good shape.

The rye for pasture should be sown at the rate of about two bushels per acre, with a grain drill, and harrowed several times after the grain is sown.

In the spring as soon as warm weather sets in, the rye will make rapid growth, and when from six to eight inches high, it will be ready for the hogs or sheep. Minnesota farmers have not made as good use of the rye crop for pasture as they should. If you have not already planned to sow a field of rye, give it a trial this year, and reap the benefit of this crop as early pasture on your farm. —W. H. Tomhave, Ex. Div. Minn. Col. of Agriculture.

Corn and Frost.

The problem in corn-growing in Minnesota is to select varieties of corn that can be matured between frosts. From May 15th to September 1st, inclusive, there are 110 days. For the northern half of Minnesota, it is unsafe to plan on a longer season than this; and, in the extreme north, 100 days is the limit of the safety. It often happens, however, in favorable years, that there are from 120 to 140 days in which to mature a crop, and this usually results in difficulty, as the tendency always is to select the largest ears of corn, and one usually feels safe in selecting any corn that he has grown on his own farm. This practice, however, should be avoided, and the effort should always be to select corn, for seed, that has matured not later than the date of the expected first frost. This will mean, in northern Minnesota, to select corn very early in September. In the south part of the state, where 120 days can be counted on, the selection of seed corn may be deferred until the middle of September.

The selection of varieties of corn that are unsafe almost universally results in discouragement. A crop failure, or a crop of soft corn, is very likely to dampen one's ardor for the corn crop; while early-maturing varieties, adapted to this state, are capable of yielding from 40 to 75 bushels per acre; which makes corn the cheapest possible feed that can be produced in Minnesota.—A. D. Wilson, Extension Division, Minn. Col. of Agriculture.

LAND SHOW AT ST. PAUL

John Bruegger, Vice President of Development League, Tells What North Dakota Has Done.

He Is Enthusiastic Over Land Show—W. C. Gilbreath Will Prepare Exhibit.

"Every state in the Northwest should have a liberal appropriation for state publicity and immigration work," said John Bruegger, vice president of the Northwest Development league for North Dakota. Mr. Bruegger is general merchant at Williston and interested in lands and irrigation projects which are making his section of the state attractive to settlers.

"My reason for saying every state should have an appropriation is that North Dakota is one of the pioneers in state publicity and immigration work and we know the results of such work. When W. C. Gilbreath was employed as commissioner of agriculture he started out to advertise North Dakota.

"Gilbreath took an exhibit to the St. Louis exposition and it was one of the finest in the whole show. He obtained the names and addresses of hundreds, even thousands of people. He followed this up with exhibits of our products at numerous state and county fairs, land shows and similar expositions.

Mr. Bruegger is enthusiastic over the Northwest Development league and its work.

"We are fortunate in being able to join in the work," he said. "I am going back to raise $1000, not to buy space in the land show, but to place in the general treasury of the Northwest Development league. Mr. Campbell has outlined the work the league intends to do and I have no hesitancy in saying it is the most businesslike plan ever proposed.

"Business men of the Twin Cities have made a great hit by agreeing to pay for an equal amount of space for the seven states in the Northwest Development league. I guess North Dakota was the only state in the seven that could have purchased this space from state funds. Funny that other states do not get their Legislatures to pass appropriations which will enable them to increase the value of every piece of real estate in the state by bringing in other settlers."

Agriculture for Rural Schools.

The State Department of Public Instruction and the Agricultural Extension Division are co-operating in a systematic effort for the introduction of Agriculture into the rural schools this year. The plan is, to send a special leaflet called "Rural School Agriculture" to every rural school teacher in the state. This leaflet will be sent out monthly from the Extension Division, and will contain a few simple, timely, and practical exercises which can be carried out in the rural schools. The idea is to interest the boys and girls, each month, in those things which are being done on the farm and in the home during that month. The experiments are to be conducted at home, and the reports brought to school for discussion. Carried out in this way, Agriculture need take but little time in the school. Most of the work is easily correlated with the regular branches of school work. A few minutes each day, for important questions and sharp, enthusiastic discussion of reports and experiments, is sufficient time for the general agricultural work.

The greatest handicap upon the introduction of Agriculture into our rural schools is the lack of properly trained teachers. "Rural School Agriculture" is so prepared that a teacher with no agricultural training, but with plenty of enthusiasm, should have no difficulty in handling the work. The rural school is not the place to teach "Scientific Agriculture." One of the commonest mistakes made by teachers is to try to teach too much. It is not how many facts the child learns, but how interested he becomes, that counts. Spirit and enthusiasm, connected with a few well-known and practical agricultural facts, make the teacher's best equipment for introducing Agriculture into the rural schools.—T. B. Lamson, Extension Division.

Do It Now.

Minnesota is making a record as a corn-growing state, and if the coming year is going to bear any comparison to this year, our corn growers must now bestir themselves and gather the seed for next year's planting. Forego the State Fair if you must; neglect your politics if you like; but make the saving of seed corn the all-important consideration of the month. It is not a big job, and because of this many farmers are apt to neglect it; but it is a consideration which has a direct and important bearing upon next year's corn crop; and is one that no wise corn-grower can overlook.

With a sack slung from the shoulder, get out into the best portion of this year's crop and get busy. Look first for those ears that are already quite well matured. Frost may come earlier next year, and it is well to be ahead of it if you can. The ear should be well developed in every way, through to the type and variety you are looking for, and come from a non-suckering, thrifty stock.

Good seed-corn is desirable property any year, and when it is being gathered it is an excellent plan to gather several times the amount that will be needed for next year's planting. Cure it by hanging in a nice, dry place, where there is a good, free circulation of air.

A day spent in timely field selection is worth a week of selection at husking time, and even more of crib selection next spring. Do it now, while the impulse of "Seed Corn Week" is with you. It is a business proposition not to be neglected.—O. M. Olson, Ex. Div. Minnesota College of Agriculture.

Mrs. Perl W. Mabey and son Richard, returned home Sunday morning from an extended visit at points in southern Minnesota and Wisconsin.

TO REDUCE FIRE WASTE

Governor Eberhart Announces a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress

To Which Citizens Are Generally Invited. Cause Is an Excellent One.

Gov. Eberhart is to make a determined effort to reduce the enormous fire waste in the state of Minnesota and to that end has issued the following proclamation, containing valuable information, to secure a large attendance at a big meeting to be held in St. Paul Nov. 8th, at which an organization will be effected to take steps to prevent disastrous and costly fires. The proclamation follows:

STATE OF MINNESOTA
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
PROCLAMATION.

That the fire waste is increasing year by year and becoming more and more appalling within the state of Minnesota, is certain.

I.

To determine by a congress of representative men, interested in the preservation of the wealth of our state, what the loss of property has been by reason of fire, the causes therefor, and how such waste can be reduced, will contribute greatly to the advancement of this state and to the economic welfare of its people.

The magnitude of loss of property by fire, as well as the cost of fire prevention is not grasped by the average man. It is estimated that approximately one-half a billion dollars is annually expended by the people of the United States for this purpose,—a sum one-half as great as the annual budget of our federal government.

Nearly two hundred fifty million dollars represents the loss by fire. A sum which would be equalled if a per capita tax of $2.71 were collected from every man, woman and child in the United States. In no European country does the per capita loss exceed 50 cents.

During the past fifteen years computations indicate that approximately two billion dollars and twenty thousand lives have been "sacrificed to fire."

Minnesota has borne too great a part of this enormous loss of property.

The loss of timber in our state by forest fires is almost beyond computation.

Property destroyed by fire is a total and absolute loss. Every indication points to an increase of loss by fire in our state during the year 1911.

II

The season of the year when fires are wont to increase in numbers is at hand. The heating stove of the householder is again to be utilized, and the smoke therefrom must penetrate the swallow's nest before escaping.

It is believed that more than fifty per cent of our fire loss is due to incendiarism or negligence. Much can be done for the prevention of fires by criminals, or through carelessness, in the use of fire and lights in housekeeping is common. Carelessness in the use of matches is universal. Inflammable rubbish in factories is too often found. Dark and dirty hallways where matches are scratched and where cigars and cigarette stubs are thrown are too frequently the cause of fires. Tenants visit dark basements by means of candles, or old fashioned oil lamps. Unsafe oil stoves are sold or employed. Oily waste is not unrarely found in packing houses, factories and lumber yards. Property is not carefully watched and those things which produce fire are improperly guarded.

III.

It is meet that our people should be instructed and caused to realize that fire waste is impoverishing our commonwealth.

Taking into account these vital considerations for the welfare of our state, I do hereby proclaim the 8th day of November, 1911, to be known as Minnesota Fire Prevention day, and urge that it is so recognized and observed in all departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of our people. It is urged that the press, as the strongest factor in the development of public sentiment, impress the importance of this movement upon our people.

And I do further proclaim the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress, to be held in the Palm, St. Paul Hotel, in the city of St. Paul, on said 8th day of November, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate and cooperate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

—A. O. Eberhart,
Governor.

Land Lottery at an End.

Two thousand additional winners at the opening of the Berthold Indian reservation were announced by Judge Witten Friday, marking the close of the drawing which began Wednesday. Judge Witten left that afternoon for Washington. His assistants in charge of F. W. Wood, will remain to finish the compilation of the names, and will then leave for Gregory, S. D. to assist in the opening of the Rosebud reservation. Minot has settled down to a normal state. Most of the land seekers have left the city.

"The registration and drawing was orderly throughout", said Judge Witten, who made a ruling Friday that every locator who accepts money for locating any of the winners on the reservation must make a sworn statement as to the character and topography of the tracts and must swear they personally examined the land.—Minneapolis Journal.

Those from this city who drew a number in the lottery are the following and the number of their choice:

259—W. Beck.
938—N. D. Boyce.

Bundle Corn.

One of the cheap farm feeds is bundle corn. Minnesota has more corn than ever before. There is in some sections a shortage, hence a larger proportion of the corn stover will be needed than is usually saved. If corn is cut and husked from the bundle, a large amount of labor is required, more than is necessary to pick the corn from the standing stalks in the field. But by cutting the corn and feeding from the bundle, no more labor is required than to pick it, and the larger part of the labor can be performed by horse power.

An acre of corn, yielding 40 bushels, will have 2,800 pounds of ear-corn. It will have about 3,000 pounds of stover. It will cost approximately $10 per acre to grow, harvest and haul to the barn such a crop. This will mean a cost of 25 cents a bushel, with the stalks attached. A very liberal feeding for a fattening steer would be one peck of corn per day, or 17 pounds. In connection with this 17 pounds of ear-corn, there would be approximately 20 pounds of stover. This would make a liberal day's feed, at a cost of six or seven cents.

There is probably no way by which the same amount of feed can be produced and saved more cheaply than in bundle corn. If a small amount of good clover or alfalfa hay can be fed in conjunction with bundle corn, it is a most desirable feed for most kinds of stock kept on our farms.—A. D. Wilson, Extension Division, Minn. College of Agriculture.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

PROGRESSIVES HOLD BANQUET

Senator La Follette Endorsed for the Presidency at a Big Gathering at Minneapolis.

United States Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin was endorsed unhesitatingly as the leader of the progressive movement in the United States and the logical nominee of the Republican party for president at its next national convention at the banquet under the auspices of the Progressive Republican league at Minneapolis. Four hundred or more progressives from all parts of Minnesota were there and only a scattered few remained seated when the rising vote on the endorsement of the Wisconsin senator was taken.

Proclaimed by all the speakers, and by the banqueters in the resolution adopted, as the one man who can lead the Republicans to freedom, was this "loneliest man of the senate." For it was a gospel of rejuvenation, of the reawakening of the party along the lines of its first principles, that was preached and not the formation of a new party.

Throughout this first mass meeting in the United States to carry forward the La Follette banner sat smiling and jubilant the secretary of the National Progressive league, Walter L. Houser of Washington, D. C., press agent for the Wisconsin senator. Not a word did he say—he saw it was not necessary.

ORGANIZE FARMERS' LEAGUE

Culmination of Agitation in Minnesota Against Reciprocity.

The Farmers' league of Minnesota was launched at the state fair grounds last week, the culmination of agitation in this state during the past summer against reciprocity. A constitution was officially adopted and steps were taken to organize branches in every county.

The officers chosen are: President, R. A. Wilkinson, Lake Elmo; vice president, J. Y. Winings, Eden Valley; secretary, P. V. Collins, Minneapolis; treasurer, Charles Kenning, Bird Island.

Red hot speeches, in which the president of the United States was "handled without gloves," and in which such words as "sold out" and "betrayed" were frequent, were used during the day's session.

The league, as its constitution declares, is organized for the purpose of procuring co-operation among the farmers for "benefits—social, material and political," but it was made plain in the discussions that while the league will be nonpartisan its chief object is politics.

STATE FAIR LOSES $60,000

Rainy Weather Results in Big Deficit for Association.

The Minnesota State Fair association is behind between $50,000 and $60,000 as the result of last week's inclement weather. It will be some days before the exact figures can be given.

The cost of promoting the 1911 exposition is about $215,000. The receipts from all ticket sales, including those at the gates, grandstand and live stock pavilion, approximately will amount to $105,000, while those from privilege holders and other sources will amount to between $50,000 and $60,000. Of the fair's cost $56,000 was for premiums. Of the receipts several thousand dollars was entrance money deposited by owners of race horses, which will be refunded.

PLANNED TO WRECK TRAIN

Attempt Is Frustrated by Anoka Physicians.

A deliberate attempt to wreck the Great Northern's Duluth flyer was discovered near Andover by Dr. A. T. Caine and Dr. H. H. Carlson of Anoka.

Dr. Caine, accompanied by Dr. Carlson, a dentist, went in an auto to Linwood to see a patient. On the way they crossed the Great Northern tracks near Andover and apparently the track had not in anyway been disturbed. However, on their return, the auto jumped as it struck the crossing, and aroused the doctors' suspicion. They returned immediately to investigate. At the crossing every spike had been removed from the rails and the fishplates were gone.

ATTACKS STATE LAND POLICY

Collier's Sharply Criticises Minnesota Officials and Laws.

The last number of Collier's Weekly, dated Sept. 9, indulges in sharp editorial criticism of the policy of Minnesota in respect to her public lands, which, it asserts, have become the prey of hungry speculators and trusts by reason of the repeal by the last legislature of a law passed in 1905. The New York magazine also indulges in a covert assault on the integrity of state officials in their relation to the public lands. To this attack State Auditor Iverson entered a vigorous denial

AGREE TO CUT JOINT RATES

Offer Made by Express Companies in Minnesota.

In offering before the state railroad and warehouse commission to put joint express rates into effect on intrastate business the express companies voluntarily reduced express rates on joint business more than 20 per cent and took the members of the commission by surprise.

While the bulk of the express business in Minnesota does not move on a joint rate, a good part of it does, and this offer, if accepted by the commission, will reduce rates materially on through business between Southern and Northern and Eastern and Western Minnesota, where more than one express company is used. The rule regarding joint rates will not apply to the local charges, but where more than one express company participates in the rate it will be more than 20 per cent lower than the local rate offered by any one company for an equal distance.

FRUIT IS GOING TO WASTE

Unusually Heavy Crop in Southern Part of Minnesota.

From reports reaching Winona from all sections of Southern Minnesota crops of fruits of all kinds are so abundant that the problem of what shall be done with them has become serious.

A Winonan, who made a trip through Winona county the past week, says there are so many apples this year that branches of trees are breaking with their weight. Farmers are making every effort to dispose of the oversupply before it is too late, but it seems that they are unable to do this in all instances. Scores are making cider by the barrel. In many cases apples are fed to hogs. There is also a great plenty of crabapples throughout the district.

It is reported there are so many wild grapes that it is an impossibility to see the vines.

VICTIM OF TWO HOLDUP MEN

St. Cloud (Minn.) Merchant Is Mortally Wounded.

Adolph Lindenberg, a prominent business man of St. Cloud, was fatally shot by two holdup men near his home in that city.

Lindenberg was returning from his place of business and, as he stopped to open the door of his house, two men, who were in hiding, jumped in front of him and at the point of their guns relieved him of $8.

After the robbers started to walk away Lindenberg called for help and one of the thugs turned around and shot him through the stomach, mortally wounding him. Lindenberg's family is away from the city, but he managed to drag himself to the home of his son-in-law nearby. An ambulance was at once summoned and the injured man was rushed to the hospital, but there is no hope of his recovery.

STOP UNNECESSARY LOSSES

Governor Eberhart Names Nov. 8 as Fire Prevention Day.

Governor Eberhart has issued a proclamation, calling attention to the immense losses by fire, much of it due to carelessness, and he has set aside Nov. 8 as Minnesota Fire Prevention day, to be observed in all departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of the people. He further proclaims the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention congress at the Saint Paul hotel at St. Paul on Nov. 8 and earnestly invites the entire citizenship of the state to participate and co-operate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

TWO SUSPECTS UNDER ARREST

Bulgarian Laborer Stabbed Thirty-four Times and Shot.

Two Bulgarians were arrested at Prior Lake charged with the murder of Ivan Vanovitch, a Bulgarian section hand. The evidence against the men is said to be conclusive.

Vanovitch, a Bulgarian section hand, living alone in a boarding car on the Milwaukee road near that place, was found dead in the car by other laborers. Thirty-four stiletto wounds were on his body and he had been shot through the head from behind. It was known that Vanovitch had money on his person and in the bank and it was decided at once that robbery was the motive.

SHOOTS AT BEAR; HITS MAN

Minnesotan Accidentally Causes Death of Employe.

Michael M. Gerhan, a laborer for William Hill, a homesteader on Pimush lake, near Cass Lake, was killed by Hill while the latter was shooting at a big bear. Hill missed the bear and the shot carried 100 rods, striking Gerhan squarely in the heart. Hill found Gerhan dead. The coroner was called and pronounced a verdict of accidental death.

WHY ALL SHOULD AID GOOD ROADS

Means Profit For Everybody, Farmer or Banker.

ALL TRADES ARE BENEFITED.

Merchants Will Enjoy Wider Trade Relations, Publishers Larger Circulation, Hotel Proprietors More Tourists and Bankers More Deposits, Owing to Increase In Profits.

The work of improving public roads is not up to a certain class of people. It is up to everybody, whether he be a farmer or banker. All should be interested, as good roads mean profit, says the Ohio Good Roads federation. For instance:

If you are a farmer your farm will increase in value, you can raise more profitable crops, your cost of hauling will be lower, you can market your products when prices are best, your children can get to school, your family can attend church, your physician will be in closer touch with you, your boys and girls will stay on the farm, and you will have better mail service, more social life and happier conditions all around.

If you are a merchant good roads will enlarge your trading radius and make it possible for purchasers to reach you every day in the year and thereby increase your sales.

If you represent a chamber of commerce or a board of trade, because the public roads are commercial feeders to the cities and every improvement of these roads means a greater prosperity to the cities through increased agricultural production and greater stimulus to all industries.

If you are a highway official, because you are striving for better methods of road construction and maintenance and more efficient road administration.

ROAD THAT CAN BE ENJOYED BY TOURISTS.

If you are a railroad man, because improved roads mean greater production, consequently more traffic, prevent freight congestion, bring more industries, more roads, more tourists.

If you are an automobile user, because you can get the benefit of your machine every day in the year, your repair bills will be lower, longer and better tours will be possible at all seasons of the year.

If you are a dealer in farm products and implements, because you can receive the products and deliver the implements at all times.

If you are an automobile manufacturer, because every mile of improved roads means a greater demand for both pleasure and commercial cars, increases wealth and consequently the power to purchase.

If you are a publisher or editor, because improved roads make wider circulation possible, increase advertising by stimulating commercial enterprises, and because road improvement is the most important economic question of the age.

ROAD THAT MEANS PROSPERITY FOR THE FARMER.

If you are a manufacturer of road machinery or road materials, because road improvement means more business.

If you are the proprietor of a hotel, because improved roads mean more tourists and more commercial travel. New England, with its system of good roads, gets $50,000,000 a year from tourists alone.

If you are a banker, because good roads will increase agriculture, commerce and manufacture, depositors, deposits and dividends.

If you are a progressive citizen, because you cannot progress so long as your state and nation remain in the mud.

It is estimated that $2,750,000 is spent annually upon public roads in Missouri, having an aggregate length of 120,000 miles.

HOW TO MAKE COUNTRY EARTH ROADS BETTER.

Work First and Talk Afterward. Make a Drag and Use It.

First.—Go to work yourself—talk afterward. Get a log eight feet long and eight inches thick, split it in half, back it together by diagonal stakes thirty inches apart, with the split sides facing the front. Fasten a chain to each end of the front log, hook a team to the middle of the chain, get the drag out on the country road after a rain and start in to haul the drag over the road at an angle of forty-five degrees, moving the dirt from the side gutters to the center of the road.

UPPER—SAWING LOG TO MAKE ROAD DRAG. LOWER—USING ROAD DRAG.

If you do this work yourself you will learn more about how to make country earth roads better in two hours than anybody could tell you in print in fourteen weeks.

The second thing is: Study the needs of the little stretch of road upon which you actually do your work. Make that stretch of road a model of a good roadway in every particular. See to it that every individual who drives over your road becomes a talking advertisement for highway improvement. If you must blast out rock to afford good drainage for the side gutters along your road why blast them out. Don't wait to talk about it.

Earth and water spell mud, and a muddy road is not a good road, and you cannot get rid of water until the water has the right slope of a drainage channel to carry it off.

Third.—If you will let no obstacle discourage you and if you will keep sublimely on, plugging ahead as the old tortoise did in its race with the hare, which slept by the wayside thinking because of its fleetness it could overcome the slow going tortoise: if you make the improvement of country earth roads a study of pleasure and a sort of philanthropic religion, your achievements for highway betterment will be swift and sure throughout whichever country district you may work.

OILING ROADS KILLS FLIES.

Massachusetts Man Says Tarvia Destroys the Eggs and Larvae.

A Lenox (Mass.) entomologist asserts that the absence of flies along oiled highways is due to the destruction of the eggs and larvae by the application of tarvia and the byproducts of oils which are being used to prevent dust. After conducting a series of experiments the Lenox man has found that there is almost a total absence of the stable or biting fly.

The Lenox experimenter says that tarvia has practically killed the breeding places of the stable fly and that there are fewer houseflies.

Since it has been established that typhoid germs are carried by flies, also Asiatic cholera, and that there is strong evidence that the fly is also the carrier of tuberculosis and other diseases, the discovery that oiling highways lessens the common fly and almost entirely exterminates the stable fly appears to be of the highest importance.

PLAN LONG HIGHWAY.

Improved Road to Be Built From Mexico to Alaska.

That a well improved road from the Mexican boundary to the Alaskan north is now a certainty was the expression before the annual meeting of the Pacific Highway association in Portland, Ore. Delegates from California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia told of the work that is being accomplished and said that sentiment is now strong for the highway project.

The report of A. E. Todd of Victoria, B. C., was especially encouraging, he reporting that the road from Victoria to Hazelton, eighty miles from the Alaskan boundary, would be open next year.

New Road to Cost $190,750.

The county commissioners of Wilkesbarre, Pa., have made application to the court for permission to build a macadam road between Wilkesbarre and Hazleton by way of White Haven. The road will be twenty and one-half miles long, and the estimated cost is $190,750.

Riding a Giraffe.

General Wood of the English army was the hero of many adventures, but the one he called the strangest is the time he rode a giraffe in India. With a party of friends he was being entertained by the rajah of Jowra, who exhibited his rare collection of wild animals to his guests. General (then Major) Wood was a daring horseman and on a wager offered to ride the giraffe with no bridle save a rope. The rajah warned him of the danger, but he would not listen. So the giraffe was brought to a balcony, from which the major vaulted on its back. Instantly the great creature was off like the wind, and, once fairly started, it settled down into a curious gallop that soon made the rider so sick and dizzy that he fell off like a log, receiving a blow on the head from the animal's knee and then in the face from its foot. He was unconscious for an hour, and the first use he made of his voice was to resolve that he would never ride a giraffe again.

Morgan as a Mathematician.

J. P. Morgan was almost bred a mathematician. While at Gottingen Morgan specialized in mathematics, and with the professor of mathematics he would spend long hours at problems. Some years ago a number of New Yorkers who had been at the Gottingen university together held a dinner and invited their old professor of mathematics, who happened to be visiting this country, to be present. The German stood his ground—he gave them his own idea. Looking at Mr. Morgan, he said that he was indeed very glad his old pupil had succeeded so well as a banker. "But I regret," he went on, "that you did not remain at the university. Had you stayed with me you would have been my assistant as long as I lived, and unquestionably at my death you would have been appointed professor of mathematics in my place."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Dust Whirls.

Seaward flowing waters are not alone responsible for the denudation of soils. Those who have watched dark dust storms approaching will be interested to know that estimates of solid material suspended in the air run from 160 to 126,000 tons per cubic miles of air where such storms are prevalent. The aeolian geologist, Udden, taking conservative values and using fairly accurate data for the number, velocity and duration of the dust storms in the western states, concluded that "on the average about 850,000,000 tons of dust are carried 1,440 miles each year, thus doing in this region alone about 1,225,000,000,000 mile tons of transport." The dust whirls run each an average distance of 218 miles.

Millepedes.

The little creature which possesses the distinction of having more legs than any other animal is that which belongs to the family of insects known as millepedes or thousand footed. There are several different species of these, but they all possess the common characteristic of having segmented bodies, each segment of which is provided with its own pair of feet. These are set so closely along the body as to resemble hairs, and when they move one after another with perfect regularity the effect is precisely the same on a small scale as that of a field of oats undulating under the influence of the wind. Some species of millepedes have as many as 350 separate and distinct legs. They are all perfectly harmless.

Encouragement Enough.

"But why should you be so dreadfully surprised and disappointed when I decline your offer?" she asked recently. "I am certain that I never gave you the least encouragement to propose to me."

"You did!" he cried bitterly. "You gave me the greatest encouragement."

"When?"

"When you told me your income was $25,000 a year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sarcastic Wills.

One eccentric Frenchman directed that a new cooking recipe should be pasted on his tomb every day, and another Frenchman, who was a lawyer, left $50,000 to a lunatic asylum, declaring that it was simply an act of restitution to the clients who were insane enough to employ his services.

Staging a Play.

"I can give you the part of a butler."

"I couldn't take a small part like that."

"You are evidently not used to society drama. The butler has his share of the epigrams."—Pittsburg Post.

His Intentions.

Mrs. Rasher—Has Mr. Goldcoin, with whom you have been dancing all the evening, at last declared his intentions, Mabel? Mabel—Yes, aunt. Mrs. Rasher—I am so glad! And what did he say? Mabel—He declared he would never marry.—Vogue.

Trinidad's Pitch Lake.

All efforts to ascertain the depth of the famous pitch lake of Trinidad has been unsuccessful. At the sides of the lake the pitch is hard and cold, but at the center it is almost constantly boiling.

Happiness.

Happiness is rather a negative than a positive term in this world and consists more in the absence of some things than in the presence of others. —Sam Slick.

Fine manners need the support of fine manners in others.—Emerson.

HELD TO THE FEDERAL COURT

Mayor Dumas Accused of Conspiracy to Rob Postoffice.

A new angle was added to the affairs in which Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, has been the stellar light, by the entrance into the affair of the United States authorities, who through the district attorney's office at St. Paul had Dr. Dumas brought before H. A. Simons of Bemidji, United States commissioner for the district, to answer to the charge of conspiracy with Mike Davis and Martin Behan to rob the postoffice at Puposky.

The doctor was accompanied by his attorney, Judge Spooner of Bemidji; his father, Frederick Dumas of Minneapolis, and J. W. Johnson of Cass Lake. Dr. Dumas waived examination and Judge Simons fixed bail at $10,000 for his appearance at the term of the United States district court at Fergus Falls in November. Bail was furnished, with Frederick Dumas and J. W. Johnson as sureties.

TRAGEDY AT SQUAW DANCE

Indian Policeman on White Earth Staff Blows Out His Brains.

Indian Policeman Hutchins of the White Earth agency staff blew off his head with a revolver at a squaw dance held at Big Bend. Several Indians and halfbreeds are under arrest on a charge of selling liquor.

Policeman Hutchins was sent to preserve order at the dance. Hutchins, instead of confiscating the liquors he found on the Indians, got drunk, it is said, and trouble started. Drunk and almost crazy with whisky Hutchins pulled out his gun and blew out his brains. After his death the dance proceeded. Two other Indian policemen appeared on the scene and Policeman Star Bad Boy seized the whisky and obtained proof against the men who brought the whisky from Detroit.

TO SEEK IMMIGRANTS FOR WESTERN STATES

"Governors' Special" Will Make Trip Through East.

Governors of a number of Western and Northwestern states, officers of the Panama-Pacific exposition and members of congress, headed by former Governor James H. Brady of Idaho, will make a 4,000-mile tour through the East this fall as a part of a comprehensive plan to bring people who "must move" to the West and Northwestern part of their own country in preference to going into Canada or the Far South to seek homes and investments.

The train will move from Omaha in October, going to Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, New York city, up into New England and returning by Washington in order to bring back with it senators and representatives of Western and Northwestern states.

This tour will be made on a special train, which will not only carry half a dozen or more Western governors, but four or five exhibit cars to "show" the people of the East the products of Western and Northwestern states; resources of their soil, rivers, lakes, mines, forests and factories. It will be known as the "Western Governors' Special." The chief executives of the following states, several of whom are already booked to go, will be invited to accompany the party: Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

JEALOUSY CAUSES SHOOTING

Coleraine Street Scene of Affray in Which One Is Wounded.

Frank Lunierich and Peter Wenarich of Coleraine love and have courted the same girl and the jealousy which each has felt for the other culminated in a shooting affray. Lunierich is in a hospital with one bullet wound in his neck and another in his back and Wenarich is in jail.

The shooting occurred on the main street of Coleraine. The men met and engaged in a wordy controversy. Lunierich started to run, when Wenarich brought him down with two shots from a revolver. The man is dangerously wounded.

Mangled in Corn Shredder.

H. H. Young, proprietor of the Meadow Brook farm near Lake City, fell a victim to the deadly corn shredder. While pitching bundles of corn into the shredder he slipped and fell into the machine. His right leg was fractured and mangled and his right hand and arm were injured. He may die.

Farmer's Skull Is Crushed.

Fred Schiefenbein, a farmer residing near Clear Lake, is dead as the result of an accident. A farmhand was assisting him in loading some hay when the loader became out of order. It traveled along its track with great speed and left the rail, falling and striking Schiefenbein and crushing his skull.

Two Men Drowned.

In water nine feet deep the bodies of two young men drowned in White Bear lake were recovered. The victims were identified by relatives as Charles Coughlin of St. Paul and Richard Varien of Hastings.

Severe criticism is being heard of the plans of the new power house and fire hall as metal smoke stacks are provided for instead of brick, and also that there is no provision for sleeping rooms and stable rooms for horses. Inasmuch as the city is going to a great deal of expense in putting up a building that should serve its purpose for years, instead of its needs just at the present time, these are a few things that will have to be provided for eventually with there growth of the town. The time is not far hence when the city will have to employ its own teams and men as the conditions, as they are at present, depending, as it does, on an entirely volunteer fire department, cannot last if this city grows to any large proportions. It is just a question whether the building is to be constructed solely for the purpose of remedying the conditions as they are at present or whether it is to be so provided to take care of the necessary changes in the future.

Commercial-Normal Opens Oct. 2.

The management of the Commercial-Normal School has deemed it adviseable to open its doors later this year than last year, and the courses will now be commenced on Oct. 2.

This change was made in order to give those who are employed on the farms an opportunity to finish the fall work and avoid being handicapped by not being able to commence with the regular classes at the opening of the school year. The enrollment this year, it is expected, will exceed by far that of last year.

Big Deals in Tractors.

Several big deals have been made the past week in gasoline and kerosene traction engines to be used for plowing purposes, etc. One of the latest deals to be made is the purchase by Supt. J. H. Hay and Alf Rice of a new Hart Power Kerosene Traction Engine, together with breaking and stubble plows. The purchase was made of Gustafson & Son of this city. The machine will be put into operation for fall work at once on Messrs. Hay and Rice's farms east of this city.

Judge Morris Here Last Week.

Judge Page Morris of the United States Circuit Court returned to Duluth last Monday after a week's hunt in this vicinity with parties from this city. The Judge returned somewhat disappointed owing to his failure to bag the usual amount of birds as on his former trips, and attributes his failure to the poor work of his dog.

Millinery Opening Thursday

The Wise Smoker Says.

Get the best of cigars—don't let cigars get the best of you; try the General Arthur 10c. cigars, very mild.

While full grown sheep will knock down and eat more or less corn if turned into a field of it, lambs will touch very little indeed if given the same range. They will crop the grass and weeds on the headlands and borders as well as among the rows of corn. This forage not only provides a good share of their ration, but there is a decided advantage in having the stuff consumed, the fields cleared and thousands and thousands of weed seeds tramped into the ground, and germinated by the fall rains.

In spite of a summer season which has been unusually dry, a whole lot of farmers who trusted to continued dry weather have been having a good deal of grief through leaving their grain in shock in the field. Not only has much of this grain been discolored and even sprouted by unexpected rains, but its presence in the field has prevented early fall plowing, which has so much in its favor. One would think that a fellow who had got caught in this way once would not be again, but usually it is the same bunch. Shock thrashing is sort of habit and hard to break.

The dupes of any fake scheme are to be pitied, but of all such victims those entitled to the most sympathy are those who place implicit confidence in this or that religious leader, only to find in the end that he is a fraud and grafter—just a wolf in sheep's clothing. Such a company, a group of revised spiritualists, have recently been left stranded in California, whither they had been lured by a leader who told them of a life of bliss and content on the shores of a sacred stream. They sold valuable property in Ohio, placing it in the hands of their supposed leader, but today they are destitute and facing starvation.

While a hard freeze that catches the moisture in the ear and kills the germ of seed corn seldom occurs before Oct. 10, it is a pretty good idea in the northern portion of the corn belt, where the crop is often belated, to go into the field and select the ears desired for seed before the time mentioned. Many have already done this and others had their supply of seed corn hung up to dry by Sept. 20. An advantage in this plan aside from making sure that the seed will be thoroughly dried out before cold weather is that by picking the ears that are well matured a type of seed ears can be secured that will produce early maturing corn.

Two Picnics Last Sunday.

Two picnics were held in the country last Sunday by two of the local churches. The United Lutheran church had a picnic about 11 miles east of this city near the Red Lake river and about 50 people, members of the congregation and others, participated. Busses and rigs left this city early in the morning for the picnic grounds. Among the day's pastime and amusements were some well rendered selections by the church choir and an interesting game of "Rugby." Lunch and refreshments were served and reports would indicate that everyone had an enjoyable time.

The second one was held by the congregation of the Norwegian Synod at the Langseth farm near this city. The day being the most pleasant one for some time proved an ideal one for a picnic.

School Notes

1022 pupils enrolled on the opening of school last week: This is exactly 74 more than enrolled the corresponding week of last year. Inquiry develops the fact that the grade pupils are practically all residents of this city and the non-resident pupils appear in the high school, in which department they are entitled to enroll, as the state law governing high schools makes this provision. The three kindergarten rooms alone have 141 little children enrolled and they are all supposed to be siv years of age; at least, but few state they are five. The three seventh grade rooms have 115 in attendance and several have not yet entered.

Every room in the Central is now filled, Miss Swanson, the new 7th grade teacher, having moved into the upper southwest room with her grade this week. This seventh grade will have the same special studies and instruction as the grammar grade students who are working in the Washington under the department plan.

Teachers are instructed that pupils are at liberty to purchase their supplies where they please. Mentioning names of dealers is not permitted and every precaution is taken to be as impartial as possible.

The regulations recently issued by the state high school board, governing the normal training department, are more stringent than those of last year. The normal students, for the one year during which they take the normal work, cannot take any other outside studies except the industrial subjects; neither can pupils not enrolled in the department enter there for one or more studies. In spite of these restrictions 20 have enrolled. This is the maximum number which the law will permit to enroll.

The various courses of studies offered in the high school appear in the city papers this week. These do not include the short course of five months which begins October 31st. This course will be for young people over 16 from country and city who can attend only during the winter months. Bulletins describing the work will appear the last of September. Many changes might be suggested in the courses presented, but to one familiar with local conditions and the state requirements and restrictions, good reasons are apparent for the courses as they are printed.

Provision has been made to care for the school garden produce and the flax on the experiment plot.

A reception will be tendered the school faculty by the board of education next Friday evening at the Antlers Club rooms. This is an annual event to which every person in the city is cordially invited. No invitations will be issued and every person interested in the children, the teachers and the schools ought to attend. Music will be provided and a light lunch served.

Every graduate of the normal department for this and former years is teaching this month or will be next. But two graduates are exceptions to this statement. The young teachers are scattered from central Minnesota to the Canadian line and from Koochiching county over into the Dakotas. Their wages run from $45 to $60, the average being almost $50 per month. This part of the school is certainly paying its way, if school work is to be measured only in dollars and cents.

Grain Coming In Fast.

Grain is pouring into the city at a rapid rate and all the elevators are crowded with business to their utmost capacity. The succession of showers almost daily last week has delayed the threshing operations very seriously but a few days of warm weather will see the work a good way along.

Grain has fared better than was expected at one time and runs on an average of between 15 and 32 bushels to the acre.

More Winners at Land Drawing.

In addition to the lucky drawings of W. Beck and N. D. Boyce, five other lucky winners, of the many who registered from this city, has just been announced.

The following are the ones who will be sure of getting a homestead, with the number of their chance:

T. C. Orne,	3,015

Second Papers.

Under the present requirements it is necessary for any one desirous of taking out second papers to file their petition with the clerk of court 90 full days before the term of court at which these petitions will be heard. As the next term of court will be held in January it is necessary to file petitions not later than October 24.

Petitions can be filed any time and it would therefore seem advisable for those who want to make their application to do so now and not wait until the last days.

Violinist at Lyceum Theatre.

The management of the Lyceum Theatre has added another feature to their program which will have a tendency to make it all the more popular, and has created considerable interest among its patrons. Prof. Paul Morck, recently of International Falls, has been secured as violin soloist, and those who have been fortunate in hearing him play will not hesitate in pronouncing him a violinist of more than ordinary ability. McGoey Has Mishap Again.

Aviator Thos. McGoey, of Grand Forks, whose record as an aerialist has not altogether been a screaming success, and who attempted to make two flights daily at the Pennington county fair, has come within an inch or two of loosing his life.

The latest mishap occurred at Sauk Centre, this state, when he made his fourth unsuccessful attempt to fly from the Stearns county fair grounds over the fence and above the grounds. His self-made biplane smashed thru the high fence of the grounds and was broken, but McGoey stuck to the machine and brought it to a stand when it was half through the fence. The machine was put out of commission.

Unless McGoey's luck as an aviator suddenly changes we prophecy that his record as a high flyer will terminate in the cemetery shortly.

"In the Swim"

"Be in the swim" and "up to date" is the great cry of modern times. One feature of "up to dateness" is to read all the new books and see all the new plays that are being produced. One of the sensational productions of modern times is "The Right of Way" which made such a prominent hit in New York City. This play is an adaptation of Sir Gilbert Parker's wonderful story of the same name and will be produced by Mr. Sanford Dodge and his talented company at the Auditorium about the first week in Oct. (date will be announced later).

Our advice is to see this play even if you have to miss all others for a year. Prices to suit all.

Takes Possesion Next Week.

Harry Brummond has leased the Ogahmah hotel at Thief River Falls and will take possession on the 18th of this month. Mr. and Mrs. Brumund were up there last week and are favorably impressed with the city and its business prospects. Mr. and Mrs. Brumund have proven themselves first class hotel people and Thief River Falls can consider itself fortunate in securing them.—Walker Pilot.

"High Cost of Living"

The present high cost of living is such that one should not spend their good money on every cheap show that comes along but exercise economy by selecting only those that you will be benefited by and will be glad to remember and tell others what you have seen. Such a one is "The Right of Way" from Sir Gilbert Parker's famous story, soon to be presented here by Sanford Dodge and his splendid company. Don't miss this play even if you have to miss everything else that comes to town for a year.

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

With spring chickens running all over the place and fetching only 9 or 10 cents, there is mighty little profit in the farmer selling them and buying beef at 15 cents and bacon at 20 to 25 cents.

The items you now and then run across about making ice cream out of hailstones are interesting in a way, but it is a distinction a fellow usually likes to have claimed by some one over in the next county.

Considering the money invested and cost of keep, there is no product sold from the farm that represents so large a measure of profit as that from the poultry yard. And these profits could be increased greatly were more pains taken.

Where one wishes to keep chickens in town the Asiatic breeds are preferable to the lighter and more excitable breeds, such as the Leghorns and Black Spanish. However, the natural docility of the Cochin and Brahma should not be allowed to serve as an excuse for not making them scratch for their rations.

Ask the real estate agent representing any new section of the country if clover or alfalfa will grow there and not only have his word for it, but make him show you thrifty fields of the growing stuff. Human beings can stand any climate that alfalfa or clover can, while either one will mean forage for dairy cows or beef steers, and these will mean a living.

It is not an uncommon thing for the butter producing capacity of the offspring of a herd of common cows to be increased by from fifty to a hundred pounds per year over that of their dams as a result of the use of a prepotent purebred dairy sire. In many cases this would be the difference between shinning along on bare bones and profitable dairying, between the star boarder and the money maker.

Some little time ago a reader of these notes wrote, asking details of a method of making butter from skimmilk, which he claims he saw reference to in these notes. The writer wishes to say that no such hope has ever been held out in this department, however much he wishes such alchemy might be possible. It is impossible to make a whistle out of a pig's tail or butter out of milk from which the natural oil has been removed.

An item reported the other day in the daily press told of a farmer losing seven head of fine beeves as a result of a breaking of the wire which held the windmill in gear. A week later he found every animal in the pasture dead from thirst. This incident suggests the wisdom of keeping a closer tab on animals that may be confined at some distance from home, and particularly as in this case, where the water supply is an artificial one.

Location and rarity have much to do with determining popular feeling toward many things which are technically styled weeds. In the central and eastern states the fern is prized as a woodland plant and is used as a beautifier of lawns and gardens. On the Pacific coast it is a positive nuisance for several years following the clearing of timberland. In New England the golden rod and daisy are plant nuisances, but in the middle west rare enough to be greatly admired and used in autumn floral decorations.

A word of caution to buyers of Canada land: Notwithstanding the fact that soil and rainfall may be all that could be desired (and it's well to be pretty sure on this latter point) steer shy of any section where the grain is likely to be frozen stiff in the field just before time to cut. A friend who moved to such a district not many years ago later left for a warmer clime because he lost his grain crop three years out of five in the above manner. Farming under such conditions is altogether too tough on a fellow's nervous system, let alone the strain on his bank account.

A few weeks ago there was organized near Winchester, Ill., an alfalfa growers' association. A number of farmers already engaged in growing the legume or planning to do so met on the farm of one who has been a successful grower of the crop for the last twenty years. Naturally the new association will do all in its power to promote the growing of alfalfa, the introduction of hardy and thrifty types and the good to come from pursuing these objects is bound to be considerable. There are many localities where alfalfa growing is in its infancy, where such an organization would be of practical and definite value.

Professor Hunter, entomologist of the Kansas experiment station, who has been studying the grasshopper problem, recommends a spring disking of alfalfa fields to reduce the pest. The eggs are deposited in clusters, or pods, just beneath the surface of the ground, and stirring the soil in the manner mentioned breaks them up and destroys them. The disking suggested is also to be commended, in that it will kill many weeds just starting.

In most instances of the "bad" boy the trouble likely is not half so much due to any inherent badness as to a lack of sympathy and real interest in parent or guardian and to a failure to properly direct the outgo of his physical and nervous energy. An engine is a mighty dangerous proposition with steam up and a broken rail ahead; so, too, a team of horses in a runaway with a mower. The bad boy is like both when off the track or lacking wise guidance and restraint.

The old fashioned potato beetle has got in its work with telling effect in a good many sections this season. This chap is striped like his common relative, twice as long, and not only feeds on potato, wonderberry and clematis vines, but tackles beans, beets and most anything else that happens to be growing in the garden. It seems to be rather migratory in habit and may play smash with one garden and not touch the one over the fence. Information about this pest is more profitably got by reading than by experience.

A suggestion made a short time since in these notes is worth repetition—to the effect that any feeder who is so fixed that he can finish cattle, hogs or sheep for market during the next eight or nine months is sure to be well paid for his efforts. As a result of widespread drought many sections have been virtually depopulated of the kinds of stock mentioned. This has meant in the past a glutting of markets with underfed stuff in poor condition, which has tended to demoralize prices on all grades. Now, however, with most of this emergency stock sold, prices are improving, and they give promise of reaching very satisfactory levels.

Many a husbandman who has leveled land for purposes of irrigation has been surprised at the fact that the growth of crops was slight on soil from which the surface had been scraped, he naturally supposing that such soil, being new, would also be rich and cause plant growth. The meager growth noted is due not to a lack of fertility in the soil so much as to an improper physical condition and lack of humus or decaying vegetable matter. Such soil should be fertilized with barnyard manure and should be sown to some legume, such as vetch, soy beans or peas, and this growth turned under. Such treatment will give the necessary humus and make the soil productive.

Just as the cotton boll weevil was a blessing in disguise to the cotton grower, in that it showed him the benefits of a diversified agriculture, so the present droughty season, following on the heels of that of last year, bids fair to be a godsend to the corn belt farmer, for in the absence of sufficient hay it has practically forced him to erect silos in order to realize a maximum value from his corn crop. Hundreds of farmers are installing these fodder savers, and silo companies are swamped with orders. One season will be enough to prove their worth, and hereafter they will be filled whether the season be wet or dry. It is likely that in years to come many farmers will look back and thank the drought of 1911 for forcing them to erect silos.

The artificial leg of a farmer we read of the other day got overheated and exploded with a sound like a battleship gun, going into a thousand pieces in the midst of a cloud of smoke. This should be a solemn warning to the careless to keep shy of mower sickles and railroad tracks or to buy legs guaranteed all cork.

It is a commendable precaution to tie horses when one has to go some distance from them. True, one may leave them without tying fifty times without harm resulting. Yet the next time something may happen to frighten them, and a runaway is the result, in which vehicle or machinery may not only be damaged, but the team seriously injured. Insurance against such a fracas is worth the time required to make a team secure.

What is considered a rather unusual market incident was the sale of 280 American sheep on the Toronto (Canada) market a short time since at $5.50 per hundredweight. A duty of 58 cents a head was paid on these sheep, and they sold for 10 cents per hundredweight more than the Canadian animals. If conditions with reference to other commodities are at all like this, the new reciprocity agreement bids fair to be a boon rather than a detriment to the farmer on this side the line.

It has been quite generally supposed that seed of most any kind brought from a distance would produce better and larger crops than that grown near home. Some experiments recently concluded by the Missouri experiment station prove quite conclusively that, while this principle seems to work out all right in the case of seed potatoes, it does not hold in the case of imported seed corn. In fact, the best results have been secured with seed which was acclimated to the conditions under which it is grown.

AN EGG LAYING CONTEST.

Beginning on the first day of next November and continuing for a year, there will be held at the Missouri state poultry farm at Mountain Grove, a national egg laying contest. The expenses will be met by state funds and the contest will be held under the direction of the secretary of the Missouri poultry board, T. E. Quisenberry, who will be assisted by poultry experts from the Kansas, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota state agricultural colleges. Those in charge expect the data gathered to be of great practical value to poultry raisers and the poultry business generally. The question of economy in housing and feeding, the food value of certain diets, methods of increasing egg yields and the differences in profit between egg yields and the differences in profit pens that make the highest records and those that make a poorer showing, will be carefully studied and determined. Prizes will be given monthly to the pen which makes the best showing in egg production, to the pen which lays the greatest weight of eggs, and to the individual hens that lay the greatest number of eggs each month and for the year. The hens will also be tested for fertility and hatchability of eggs and vigor and vitality of chicks hatched therefrom. More than 150 applications have been received from poultrymen in twenty-five states, and doubtless many more entries will be made before the contest starts. Practically all of the well known laying breeds will be represented in the contest, and the announcement of the best laying breed at the close of the test will be awaited with keen interest.

ABOUT BAKED BEANS.

Properly prepared, there is scarcely any dish the good housewife can cook that surpasses a pot of baked beans, this both from the standpoint of toothsomeness and nutritive quality. But, for all this, scores of messes of beans are spoiled before being put into the oven. This comes through soaking the beans overnight and throwing away this water, boiling them up a couple of times more and doing the same. At this stage of the game the beans are just about ready to be dumped out into the back alley, as all the distinctive flavor and snap they possess have been soaked out and thrown away. If the family has been indifferent to baked beans in the past try the following: Soak the beans overnight if old and hard; if new, bring to a boil on top of the stove, add a pinch of soda, two level teaspoonfuls and a half of salt, sugar to suit, a teaspoonful of mustard—these amounts to a quart of dry beans—and bestow the pieces of pork so the rind will cook crisp. Put this combination on in the morning on baking day and serve in the evening with brown bread, boiled potatoes and sliced onions, and you have a dish fit for a king.

THE BOY AND THE STATE FAIR.

If the boy has shown evidence of a lack of interest in the farm operations and there is reason to believe that the farm work is sort of palling on him it would be a pretty good idea to take a couple of days off and go with him to the big state fair. After he has seen the blue ribbon horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, the poultry, the latest machinery, products of the field in the shape of flower and fruit and grain the chances are that the agricultural profession will advance several notches in his esteem. However, to be most effective such a visit should be followed up by an attempt on the part of this boy's father to put some of the better methods into practice on the home farm and possibly to undertake the raising of some kind of pure bred stock, giving the boy an interest in the enterprise. Such a course as the above we believe would make over literally hundreds of farm boys who find country life prosy and uninteresting and who are already beginning to gaze with longing eyes toward the cities with their brilliant lights, variety and attractiveness.

A CHIGGER CURE.

Dr. Crumbine, one time secretary of the Kansas board of health, got hold of a chigger remedy from a Texan a number of years ago and made it public. It is simple, as follows: Take a few ounces of hyposulphite of soda, which retails for about 10 cents a pound at any drug store, and make a saturated solution in a small quantity of water—that is, dissolve in the water all it will hold. Moisten or bathe spots where chiggers have burrowed. The solution apparently penetrates to them and kills them. The solution has no harmful effect aside from causing a slight smarting on parts which have been scratched or irritated. The solution will not only relieve chigger bites, but applied to the skin and allowed to dry will prevent them from working for a day or two.

THE NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.

In a resolution passed at its last session the New York legislature provided for an investigation into the sewage of cities. Those who have made a study of the matter estimate that in the cities of the Empire State alone there is a loss of $25,000,000 worth of plant food annually. This is chiefly in the form of nitrogen, and under sewage methods at present in vogue running into streams or burning is entirely lost. This certainly is a conservation problem of such proportion as to merit serious and effective attention.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Mayor Thomas E. Knotts of Gary, Ind., five of the nine members of the city council, City Engineer W. A. Williston and a son of one of the aldermen were arrested on charges of having accepted and solicited bribes in a heating franchise deal. The arrests were made on complaint of T. B. Dean of Richmond, Ky., to whom the franchise was granted and who said he had given evidence of the attempted bribery to attorneys in Chicago before the money was transferred.

Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., on the witness stand at Chesterfield, Va., where he is being tried for the murder of his wife, categorically denied that he took part in or knew anything of his cousin's purchase of the shotgun with which the witness' wife was killed. The witness likewise flatly contradicted almost the entire testimony of his cousin, particularly with regard to the alleged confession in which Henry is supposed to have said to Paul, "I wish I hadn't done it."

Henry Clay Beattie, on trial at Chesterfield Courthouse, Va., charged with the murder of his wife, was found guilty by the jury after brief consideration of the case. Only one ballot was taken, the verdict of guilty being unanimous. Beattie was sentenced to die in the electric chair on Nov. 24, but his lawyers will go to the court of appeals for a new trial.

Eighty men and boys have been arrested and placed under bond at Shady Bend, Kan., for alleged connection with the tarring and feathering ten days ago of Miss Mary Chamberlain, a young schoolteacher, by a mob. Miss Chamberlain belongs to a prominent family. The only excuse given is that she had "talked about" other women of the community.

Miss Catherine Van Wyck, nineteen years old, a niece of former Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck of New York city and of Supreme Court Justice Augustus Van Wyck, was shot and killed at Quogue, N. Y., by William A. Childs, Jr., the son of a retired dealer in electrical supplies. After killing the young woman Childs shot and killed himself.

Separate indictments accusing Nathan Allen of Kenosha, Wis., and John R. Collins of Memphis, Tenn., reputed millionaires, of smuggling gems valued at many thousands of dollars into New York, have been indicted by the federal grand jury at New York city.

Robert Bruce Watson, one of the best known young architects and contractors in Chicago, was shot by Mrs. H. B. Coney in front of his residence. The bullet struck Watson in the head and he was taken to a hospital. The woman was arrested.

Alex Peters, aged forty-eight, blew off his head at his home at Williston, N. D., after attacking his wife and six children with a hatchet. Every member of the family sustained injuries from the hatchet in the hands of the insane father.

Two more victims have fallen before the mysterious hatchet murderer, for whom the police of three counties of Washington and Oregon are searching. Mrs. Daisy Wehrmann and her four-year-old son are the latest victims.

A farmer boy derailed the "Velvet special" of the Soo line near Fremont, Wis., and as a result three men are dead, four were injured and numerous passengers were badly shaken up.

Experiments Made With Electricity on the School Children of Stockholm—German Naval Maneuvers in Norwegian Waters Causes Some Comment—Municipal Employment Bureau of Copenhagen a Success.

SWEDEN.

Experiments which have been carried on in recent years in regard to using electricity on the public school children in Stockholm are said to have met with great success. The object has been to test the beneficial nature of electricity on the human body. Hitherto it has been found possible to force the growth of vegetables by means of electricity, the currents being distributed from a powerful dynamo. This idea has been carried out successfully in several places. It was accordingly believed that the human organism was equally susceptible to this influence, through the practically continuous application of an electrically charged atmosphere to the human system. Two groups of twenty-five children each were selected, as nearly alike as possible in general health, size and weight. The respective groups were given their instruction in two rooms, both being equal in size, ventilation, lighting and other general conditions. But the group in one of the rooms was constantly exposed to the influence of the electrical currents, while the other group pursued its studies under normal conditions in the other room. After a test of several years the two groups of children have been compared and it is claimed that the "electrified" children have outstripped the others mentally and physically and that they have grown faster, put on weight more quickly and shown more physical fitness generally besides possessing superior mentality. Skepticism is displayed in some quarters and the result of the experiment is not altogether regarded as decisive. It is expected, however, that similar experiments will be conducted in some of the other schools in order to demonstrate the supposed efficacy of the electrifying process in improving the mental and physical condition of the rising population.

Professor Paul Peter Waldenstrom recently took his countrymen to task for lack of patriotism, and in a recent address he roundly scored them for emigrating in such large numbers to America. Rev. Waldenstrom said: "The trouble is that so many Swedes do not know that Sweden is a country of great opportunities. America has less liberty than Sweden." He illustrated this contention as follows: "When I came to America I had to be examined before I could land. I had to account for my name, my family, what I was going to do in America, how long I was to stay, and how much money I had. Such things are unknown in Sweden. If the examination turns out unfavorably the subject is sent back. I know persons who were too old to land—over sixty years—or too young—under sixteen."

The well known Stockholm banker, Louis Fraenckel, died in Berlin Aug. 19, while enjoying a visit with his friends in that city. The deceased was born in Aschersleben, Preussen, March 27, 1851, and went to Sweden when he was still a very young man. When the Stockholm bank found itself in a rather precarious condition Herr Fraenckel was selected as general director of the institution and since that time—1893—it has been making a wonderful progress. He was regarded as one of the leading business men of Stockholm and had a wide circle of friends, who all thought very highly of him. He was unmarried and leaves a large fortune.

Professor William H. Schofield, professor of history and literature at Harvard university, has been spending some time in Sweden. He waited upon the king, the ecclesiastical minister and the authorities of the University of Upsala, to whom he has made an interesting proposition. He is desirous of bringing about an exchange of students between the universities.

King Gustaf and Queen Victoria recently returned from Germany, where they were Emperor William's guests at the great army parade, which was held in Stettin Aug. 29. The royal pair made the trip to Germany in the Oscar II. and were accompanied thither by a Swedish torpedo cruiser.

The Swedish baritone, Percy Richards, distinguished himself at a concert in Milan recently, given under the auspices of the English colony there. He has lately been receiving many flattering offers from impresarios in the various musical centers of the Continent.

Discouraging grain reports come from Jamtland and forest fires are also reported to have done much damage in that section of the country.

NORWAY.

An exchange writer brings the following interesting situation into speculative light: "Attention has been called to German naval maneuvers in the Sognefjord. The government has encouraged foreign powers to let their warships visit Norway, but in this case it is said that the Germans have been sounding the waters through which their ships passed. More than once it has been stated that the next Trafalgar will not be on the coast of Spain, but on the coast of Norway. It is generally supposed that the great peace movement to which President Taft has given an unparalleled impetus will not accomplish its purpose until the big fellows of Europe have had a record breaking clash and this clash may occur among the skerries of Norway. And the Norwegians will try to be prepared for it according to their limited means."

During the month of September the University of Norway will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its existence. Professor Preus, president of Luther college, Decorah, Ia., was appointed to represent the Norwegian synod, and Professor Kildahl, president of St. Olaf college, Northfield, Minn., has been appointed to represent the United Synod of Norwegians on that occasion.

A cablegram from Christiania says: "The recent military riots at three different drill places have in some degree shaken confidence in the national defense. The disturbances probably were started by some young socialists. In two cases military prisoners, arrested for petty offenses, were liberated. The participants in the riots will be punished severely."

Probably the oldest minister in Norway is Rev. Anders P. Solbrackkasen. He is ninety-six years old and lives in the city of Bergen. He is not only well, but is active and lively. He has a son who is seventy years of age.

Christiania is to have a new postoffice, which is to be erected at a cost of more than half a million crowns. A site for the new postoffice was purchased the other day for 145,000 crowns.

J. D. C. Lieblein, professor of Egyptology at Christiania university, died a few days ago, aged eighty-four years. He was regarded as one of the most learned men in the country.

The technical high school in Christiania will be considerably enlarged now that the budget committee's proposition has been accepted by the storthing.

Colonel J. Bull has been appointed major general and chief of the Second Army brigade, which is at present located in Christiania.

The storthing, by a vote of 84 to 27, put asleep the proposition to deny the king's right to open or close the storthing.

Mrs. O. A. Overland, wife of the late historian, has been granted an annual pension of 1,000 crowns by the storthing.

DENMARK.

The municipal employment bureau of Copenhagen has been in existence for ten years and has just issued a report which ought to be of special interest at this time, as the government is considering the advisability of establishing similar agencies or bureaus all over the kingdom. The report of the bureau shows that during the past nine an one-half years the bureau has received applications for employment from 408,698 persons and 249,471 applications for workingmen from employers. One of the difficulties experienced by the bureau is that so many persons that apply for jobs are not in earnest and refuse to work when they really have secured a place.

Four young Helsingfor women gave a sensational exhibition in the Sundet the other day before a large crowd of people. The four young women rowed out in a boat to deep water, all jumping at one time into the water and proceeded to undress themselves. When they jumped in the water they were in their street clothes. All four girls are excellent swimmers and divers and this feat on their part is regarded as something very exceptional. The girls have received flattering offers from Berlin and London and it may be that they will decide to go there and give the same performance.

The Royal theater in Copenhagen has not made a vast amount of money during the past year, for in its surplus treasury there is only 90 ore. This is not much, but it must be remembered that during the previous season the theater run at a loss of over 44,000 crowns. Taking this into consideration the managers consider that they done very well last season and believe that during the coming theatrical season they will be able to show much better results.

Of the 8,000 persons who emigrated from Denmark in 1910, 5,657 were males and 3,223 were females. About two-thirds were between the ages of fifteen and thirty. The United States received most of them, 7,574, Canada 653, Central and South America 512, while the rest were scattered in Australia, Asia and Africa.

It is reported that the famous Thorwaldsen's museum in Copenhagen is in danger. The walls and floors of the building are damp and rotting and it is feared that the building may collapse at any time. There are some of the rarest sculptural art collections in the world in this building.

WHEN HE WOKE UP

It was a surprise to Burchard when he dropped in to call upon Sylvia to find a strange young man occupying his special chair and acting quite as much at home as though he belonged there by right.

Burchard had been calling on Sylvia for months, even years, and had sat in that particular chair innumerable times. A sensation of being ill used and injured surged through his soul as he bowed with stern cordiality to the young man.

"Mr. Gillmyer," Sylvia was saying sweetly, "is a brother of my old school friend, Dot, of whom you've heard me talk so often, Ted. He's come to Chicago to go into business. Isn't that delightful!"

"Lovely!" agreed Burchard. There really was nothing else that he could say. Speech seemed to have been smothered within him by that first wave of surprise which had overwhelmed him.

Try as he might to enter into the conversation, Burchard found himself relapsing painfully into silence every little while.

The more he thought of the situation the more indignant Burchard grew. By the time he said good evening he was able to give Sylvia the frostiest sort of nod and barely to touch the tips of her fingers. The surprise in her eyes was succeeded by a flicker of something else, which was quickly hid by her lowered lids. Burchard would have been a good deal surprised if he had known that instead of dragging herself slowly up the stairs to weep over his cruelty Sylvia dropped down on the bottom step when the front door closed and laughed.

Naturally Burchard called the next evening to atone for the coolness of his good-by. Sylvia was wearing a particularly large bunch of violets, which he eyed malignantly.

"I love violets," Sylvia said absently, patting them. "You can almost smell these!"

"Almost," Burchard repeated, bewildered.

"They're artificial," Sylvia explained. "Did they fool you?"

The bound of relief that Burchard's heart gave when he found Gillmyer had not sent the flowers was perfectly evident, but Burchard was too upset to grasp the fact. He was conscious of an inner triumph when he left at 10:30 that he had had the field to himself. But these triumphs were few, for Gillmyer bobbed up at all sorts of moments.

"He knows so few people in town," Sylvia said once. "And, really, he's awfully nice, don't you think, Ted?"

"Fine chap," agreed Burchard, with a sensation of swallowing red-hot coals.

The worst of it was that Gillmyer really was a fine chap. He broke into the Sunday night chafing dish suppers that Burchard had been wont to enjoy with Sylvia, and he cut up the cheese and beat the eggs as though that had always been his duty.

Between whiles Gillmyer invited Sylvia to go to the theater and brought her books and candy as though there was no reason why he shouldn't. The little rankling jabs attached to this phase of the situation was that there really was no reason. Yet Burchard felt outraged.

The evening he called and found to his dismay that Sylvia had gone out somewhere with Gillmyer without the preliminary of letting him know when it was his regular night to call made Burchard see stars. Women, he said to himself cuttingly as he strode home at a great pace, are fickle, unreliable, frivolous, unworthy and unnecessary cumberers of the earth. He had thought Sylvia different, but that was merely because he was an imbecile.

Burchard sat and stared at the wall for an hour, smoked three cigars and then turned in. At midnight he was still awake. "I suppose they are just about getting home now," he murmured.

It amazed him that Sylvia should show no trace of contrition, shame or concern about the manner in which she was treating him. She acted as though she was perfectly all right and appeared to have no uneasiness over Burchard's acquired gloom. On the contrary, she seemed to be having a decidedly good time. That she actually could enjoy Gillmyer's society was an agonizing blow to Burchard. His mind was such a mixture of unhappiness and bewilderment that he did not even try to figure out a solution.

He was agreeably surprised when he called one evening to find that Gillmyer was not present. He took his old chair, but sat on the extreme edge because it really wasn't all his chair any more.

"Mr. Gillmyer," Sylvia remarked, casually, "has been sent west for a month."

"Thank the Lord for that!" Burchard burst out, explosively. "I don't wish him any bad luck, but I hope the train runs off the track!"

"Why, Ted Burchard," said Sylvia, in proper horror. "The idea of your feeling that way!"

"I've just discovered how I feel," said Burchard, grimly. "And now that I know my esteemed friend Gillmyer can't break in on us at any minute and that I actually have your undivided attention, I'd like to go into details and elaborate on the subject!"

"Why, Ted!" said Sylvia again. "You amaze me! But—er—go on, please."

Caesar's Vengeance

"Ah warns you, nigger, ef Ah cotch you foolin' 'roun' dat gal any moh, Ah gwin' to kill you."

Caesar White paused and gazed at the smaller negro as some tranquil ox might regard a calf that had strayed into its pasture.

The negroes were toiling in the turpentine settlement under the burning rays of the Carolina sun. They sweated and panted as they filled the barrels and rolled the crude rosin up the incline of planks to the roof of the distillery where shone the great lid of the copper still.

Caesar White was a good-natured giant in the main, or had been until Jefferson Grant, the quadroon dude, sauntered into the camp with his collar and cuffs, and hair that shone with cocoanut oil. Then trouble arose for Mandy, the superintendent's cook, had succumbed to his fascinations.

Jefferson Grant sniffed disdainfully and resumed his labors. Every week day, except on Mondays, the distillation went on, the crude rosin, dumped into the great sill, hissing and bubbling furiously within, though to the watcher on the distillery roof there was no symptom of the commotion of the fluid inside the boiler, where a half ton of rosin simmered like molten steel.

To Caesar White, unimaginative in all other respects, the process possessed a fascination. He had pictured his rival flung into the caldron by the force of his mighty arms. One instant's agony—and flesh, bones, clothing, all traces of the quadroon would be utterly dissolved in that fiery flow.

It was a little incident that precipitated his determination. A Sunday call, a scornful word from Mandy, the sight of a lithe figure skulking through the pine trees behind the girl's hut—and Caesar White, was in the forest alone, rolling upon the ground and biting his clenched fists in a paroxysm of jealousy until the blood flowed.

Next day the two men were alone on the distillery roof. The quadroon, under Caesar's direction, was polishing the copper lid of the still, which had been raised from its position by their united efforts for this work. Deep in the gloom under them Caesar fancied he could see the gleam of the molten mass, placid as still water, but deadly as boiling lava. As Jefferson turned he stretched out his foot lazily. The quadroon tripped and fell; one push, an oath and a scream and a splash far below. Then the giant hastened away.

Shriek upon shriek pursued him. The quadroon was hard in dying. Fear drove out the foreman's anger. Those shrieks pursued him as he hurried toward his quarters. Shriek upon shriek; and now, peering in dreadful terror through his half-opened door, Caesar saw negroes running from all parts toward the still, from which issued those never-ending cries. Would the man never die? Could he live even one moment in that fearful torture? The giant trembled. He cast about him to fly. Where? Anywhere. Beads of perspiration sprang to his brow and the manhood went out from his weak limbs. He had thought to accomplish his deed unseen and unsuspected; and still those fearful cries resounded through the pine trees. He sank down inert and helpless on the dry ground.

But, mingling with the cries, came sounds of laughter. Caesar looked up aghast. From the great still, surrounded by a derisive crowd, a dripping figure emerged and staggered across the camp. Merciful heaven! It was the quadroon, woe-begone, from head to foot one slimy mass of dripping, viscid rosin. And in front of the crowd that danced and jeered and shouted was Mandy, pointing a derisive finger at this crow stripped of his plumage, this humbled dude, her love converted into harsh and bitter mockery.

And suddenly balm came to Caesar's soul. A happy smile irradiated the black's features. He chuckled and slapped his thighs.

"Lawd be praised! Lawd be praised!" he shouted fervently. "I done clean fergot that we don't light no fire under de still on Mondays."

Bird Has Become Real Pet.

"Some persons hold that a bird can not be domesticated like a toy dog but I know a Washington woman who has one that seems almost human in its intelligence," said a visitor from the capital. "The bird is a little green and yellow canary and was purchased for a small sum at an ordinary bird shop. But it has become extraordinarily attached to its owner.

"At night the bird sleeps in a little nest in its owner's pillow and wakens her in the morning by kissing her on the lips. Then during the day it will perch on her shoulder and take naps there, often kissing her. It will follow her about like a dog. The canary is never put in a cage except when its owner is leaving the house, and on one occasion I know of from observation the woman was going out, but the bird when put in its cage actually moaned piteously and its owner refused to leave it. The woman, by the way, has a great fondness for dumb creatures, and the bird seems to recognize and return that feeling."

Scared.

Kicker—They say a lion is as much afraid of a man as a man is of a lion.

Snicker—If that's the case there would be an awful panic if I started out to hunt one.

SHE MEANT WELL

"I've got a beautiful surprise for you, Tommy," said the three-months bride to her husband one morning at breakfast.

"Something to eat?" asked Tom, passing by the plate of forlorn-looking biscuits and helping himself to a piece of toast.

"Piggy-wig!" responded the three-months' bride, contemptuously. "Yes, it is something to eat, but you're not going to get it until Sunday morning. It's waffles." The three months' bride folded her small hands in her lap and beamed proudly upon her recent acquisition in the matrimonial line.

"Whew!" whistled Tom, who was always properly appreciative. "Did you ever make any, Pudge?"

"No," said the three months' bride. "But I have a perfectly lovely set of waffle irons that one of the girls gave me at my kitchen shower, and I'm just crazy to use them."

The young wife rose half an hour earlier than usual the next Sunday morning. She spread out the cook book on the table.

"'Two eggs,'" she chanted to herself. "It doesn't say whether to beat them separately or not, but I want these to be the finest waffles that ever were, so I'll beat them separately."

She broke the eggs into two dishes, humming a little song as she did so. Then she leaned again over her culinary guide, philosopher and friend.

"'One cup of sour milk,'" she read. "Now, there's your sour milk. 'Half a teaspoonful of salt.' There's your salt. 'Flour to make a good batter.' Oh, dear, I do hate recipes that don't tell exactly how much to put in. 'Half teaspoonful soda.' I'm always afraid to use soda, so I'll just use baking powder instead, for it's so much safer. It doesn't say which thing to put in first, so I'll just put them all in at once. 'Have the waffle irons sizzling hot as soon as your batter is ready.' Why, the batter's all ready and I haven't begun to heat the irons."

She bustled around and presently an odor of well-cooked ironware began to fill the room. The young wife dampened a finger and applied it daintily to the outside of the waffle iron.

"Psst!" the waffle iron remarked.

"I guess you're hot enough," said the young wife, happily. "This batter looks rather queer and bubbly, but I suppose it's all right. Now, here goes."

She carefully opened the irons and deposited a spoonful of batter in each receptacle. Then she closed them and waited a few minutes. An odor of neatly browning waffles and very smelly waffle irons rose to her nostrils and gradually filled the room. A worried crease began to show on her smooth forehead.

She took a hasty peep at the cook book, but it was unrelentingly silent on the subject. An odor of burning drew her back to the stove. She took hold of the handle of the iron on the northeast corner and tried gently to raise it. It refused to move. Then she gave it a little jerk. Still there was no response. She gave it a still more decided jerk and the iron opened with a suddenness that can be ascribed only to the total depravity of inanimate things.

It opened its jaws with a vicious pop and then shut them again with a clap that made the young wife dance away from the stove and cover both eyes with her hands under the impression that they were full of red hot batter. In the rebound she came up against the pan of batter and it fell to the floor with a crash. By this time the room was filled with the pungent smell of burning waffles. With the one idea in her mind of avoiding the catastrophe of having her living room curtains permeated with the awful odor, the young wife seized the hot iron with her bare hand.

At this crucial moment the little demons that preside over such annoying affairs moved Tom, the large and innocent, to open the door. Ignorant that the situation was explosive in a high degree, he called, jovially:

"Breakfast ready, Pudge?"

Driven to frenzy by the sight of the immaculate and self-satisfied looking masculine thing, the young wife gave a wild, unhuman bellow. Then she deliberately kicked the offending waffle iron to the other side of the room.

In terrible crises we sometimes have almost preternatural intuitions. Tom's behavior upon this occasion was almost uncanny in its intelligence. He spoke no word, he made no offer of resistance. He beat a hasty retreat, while the once happy bride flung furious words after him.

"I hate you," she cried, "and I hate and loathe being married. I despise you and everything in this house and I wish I had died before I saw you!"

Then with a final little squeal she threw the spoon which she held in her hand at Tom's retreating back, but it merely crashed into the wall and fell upon the floor with a clatter. She gave it a parting kick which sent it under the sink, then she fled out of the kitchen into her own room and slammed and locked the door.

Tom, like the really lovely creature that he was, softly returned to the kitchen, cleaned it up after his own peculiar though sincere fashion, made himself some toast, and an hour later was furnishing a stalwart shoulder for a repentant young wife to shed tears copiously upon.

Very Special

"Lamprett told me about it," explained Beaver, as he put a small drug store package down on the table. "He said it cured his indigestion and was the finest thing out. It's none of your patent medicines, either, but a good, plain, old-fashioned remedy that our grandmothers used—it's boneset! Ever hear of boneset tea?"

Mrs. Beaver shuddered. "I can taste it now," she moaned. "They fed it to me when I was an innocent, helpless child too young to hurl the stuff through the window and smash the furniture in protest! I think I had ague or something. Just as I would begin to feel a little bit comfortable and less achy my mother or my Aunt Amelia would appear through the kitchen door with a white apron tied about her waist and bearing carefully a steaming bowl that contained a quart or more. The deadly black fluid within gave off a noxious vapor, and I would begin cringing.

"'Now, now!' the cupbearer would say, in the comfortable tone of the surgeon who assures you it is not going to hurt very much, 'it's only your boneset tea! Drink it down right quick and you won't mind it!' Mind it! Why, John Henry Beaver, boneset tea is the quintessence of all the bitterness in the whole world. And you are deliberately planning to take it—"

"Nonsense!" said Beaver. "You women are all nerves! I guess it isn't very bad, and it certainly looks harmless—just little dried leaves! Lamprett said it cured his indigestion!"

"It would cure anything!" asserted Mrs. Beaver, resignedly, as she took the package and obediently prepared to make the required dose. "That is, after you get the taste of it in your mouth you haven't time to fuss much with typhoid or smallpox or leprosy, or whatever it is ails you! All your energy is required in your efforts to forget the boneset! Mere indigestion is a happy little picnic compared to what you'll experience when you try to drink this stuff! Oh, I'll make it for you! Don't you worry!"

Beaver, compelled to demonstrate man's superiority to unpleasantness of that sort, drank the tea to the last drop. "That was fine!" he said with chattering teeth, as he finished. "I believe I'll lie down a bit!"

He huddled in a shrinking heap, with his face buried in the sofa cushions. Mrs. Beaver heartlessly laughed. Then she put the package of boneset on a shelf where reposed supplies not in daily use. She was quite sure Beaver would not want it again very soon.

Quite a large number of callers dropped into the Beavers' house the next Sunday afternoon and at dusk the tea cart was trundled in by the maid bearing things to drink and various delightful edibles. Everybody gathered around the open fire and Mrs. Beaver began to pass plates and napkins.

"You'll all have tea, of course?" she inquired, amiably, proceeding to pour it without waiting for an answer. "You really must have tea, whether you care for it or not, because I pride myself on my tea—I get a special brand and I insist on people drinking it and liking it! This was three dollars a pound, I'd have you good people know, and it has the fragrance of the flowers and the fields and fresh air. I call it nectar!"

Everybody took tea, naturally.

"It's a little darker than usual," commented Mrs. Beaver, as she poured. "Oh, Doctor Biggs! You never—"

Doctor Biggs hastily took up the cup he had set down. "Perhaps if I could have some more sugar," he suggested, resignedly. He put five lumps more into his cup.

"Don't be so greedy," said the banker, seizing upon the sugar bowl. "Other people'd like some of that sugar."

"I never saw people use so much sugar!" commented Mrs. Beaver, frowning. "You'll simply spoil the flavor of the tea. Why, Mrs. Biggs, don't you—"

"I rarely drink tea!" said Mrs. Biggs firmly, as she set down her cup as far as possible from herself. "You must excuse me!" She looked pale.

Gazing around the room, Mrs. Beaver saw to her amazement that all the company had set down their cups, and were feverishly eating cake. In a far corner her husband was twining himself over a bookcase and muttering things that sounded like "Fragrance of flowers—and fields—oh, lovely!"

VOL XXVIII THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21 1911 NUMBER 39

TO BE ERECTED SOON

Pres. Pennington Gives Reassurance of New Soo Depot in the Near Future.

Structure to be Large Enough to Care For Business For all Time.

While in Minneapolis last week several local parties were in consultation with President Pennington of the Soo Line regarding the spur track which is to be built from the main track to the site of the proposed new auxiliary steam plant and fire hall, and which will be constructed if the city secures a right-of-way.

In speaking of the proposed new depot for this city Mr. Pennington is cited as stating that the depot will be constructed in the near future but did not definitely give out the time the work will be commenced, but that it has been under consideration for some time, and that with the present increase in business it is just a matter of a short time when larger quarters will become an absolute necessity.

In speaking of the inadequacy of the present depot Mr. Pennington stated that while the general public have suffered some inconvenience thru the crowded conditions, no one has realized the fact more than the railway company themselves, and the reason why the work has been delayed this long is the fact that the building to be erected will be so constructed as to take care of the business for years to come and not only to remedy the conditions as they are just at present.

Prominent Residents Leave.

The families of J. J. Crowe and C. A. Nason departed last Friday afternoon for Rose Lake, Idaho, where they go to join Mr. Crowe and Mr. Nason who had preceded them to their home. In these this city loses two of its most prominent families and it was with keen regret that our citizens learned of their plans to leave our midst.

Mr. Crowe has been manager of the local saw mill for a number of years and has been numbered among the city's foremost business men. Mr. Nason, who has held a responsible and lucrative position in the lumber offices, has also been a resident in this city for years. Among Mr. Nasons numerous activities where he will be missed most will be his absence on the ball team, on which his assistance has more than once turned the tables on the enemy and won for the locals the game and fame.

These families have been active, as well, in the social circles from which they will be greatly missed.

Quite a number of the residents gathered at the depot to wish them safety on their journey and success and happiness in their new home.

Mileage Good After Sept. 15.

The cost of traveling in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and North Dakota was reduced by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads Sept. 15 to all persons who are users of mileage books. These two railroads have put on sale mileage books the rates for which in any one of the states went into effect on that date, while for interstate traffic they will go into effect on Oct. 10.

A book for 1,000 miles good in Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota is sold for $25, making the rate per mile 2½ cents. Books for 3,000 miles in three states is sold for $60, or 2 cents per mile. Books of 3,000 miles, interchangeable, will be sold for $75. These books will be good on any road in the Northwest, west of the Mississippi, excepting the Soo Line and the Canadian railroads.

Teacher's Reception.

A reception was given for the benefit of the teachers of the public schools of this city at the Antlers Club Rooms last Friday evening. An excellent program was arranged and among the numbers were the addresses of welcome by Prof. J. H. Hay and Rev. [illegible] of the Presbyterian church. Miss [illegible] very ably rendered a vocal solo which was followed by an instrumental selection by Miss Ruth Godward. Among the other instrumental selections was a duet by Miss Ramstad and Mr. Kjomme, and a number of Scotch folk songs by Mr. Salvorson.

Among the distinguished guests from out of town who were present, was Ex. Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston who delivered a very charming address.

The address of Dr. Gambell met with an abundance of merit and brought forth a volley of applause.

After the completion of the program a social dance was given.

Old Timer Here.

Allen W. Clark, "father of the big ditches," was down from his home at Rollis one day last week. Everyone in this part of the country knows Mr. Clark as he is one of the old timers of Minnesota and particularly the northern part of the state, having settled in St. Paul in 1851. He served through the Civil War in Co. "G" Fourth Minnesota Volunteers, under Gen. John B. Sanburn, who had Mr. Clark appointed U. S. Commissioner up in this country through efficient work done while serving in the army.

In commenting on the crop conditions in his part of the country Mr. Clark says he threshed 133½ bushels of winter rye off less than three acres, and that his flax on the experiment plots, conducted by F. De Hungerford of the state university, will yield more than 15 bushels to the acre.

Mr. Clark says that he has been urged and has been pledged the support of many of his friends and may decide to enter the race for the state legislature at the coming campaign.

Protection to Gardens.

Vine products, such as tomatoes and cucumbers should be protected by covering, or should be gathered immediately if they are ripe, in order to insure against loss by frost, according to agricultural authorities.

A frost may occur in the country around Thief River Falls at any time now. The temperature early yesterday morning was 36 deg., which temperature with calm, clear atmosphere, will produce a frost. A comparatively light frost will damage tomatoes and cucumbers and the careful gardener will watch conditions from now on and will cover his garden products at the least intimation that a frost may occur.

Roots will not be injured by a frost which will kill the surface vegetation, so that no precautions are necessary against damage to products that are still in the ground.

Potatoes should be allowed to remain in the ground for about two weeks longer, according to A. B. Hostetter, superintendent of agriculture of the Duluth Commercial club. Mr. Hostetter says that farmers should be careful not to place immature potatoes on the market, as they will not bring as good a price as potatoes fully matured and the quality will be such as to damage the market.

"Late varieties of potatoes should be allowed to remain in the ground until they are fully ripened and matured," said Mr. Hostetter. "Prematurely digging of potatoes is a mistake that should be avoided and the farmers will find that by holding off a little longer, they will get much more satisfactory results."

The Cigar Test is the Cigar Flavor.

A strong cigar is a wrong cigar. The nervousness has been left out of the [illegible] [illegible] cigar.

SOME BIG YIELDS

Reports From the Country Indicate a Good Crop this Fall.

Frequent Rains Prove a Handicap to Threshing Operations.

Reports from the country are to the effect that the crop yield is taking on a very bright aspect, and is considerably better than it was figured before harvest had begun. While in the early part of the season reports of black rust were circulated it has been found since that it was not black rust at all and where any rust was found a very small percentage of the crop has been affected, and this has been reported only on a very few places in this vicinity.

The frequent rains recently have handicapped the farmers to a great extent in their threshing operations, but with a few days of warm weather the work will be resumed again.

As a whole this year will be a better one for the farmers in this part of the state than any in years past, and inasmuch as the crop conditions in different parts of the state and North Dakota are turning out to be more or less a failure the market, it is expected will keep up high, and the farmer can expect to command a good price for his products.

Mr. Ole Halsa, who resides about 4 miles east and 3 miles north of this city, asserts that after his products have been marketed, he expects to realize from them in the neighborhood of $3,000 and $4,000 off from his 160 acre farm.

Jumped Their Board Bill.

Frank Wagner and Geo. Carpenter, two "chimney sweeps" who had been operating in this city for some time were brought before Judge Bishop last Saturday on a charge of "jumping" their board bill at the Northern Hotel, about the latter part of August.

The two were apprehended by the Canadian authorities at Emerson and were turned over to Sheriff LaBree at Noyes, who brought them to this city. The fine imposed was the court costs and expenses.

70 Pound Squash.

Lars Thorson, who resides north of this city, has a record for raising large vegetables that is hard to beat. While in the city the other day Mr. Thorson brought in a squash that tipped the scale at 70 pounds, and which is now on display at Dan Shaw's office.

Last year Mr. Thorson raised a pumpkin that weighed 115 pounds.

These huge specimens goe to show the fertility of the soil of northern Minnesota.

Grand Theatre Closed.

The Grand Theatre was closed last Monday and will remain closed for a number of weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Mc Query, who are operating the show, left last Friday evening for Minneapolis where they will remain for some time visiting relatives. Mr. McQuery expects to return to this city in about six weeks and will open his theatre to the public again.

Martin Berg, who resides about three miles east of this city, also reports an excellent crop. From the six or seven acres of flax, which he has threshed, he had a yield of 20 bushels to the acre, and expects the other 35 acres, sown later, to yield in that neighborhood.

JOHNSON RESIGNS

Agent of Bureau of Indian Affairs Holds Ideas Opposed to Those of Interior Department.

His Activity in Minnesota Caused Enforcement of Old Treaties in Northern Section.

Because his views regarding suppression of the liquor traffic among the Indians did not coincide with those of the officials of the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs, W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, of New York, chief special liquor officer of the bureau, famed from coast to coast and particularly in Minnesota has resigned.

Acting Secretary of the Interior Adams said in Washington that no fault had been found with Mr. Johnson's integrity of administration or of his character. Both the department of the interior and Mr. Johnson himself, said Secretary Adams, thought it would be better that he quit the service because certain views he held regarding the administration of his office did not coincide with those held by the department.

It was through Johnson's activity that the famous prohibition clause of the old Indian treaties was enforced in Northern Minnesota last year, causing a storm of futile protest from citizens.

"In Minnesota he began his actual work in the northern part known as the Indian country, about in March of 1909. At that time he went into the country and investigated conditions surrounding the sale of liquor to the Indians on the Cass Lake, Mahnomen and Red Lake reservations. In June of 1909 his first order went into effect closing many saloons. Through the Indian agent at Mahnomen he gave thirty days time for the saloonkeepers to quit business and when they failed he, in accordance with his order, came to Minneapolis, where he met some of his chief deputies and went north, where he swore in others. In July he had men in every town in the then restricted district and one morning at 10 o'clock in each town the deputies descended and confiscated all liquor, throwing out whiskey, alcohol and like spirits. No beer was spilt because Johnson did not know just where the law stood in the matter of beer, but did know in the matter of spirits.

Then at Mahnomen they arrested Johnson and eight of his deputies. This incident is still fresh in the minds of the people of the state. Johnson and his men had smashed the saloons and dumped the whiskey and they arrested them. He said he was working under the treaty of 1855. The prisoners were taken to Crookston and their case came up before Judge Page Morris at Duluth. They were set free.

Grand Opening. Friday. Sept. 29.

"A NEW DEPARTURE"

Mr. Sanford Dodge, so long indentified with the classic drama has secured "The Right of Way" for this season. This is a dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's beautiful novel by Eugene Presbrey. It was originally produced at Wallack's theatre, New York City by Klaw & Erlange and is one of the most powerful dramas of modern times. The character of Charley Steele, the brilliant criminal lawyer, Joe Portugais his French Canadian friend, Rosalie Evanturel, the rose of the mountain and many of the other roles are already stage classics. Not to have seen this wonderful play is to miss seeing one of the world's greatest modern dramatic creations. Mr. Dodge will present this play at the Auditorium, Sept. 29. The scale of prices will be made such that everyone who desires, may attend. Tickets on sale at Peoples Drug Store, Phone No. 211.

Price of Paper.

Editor Wheelock of Fergus Falls announces that on Jan. 1st 1912 he will raise the subscription price of his paper to $1.50 a year. This is a wise move on his part. The great advance in the price of every item that enters into the cost of a weekly paper, makes an advance in subscription price imperative. It is absolutely impossible to publish a readable weekly paper for a dollar a year. It is only by drawing on the advertising and job departments that the publisher can make ends meet. This is not as it should be. The editor of this paper is pleased to follow the example set by Mr. Wheelock, and hereby announces that beginning on Jan. 1, 1912, the price of the News will be $1.50 a year. During the coming months, those who desire to do so may pay in advance at the rate of $1 a year for one or more years.

"THE RIGHT OF WAY"

Mr. Sanford Dodge has surrounded himself with a splendid company this season and will be seen in "The Right of Way". This great play is an adaption from Sir Gilbert Parker's famous story of the same name, the dramatization being made by America's greatest playwright, Eugene Presbrey.

"The Right of Way" was originally produced at Wallack's theatre, New York City by Klaw & Erlanger and it immediately became the sensation of the theatrical world. Not to have seen it is to miss seeing one of the most talked of dramatic productions of modern times. Mr. Sanford Dodge will present this splendid new play at the Auditorium, Sept 29. He carries a car load of new scenery and properties and the production will be first class. Prices will be made to suit all. Dont miss this great dramatic event, even if you do not go to another show for a year.

H. H. Aaker Out for Governor.

The first candidate to make formal announcement of his gubernational aspirations for 1912 is H. H. Aaker of Fargo. He is a Progressive Republican and was a candidate at last year's primaries, receiving about 12,000 votes. He is at the head of a business college there and formerly lived in Moorhead, where he was mayor and head of Concordia college.

MAYOR DUMAS OF CASS LAKE INDICTED

Attempted Arson in Third Degree Is the Charge.

"Attempted arson in the third degree," reads the indictment of the Beltrami county grand jury returned against Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake.

Although the maximum penalty on this charge is but three and one-half years it is the most serious offense that can be charged as a result of Dr. Dumas' alleged conspiracy to rob and burn the postoffice and general store building at Puposky on the night of June 16 last, when Martin Behan and Mike Davis were fired upon and Behan was captured. Dr. Dumas was arrested the next day in Hibbing for complicity in the crime.

Dr. Dumas was arraigned in district court at Bemidji before Judge C. W. Stanton. Marshall A. Spooner, acting for the defendant, entered a plea of not guilty. After a short consultation with Assistant Attorney General Jones and E. E. McDonald of this city, who is assisting the state, it was agreed that the case should come up for trial next Wednesday morning.

TAWNEY WILL BE PROMOTED

May Be Made Chairman of Boundary Waterways Commission.

Former Representative J. A. Tawney probably will become chairman of the American section of the International boundary waterways commission, as a result of the death of Thomas H. Carter of Montana. Mr. Tawney, Mr. Carter and Frank H. Streeter of New Hampshire were appointed members of the commission by President Taft. Upon the organization of the commission Mr. Carter, on motion of Mr. Tawney, was named chairman. With the death of Senator Carter Mr. Tawney becomes the ranking member of the commission. The new chairman probably will be elected as soon as the vacancy on the commission caused by Senator Carter's death is filled.

ANSWERS BUT FEW QUERIES

Wheelock on Stand in Minnesota Training School Case.

Ralph W. Wheelock, private secretary to Governor Eberhart, like the governor himself, escaped a grilling examination in the Whittier hearing before the state board of control through technicalities of the law.

Mr. Wheelock was on the witness stand for nearly an hour and was bombarded with pertinent questions by Judge Frank Wilson, attorney for Superintendent Frank Whittier, but was allowed to answer only a few.

Such questions as were ruled material Mr. Wheelock answered fully and frankly, as when he admitted that he knew nothing of his own knowledge prior to the hearing of the abuses charged in the complaint.

REWARD ON SLAYER'S HEAD

Bullet Which Passed Through Body of Mrs. Bolton Found.

The state has made no headway in its search for "Jim," the farmhand wanted for the murder of Mrs. Walter Bolton and F. E. Rhodes on a lonely farm in Anoka county. Sheriff John Casey received reports that suspects had been captured at Elk River and Madison, Minn., but when an effort was made to confirm the news it was learned no arrests have been made at either place.

County Attorney Albert Pratt announced that $200 reward will be given by Anoka county for information leading to the arrest of the double murderer.

At the Bolton farm the bullet which killed Mrs. Bolton was found in the wall of the cellar. It had passed through the kitchen floor, indicating that the woman was killed in the kitchen with a rifle.

UPHELD BY LOWER COURT

Minnesota's "Seven-Senators" Amendment to Go on Ballot.

Judge W. E. Hale of the Hennepin county district court, sitting at Minneapolis, decided that the "seven-senators" amendment to the state constitution proposed by the last legislature should be placed on the general election ballot next year for approval or rejection by the people.

He denied the petition of Representatives Charles R. Fowler and W. D. Washburn, Jr., who sued as taxpayers for an injunction to restrain Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state, from placing the amendment on the ballot.

The plaintiffs announced that they will appeal to the supreme court.

The bill proposes an amendment to the constitution limiting the number of state senators to seven from any one county.

Lawler Files for Senator.

Daniel W. Lawler, former mayor of St. Paul, was the first man to file for office under provisions of the Keefe bill passed at the last session of the legislature providing for election of United States senators by direct vote. He seeks the Democratic nomination, subject to the action of the primaries Sept. 17, 1912.

TAKES LIFE IN BATH.

W. H. Tucker Shoots Himself In Brain at St. Paul Hotel.

Lying in a bathroom just off his room in the Boardman hotel at St Paul, a revolver in his hand and a bullet hole through his head, William H. Tucker, assistant treasurer of the Minneapolis General Electric company, was found dead by Detective William Springer of the St. Paul police department. A chambermaid had attempted to open the door of the room, but found it locked and as Tucker had not been seen since he retired to his room the previous night the proprietor called in the detective to force the door.

A. W. Leonard, general manager of the Minneapolis General Electric company, believes that a nervous breakdown, due to overwork and a possibility of a delinquency in getting up his balance, is the cause of Tucker's suicide.

AN EGG LAYING CONTEST.

Beginning on the first day of next November and continuing for a year, there will be held at the Missouri state poultry farm at Mountain Grove, a national egg laying contest. The expenses will be met by state funds and the contest will be held under the direction of the secretary of the Missouri poultry board, T. E. Quisenberry, who will be assisted by poultry experts from the Kansas, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota state agricultural colleges. Those in charge expect the data gathered to be of great practical value to poultry raisers and the poultry business generally. The question of economy in housing and feeding, the food value of certain diets, methods of increasing egg yields and the differences in profit between egg yields and the differences in profit pens that make the highest records and those that make a poorer showing, will be carefully studied and determined. Prizes will be given monthly to the pen which makes the best showing in egg production, to the pen which lays the greatest weight of eggs, and to the individual hens that lay the greatest number of eggs each month and for the year. The hens will also be tested for fertility and hatchability of eggs and vigor and vitality of chicks hatched therefrom. More than 150 applications have been received from poultrymen in twenty-five states, and doubtless many more entries will be made before the contest starts. Practically all of the well known laying breeds will be represented in the contest, and the announcement of the best laying breed at the close of the test will be awaited with keen interest.

ABOUT BAKED BEANS.

Properly prepared, there is scarcely any dish the good housewife can cook that surpasses a pot of baked beans, this both from the standpoint of toothsomeness and nutritive quality. But, for all this, scores of messes of beans are spoiled before being put into the oven. This comes through soaking the beans overnight and throwing away this water, boiling them up a couple of times more and doing the same. At this stage of the game the beans are just about ready to be dumped out into the back alley, as all the distinctive flavor and snap they possess have been soaked out and thrown away. If the family has been indifferent to baked beans in the past try the following: Soak the beans overnight if old and hard; if new, bring to a boil on top of the stove, add a pinch of soda, two level teaspoonfuls and a half of salt, sugar to suit, a teaspoonful of mustard—these amounts to a quart of dry beans—and bestow the pieces of pork so the rind will cook crisp. Put this combination on in the morning on baking day and serve in the evening with brown bread, boiled potatoes and sliced onions, and you have a dish fit for a king.

THE BOY AND THE STATE FAIR.

If the boy has shown evidence of a lack of interest in the farm operations and there is reason to believe that the farm work is sort of palling on him it would be a pretty good idea to take a couple of days off and go with him to the big state fair. After he has seen the blue ribbon horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, the poultry, the latest machinery, products of the field in the shape of flower and fruit and grain the chances are that the agricultural profession will advance several notches in his esteem. However, to be most effective such a visit should be followed up by an attempt on the part of this boy's father to put some of the better methods into practice on the home farm and possibly to undertake the raising of some kind of pure bred stock, giving the boy an interest in the enterprise. Such a course as the above we believe would make over literally hundreds of farm boys who find country life prosy and uninteresting and who are already beginning to gaze with longing eyes toward the cities with their brilliant lights, variety and attractiveness.

A CHIGGER CURE.

Dr. Crumbine, one time secretary of the Kansas board of health, got hold of a chigger remedy from a Texan a number of years ago and made it public. It is simple, as follows: Take a few ounces of hyposulphite of soda, which retails for about 10 cents a pound at any drug store, and make a saturated solution in a small quantity of water—that is, dissolve in the water all it will hold. Moisten or bathe spots where chiggers have burrowed. The solution apparently penetrates to them and kills them. The solution has no harmful effect aside from causing a slight smarting on parts which have been scratched or irritated. The solution will not only relieve chigger bites, but applied to the skin and allowed to dry will prevent them from working for a day or two.

THE NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.

In a resolution passed at its last session the New York legislature provided for an investigation into the sewage of cities. Those who have made a study of the matter estimate that in the cities of the Empire State alone there is a loss of $22,000,000 worth of plant food annually. This is chiefly in the form of nitrogen, and under sewage methods at present in vogue running into streams or burning is entirely lost. This certainly is a conservation problem of such proportion as to merit serious and effective attention.

TRIBUTE TO HINCKLEY DEAD

Governor and Other Officials at Seventeenth Anniversary.

People of Northern Minnesota paid their tribute to the pioneers of the Minnesota forests when they gathered around the granite shaft in the little cemetery near Hinckley where lie the remains of more than half of those that perished in the fire which devastated that village and much of the adjoining territory seventeen years ago.

The annual memorial exercises took added interest this year on account of the presence of the governor of the state and other high officials, who added their tribute to those who had given their lives while opening up a new country.

TAFT'S DATES IN MINNESOTA

Will Make Opening Speech at Mankato Oct. 24.

President William H. Taft will begin his Minnesota speechmaking on his "swing around the circle," at Mankato, the home of Governor A. O. Eberhart, arriving there at 10:30 in the morning of Tuesday, Oct. 24. Thence he will go to Minneapolis, arriving at 7:30 in the evening. He will spend the night in Minneapolis, and the next day he will be in the hands of the St. Paul reception committee, leaving St. Paul at 11:15 Wednesday evening.

This information was received by Governor Eberhart in a telegram from Charles D. Hilles, President Taft's private secretary.

Clapp Says President Doesn't Know How to Handle People.

"The knowledge that he has no chance of re-election has made President Taft ill tempered, dictatorial and bullheaded."

This is the opinion of Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota, expressed in an interview before his departure from Long Beach, Cal., for Fresno.

"Taft doesn't know how to handle the people," Clapp continued, "and nobody knows that better than Taft himself. This knowledge has made him sour, peevish and fretful."

Two thousand persons heard Clapp defend the initiative, referendum, recall and woman's suffrage.

TWO DIE IN DULUTH BAY

Sewer Workmen Try to Climb Out Over Each Other.

Two workingmen who accidentally slipped into the bay at the foot of a sewer at Duluth tried to climb out over each other in getting out of the place and in the struggle which followed both were drowned.

They were George Gurich, aged thirty years, and Steve Nevich, aged twenty-five. A small boy living in the neighborhood was the only eyewitness.

Neither man could swim. One stood on the other's shoulders and tried to get up the muddy bank. He failed and then the other tried. Finally both gave up the struggle and sank.

St. Paul Postal Bank Opens.

The deposits of the first day of the St. Paul postal savings bank were $5,448. From the time the bank opened until it closed there were dozens lined up constantly waiting for a chance to make a deposit. The accounts opened were 141 and 144 deposits were made, three making two deposits each.

A Political Genius.

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, as he had not managed to make himself a power in congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said, "You live near the center of the United States, don't you?" "Yes." "Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district?" The congressman introduced the bill, and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next congress, and, although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee, his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes in color like a marine chameleon. It would appear, from studies of this creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissue of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

Corrected Him.

A reporter was once interviewing Thomas A. Edison.

"And you, sir," he said to the inventor, "made the first talking machine?"

"No," Mr. Edison replied, "the first one was made long before my time—out of a rib."

Three Not of a Kind.

Sir Henry Maine's famous political diagnosis is worth quoting. The king of England reigns, but does not govern. The president of the United States governs, but does not reign. The president of France neither reigns nor governs.—Boston Herald.

A young hen will lay more eggs than an old one, but with a goose the reverse is true, her eggs being more numerous and larger as well.

The runt is usually an unprofitable proposition, whether calf, pig or chicken. On this account it pays to keep the young stuff in a thrifty, growing condition from the start.

As a rule the cheapest pork to produce is that which is made in the shortest time. This same thing is true of beef and explains why baby beef is the most profitable that can be grown.

The bacon and corn fed hogs are types that are doubtless more due to a definite practice of feeding than to any other set of influences, as either type begins to change if given the other conditions of feed.

The limit which several states name for cutting roadside weeds is such as to permit most weeds to mature a prolific crop of seeds before their heads are taken out, and the law referred to belongs to this class.

Cider may be kept sweet a long time by taking the juice as it comes from the press, gradually heating it to a temperature of about 180 degrees F., holding it there for ten minutes and bottling at once in clean, sterilized, air tight bottles.

The average American hen lays eighty eggs a year, when if given proper care she should produce 150 eggs. That this second estimate is modest is shown in the fact that individual hens of certain breeds have laid as high as 260 eggs in a year.

It is probably just as well all around that up to the present time a wise Providence has withheld from mankind the secret of influencing or regulating the matter of sex. Human beings have about all they can look after as things are without this responsibility.

Near Forest Grove, in the Willamette valley in western Oregon, the wild deer that make their haunts in nearby mountain cover are said to be acquiring the prune eating habit. The animals have grown so bold that they jump fences and pull the fruit from the trees.

There are nineteen mines in the United States that produce quicksilver. Fifteen of these are located in California, two in Nevada and two in Texas. The production of this metal for the year 1910 was 20,601 casks of seventy-five pounds each, having a value of $958,153, or $46.51 a flask.

A thought that comes involuntarily to mind as one passes through orchards these days where all kinds of fruit is rotting under the trees is the pity of it that thousands upon thousands of the poorer classes of our large cities could not be provided with some of this waste. Seldom do such folks have a bite of fresh fruit, yet there seems no feasible plan by which it can be got to them unless railroads or philanthropists should provide free transportation.

There is little wonder that the growing of alfalfa needs no encouragement in sections where it has been demonstrated it will do well. This remark is prompted by noting recently the case of a Kansas farmer who harvested 178 bushels of alfalfa seed from eleven acres, or an average of 15.59 bushels per acre. The owner refused $8 per bushel for it, which would mean even at this price a return of $120.60 per acre. Besides this, its owner will get one or two cuttings of hay.

It will be an excellent idea during the next few weeks to run over the young orchard set last spring, cut out all but from four to six of the lateral branches and trim these back to from twelve to fifteen inches in length. This work is important, as it is this that determines the shape and nature of the head or frame. Another advantage of pruning at this time lies in the fact that the portions of the limbs remaining will thicken up and become thoroughly mature before cold weather sets in.

A friend who has a twenty acre tract that was badly infested with quack grass for a number of years tells us that year before last, when it was in its glory, he summer fallowed and killed it that year at a cost of about $240. He kept on it continuously through the summer season 250 head of sheep and that during this interval it furnished more feed than any grass or combination of grasses [illegible] he knows of. But in view of his experience in getting the land free from it he does not favor resorting to it as a pasture grass.

THE CEMENT PAINT.

A reader of these notes who is planning to do some outside painting wishes to know the recipe for making the government whitewash, or the White House paint. For the benefit of this reader and others who may be interested we give the recipe again, which is as follows: Slack one-half bushel of stone lime, using enough boiling water to keep it from burning, and keep well covered during the process. When the slacking process is finished add enough more hot water so that it will be possible to strain the solution through a fine strainer—brass or a couple thicknesses of gunny sacking. Next dissolve a peck of salt in warm water; also prepare three pounds of rice boiled to a thin paste. The rice and limewater should first be carefully stirred together while hot and the salt water then added and stirred in. To this add one-fourth pound of Spanish whiting and one pint of liquid glue. This recipe will give about seven gallons, and, if there should not be as much as this, hot water should be added to give the desired amount. Various tints can be given this paint by stirring in dry colors. The paint will give the best results if used hot and should be stirred at frequent intervals to keep the several ingredients thoroughly mixed.

HOGGING DOWN CORN.

The wisdom of hogging down corn seems to depend on whether the fencing needed to carry it out satisfactorily will come to more than the saving effected by having the hogs do the husking. Two years' experiments conducted by the Minnesota station showed that hogs in a cornfield required only two-thirds as much feed to make a given amount of gain as did those kept in a dry lot, while those in the field made as much gain in seventy-five days as did dry lot hogs in a hundred days. The field hogs seemed to be the more thrifty and to eat their rations with a good deal more relish. Pigs weighing a hundred pounds or more make the most rapid gains under field conditions. Before being turned into the corn they should be fed new corn in the dry lot in gradually increasing amounts, so that they won't have their system upset by contracting the scours. The field to be hogged down should be fenced off in such manner that there will be an average of from a dozen to twenty pigs per acre, depending somewhat upon their size.

SMUT IN WHEAT.

Smut, a disease which causes kernels of small grain to bloat and to become filled with black, ill smelling spores, can be held in check effectively by treating the seed just before sowing with a formalin solution made by diluting one pint of 40 per cent formalin in thirty gallons of water. The seed should be spread out on a clean floor in barn or granary and sprinkled with the solution, being shoveled over slowly, if possible, while the disinfectant is being applied. The aim should be to have each kernel moistened with the solution. When the grain has been thoroughly moistened it should be shoveled into a pile and covered with blankets or gunny sacking for three or four hours, during which time the fumes of the solution will the more thoroughly penetrate each kernel. The covering may then be removed and the grain shoveled over until it is dry, when it is ready for sowing. To make the job most effective sacks, measures and seeders in which the seed is handled after treating should also be disinfected.

SIMPLE LIFE INSURANCE.

The tragic details of the death of a young wife and mother as a result of her clothing catching fire from the exposed blaze of a gasoline stove, which have recently come to the writer's attention, prompt a suggestion which if carried out might serve to prevent many just such fatal burnings. This is having close at hand in the kitchen, as near the gasoline stove as possible, a good sized blanket or heavy full length overcoat, which could be wrapped around one in case the clothing caught fire. Almost invariably when such an accident occurs there seems to be a natural instinct to rush to another room or out of doors for help, which is the worst possible thing that could be done to spread and intensify the blaze. Having a garment ready in the manner suggested would render this rush unnecessary and make possible an immediate extinguishing of a blaze which would not only prevent terrible burns, but would save life as well.

THE BUFFALO BUR.

The botanical departments of many experiment stations have had specimens of the buffalo bur submitted to them this season for identification. The plant is of about the same size and habit of growth as the cocklebur, has a divided leaf much like the watermelon and a yellow blossom, while leaves, stems and fruit pods are covered with long, ugly looking spines or needles. The writer saw a specimen of this weed the other day and noticed another interesting thing about the plant—that it has an odor exactly like a string of freshly caught bullheads. The seeds of this plant are scattered in the wool of western sheep, in the litter falling from freight cars in which sheep are carried and chick feed bought at country stores. The plant is an annual and is easily held in check by cultivation.

WHEN HE WOKE UP

It was a surprise to Burchard when he dropped in to call upon Sylvia to find a strange young man occupying his special chair and acting quite as much at home as though he belonged there by right.

Burchard had been calling on Sylvia for months, even years, and had sat in that particular chair innumerable times. A sensation of being ill used and injured surged through his soul as he bowed with stern cordiality to the young man.

"Mr. Gillmyer," Sylvia was saying sweetly, "is a brother of my old school friend, Dot, of whom you've heard me talk so often, Ted. He's come to Chicago to go into business. Isn't that delightful!"

"Lovely!" agreed Burchard. There really was nothing else that he could say. Speech seemed to have been smothered within him by that first wave of surprise which had overwhelmed him.

Try as he might to enter into the conversation, Burchard found himself relapsing painfully into silence every little while.

The more he thought of the situation the more indignant Burchard grew. By the time he said good evening he was able to give Sylvia the frostiest sort of nod and barely to touch the tips of her fingers. The surprise in her eyes was succeeded by a flicker of something else, which was quickly hid by her lowered lids. Burchard would have been a good deal surprised if he had known that instead of dragging herself slowly up the stairs to weep over his cruelty Sylvia dropped down on the bottom step when the front door closed and laughed.

Naturally Burchard called the next evening to atone for the coolness of his good-by. Sylvia was wearing a particularly large bunch of violets, which he eyed malignantly.

"I love violets," Sylvia said absently, patting them. "You can almost smell these!"

"Almost," Burchard repeated, bewildered.

"They're artificial," Sylvia explained. "Did they fool you?"

The bound of relief that Burchard's heart gave when he found Gillmyer had not sent the flowers was perfectly evident, but Burchard was too upset to grasp the fact. He was conscious of an inner triumph when he left at 10:30 that he had had the field to himself. But these triumphs were few, for Gillmyer bobbed up at all sorts of moments.

"He knows so few people in town," Sylvia said once. "And, really, he's awfully nice, don't you think, Ted?"

"Fine chap," agreed Burchard, with a sensation of swallowing red-hot coals.

The worst of it was that Gillmyer really was a fine chap. He broke into the Sunday night chafing dish suppers that Burchard had been wont to enjoy with Sylvia, and he cut up the cheese and beat the eggs as though that had always been his duty.

Between whiles Gillmyer invited Sylvia to go to the theater and brought her books and candy as though there was no reason why he shouldn't. The little rankling jabs attached to this phase of the situation was that there really was no reason. Yet Burchard felt outraged.

The evening he called and found to his dismay that Sylvia had gone out somewhere with Gillmyer without the preliminary of letting him know when it was his regular night to call made Burchard see stars. Women, he said to himself cuttingly as he strode home at a great pace, are fickle, unreliable, frivolous, unworthy and unnecessary cumberers of the earth. He had thought Sylvia different, but that was merely because he was an imbecile.

Burchard sat and stared at the wall for an hour, smoked three cigars and then turned in. At midnight he was still awake. "I suppose they are just about getting home now," he murmured.

It amazed him that Sylvia should show no trace of contrition, shame or concern about the manner in which she was treating him. She acted as though she was perfectly all right and appeared to have no uneasiness over Burchard's acquired gloom. On the contrary, she seemed to be having a decidedly good time. That she actually could enjoy Gillmyer's society was an agonizing blow to Burchard. His mind was such a mixture of unhappiness and bewilderment that he did not even try to figure out a solution.

He was agreeably surprised when he called one evening to find that Gillmyer was not present. He took his old chair, but sat on the extreme edge because it really wasn't all his chair any more.

"Mr. Gillmyer," Sylvia remarked, casually, "has been sent west for a month."

"Thank the Lord for that!" Burchard burst out, explosively. "I don't wish him any bad luck, but I hope the train runs off the track!"

"Why Ted Burchard," said Sylvia, in proper horror. "The idea of your feeling that way!"

"I've just discovered how I feel," said Burchard, grimly. "And now that I know my esteemed friend Gillmyer can't break in on us at any minute and that I actually have your undivided attention, I'd like to go into details and elaborate on the subject!"

"Why, Ted!" said Sylvia again. "You amaze me! But—er—go on, please!"

Caesar's Vengeance

"Ah warns you, nigger, ef Ah cotch you foolin' 'roun' dat gal any moh, Ah gwin' to kill you."

Caesar White paused and gazed at the smaller negro as some tranquil ox might regard a calf that had strayed into its pasture.

The negroes were toiling in the turpentine settlement under the burning rays of the Carolina sun. They sweated and panted as they filled the barrels and rolled the crude rosin up the incline of planks to the roof of the distillery where shone the great lid of the copper still.

Caesar White was a good natured giant in the main, or had been until Jefferson Grant, the quadroon dude, sauntered into the camp with his collar and cuffs, and hair that shone with cocoanut oil. Then trouble arose for Mandy, the superintendent's cook, had succumbed to his fascinations.

Jefferson Grant sniffed disdainfully and resumed his labors. Every week day, except on Mondays, the distillation went on, the crude rosin, dumped into the great sill, hissing and bubbling furiously within, though to the watcher on the distillery roof there was no symptom of the commotion of the fluid inside the boiler, where a half ton of rosin simmered like molten steel.

To Caesar White, unimaginative in all other respects, the process possessed a fascination. He had pictured his rival flung into the caldron by the force of his mighty arms. One instant's agony—and flesh, bones, clothing, all traces of the quadroon would be utterly dissolved in that fiery flow.

It was a little incident that precipitated his determination. A Sunday call, a scornful word from Mandy, the sight of a lithe figure skulking through the pine trees behind the girl's hut—and Caesar White, was in the forest alone, rolling upon the ground and biting his clenched fists in a paroxysm of jealousy until the blood flowed.

Next day the two men were alone on the distillery roof. The quadroon, under Caesar's direction, was polishing the copper lid of the still, which had been raised from its position by their united efforts for this work. Deep in the gloom under them Caesar fancied he could see the gleam of the molten mass, placid as still water, but deadly as boiling lava. As Jefferson turned he stretched out his foot lazily. The quadroon tripped and fell; one push, an oath and a scream and a splash far below. Then the giant hastened away.

Shriek upon shriek pursued him. The quadroon was hard in dying. Fear drove out the foreman's anger. Those shrieks pursued him as he hurried toward his quarters. Shriek upon shriek; and now, peering in dreadful terror through his half-opened door, Caesar saw negroes running from all parts toward the still, from which issued those never-ending cries. Would the man never die? Could he live even one moment in that fearful torture? The giant trembled. He cast about him to fly. Where? Anywhere. Beads of perspiration sprang to his brow and the manhood went out from his weak limbs. He had thought to accomplish his deed unseen and unsuspected; and still those fearful cries resounded through the pine trees. He sank down inert and helpless on the dry ground.

But, mingling with the cries, came sounds of laughter. Caesar looked up aghast. From the great still, surrounded by a derisive crowd, a dripping figure emerged and staggered across the camp. Merciful heaven! it was the quadroon, woe-begone, from head to foot one slimy mass of dripping, viscid rosin. And in front of the crowd that danced and jeered and shouted was Mandy, pointing a derisive finger at this crow stripped of his plumage, this humbled dude, her love converted into harsh and bitter mockery.

And suddenly balm came to Caesar's soul. A happy smile irradiated the black's features. He chuckled and slapped his thighs.

"Lawd be praised! Lawd be praised!" he shouted fervently. "I done clean fergot that we don't light no fire under de still on Mondays."

Bird Has Become Real Pet.

"Some persons hold that a bird can not be domesticated like a toy dog but I know a Washington woman who has one that seems almost human in its intelligence," said a visitor from the capital. "The bird is a little green and yellow canary and was purchased for a small sum at an ordinary bird shop. But it has become extraordinarily attached to its owner.

"At night the bird sleeps in a little nest in its owner's pillow and wakens her in the morning by kissing her on the lips. Then during the day it will perch on her shoulder and take naps there, often kissing her. It will follow her about like a dog. The canary is never put in a cage except when its owner is leaving the house, and on one occasion I know of from observation the woman was going out, but the bird when put in its cage actually moaned piteously and its owner refused to leave it. The woman, by the way, has a great fondness for dumb creatures, and the bird seems to recognize and return that feeling."

Scared.

Bnicker—If that's the case there would be an awful panic if I started out to hunt one.

SHE MEANT WELL

"I've got a beautiful surprise for you, Tommy," said the three-months bride to her husband one morning at breakfast.

"Something to eat?" asked Tom, passing by the plate of forlorn-looking biscuits and helping himself to a piece of toast.

"Piggy-wig!" responded the three-months' bride, contemptuously. 'Yes, it is something to eat, but you're not going to get it until Sunday morning. It's waffles." The three months' bride folded her small hands in her lap and beamed proudly upon her recent acquisition in the matrimonial line.

"Whew!" whistled Tom, who was always properly appreciative. "Did you ever made any, Pudge?'

"No," said the three months' bride. "But I have a perfectly lovely set of waffle irons that one of the girls gave me at my kitchen shower, and I'm just crazy to use them."

The young wife rose half an hour earlier than usual the next Sunday morning. She spread out the cook book on the table.

"'Two eggs,'" she chanted to herself. "It doesn't say whether to beat them separately or not, but I want these to be the finest waffles that ever were, so I'll beat them separately."

She broke the eggs into two dishes, humming a little song as she did so. Then she leaned again over her culinary guide, philosopher and friend.

"'One cup of sour milk,'" she read. "Now, there's your sour milk. 'Half a teaspoonful of salt.' There's your salt. 'Flour to make a good batter.' Oh, dear, I do hate recipes that don't tell exactly how much to put in. 'Half teaspoonful soda.' I'm always afraid to use soda, so I'll just use baking powder instead, for it's so much safer. It doesn't say which thing to put in first, so I'll just put them all in at once. 'Have the waffle irons sizzling hot as soon as your batter is ready.' Why, the batter's all ready and I haven't begun to heat the irons."

She bustled around and presently an odor of well-cooked ironware began to fill the room. The young wife dampened a finger and applied it daintily to the outside of the waffle iron.

"Psst!" the waffle iron remarked.

"I guess you're hot enough," said the young wife, happily. "This batter looks rather queer and bubbly, but I suppose it's all right. Now, here goes."

She carefully opened the irons and deposited a spoonful of batter in each receptacle. Then she closed them and waited a few minutes. An odor of neatly browning waffles and very smelly waffle irons rose to her nostrils and gradually filled the room. A worried crease began to show on her smooth forehead.

She took a hasty peep at the cook book, but it was unrelentingly silent on the subject. An odor of burning drew her back to the stove. She took hold of the handle of the iron on the northeast corner and tried gently to raise it. It refused to move. Then she gave it a little jerk. Still there was no response. She gave it a still more decided jerk and the iron opened with a suddenness that can be ascribed only to the total depravity of inanimate things.

It opened its jaws with a vicious pop and then shut them again with a clap that made the young wife dance away from the stove and cover both eyes with her hands under the impression that they were full of red hot batter. In the rebound she came up against the pan of batter and it fell to the floor with a crash. By this time the room was filled with the pungent smell of burning waffles. With the one idea in her mind of avoiding the catastrophe of having her living room curtains permeated with the awful odor, the young wife seized the hot iron with her bare hand.

At this crucial moment the little demons that preside over such annoying affairs moved Tom, the large and innocent, to open the door. Ignorant that the situation was explosive in a high degree, he called, jovially:

"Breakfast ready, Pudge?"

Driven to frenzy by the sight of the immaculate and self-satisfied looking masculine thing, the young wife gave a wild, unhuman bellow. Then she deliberately kicked the offending waffle iron to the other side of the room.

In terrible crises we sometimes have almost preternatural intuitions. Tom's behavior upon this occasion was almost uncanny in its intelligence. He spoke no word, he made no offer of resistance. He beat a hasty retreat, while the once happy bride flung furious words after him.

"I hate you," she cried, "and I hate and loathe being married. I despise you and everything in this house and I wish I had died before I saw you!"

Then with a final little squeal she threw the spoon which she held in her hand at Tom's retreating back, but it merely crashed into the wall and fell upon the floor with a clatter. She gave it a parting kick which sent it under the sink, then she fled out of the kitchen into her own room and slammed and locked the door.

Tom, like the really lovely creature that he was, softly returned to the kitchen, cleaned it up after his own peculiar though sincere fashion, made himself some toast, and an hour later was furnishing a stalwart shoulder for a repentant young wife to shed tears copiously upon.

Very Special

"Lamprett told me about it," explained Beaver, as he put a small drug store package down on the table. "He said it cured his indigestion and was the finest thing out. It's none of your patent medicines, either, but a good, plain, old-fashioned remedy that our grandmothers used—it's boneset! Ever hear of boneset tea?"

Mrs. Beaver shuddered. "I can taste it now," she moaned. "They fed it to me when I was an innocent, helpless child too young to hurl the stuff through the window and smash the furniture in protest! I think I had ague or something. Just as I would begin to feel a little bit comfortable and less achy my mother or my Aunt Amelia would appear through the kitchen door with a white apron tied about her waist and bearing carefully a steaming bowl that contained a quart or more. The deadly black fluid within gave off a noxious vapor, and I would begin cringing.

"'Now, now!' the cupbearer would say, in the comfortable tone of the surgeon who assures you it is not going to hurt very much, 'it's only your boneset tea! Drink it down right quick and you won't mind it!' Mind it! Why, John Henry Beaver, boneset tea is the quintessence of all the bitterness in the whole world. And you are deliberately planning to take it—"

"Nonsense!" said Beaver. "You women are all nerves! I guess it isn't very bad, and it certainly looks harmless—just little dried leaves! Lamprett said it cured his indigestion!"

"It would cure anything!" asserted Mrs. Beaver, resignedly, as she took the package and obediently prepared to make the required dose. "That is, after you get the taste of it in your mouth you haven't time to fuss much with typhoid or smallpox or leprosy, or whatever it is ails you! All your energy is required in your efforts to forget the boneset! Mere indigestion is a happy little picnic compared to what you'll experience when you try to drink this stuff! Oh, I'll make it for you! Don't you worry!"

Beaver, compelled to demonstate man's superiority to unpleasantness of that sort, drank the tea to the last drop. "That was fine!" he said with chattering teeth, as he finished

TO BE ERECTED SOON

Pres. Pennington Gives Reassurance of New Soo Depot in the Near Future.

Structure to be Large Enough to Care For Business For all Time.

While in Minneapolis last week several local parties were in consultation with President Pennington of the Soo Line regarding the spur track which is to be built from the main track to the site of the proposed new auxiliary steam plant and fire hall, and which will be constructed if the city secures a right-of-way.

In speaking of the proposed new depot for this city Mr. Pennington is cited as stating that the depot will be constructed in the near future but did not definitely give out the time the work will be commenced, but that it has been under consideration for some time, and that with the present increase in business it is just a matter of a short time when larger quarters will become an absolute necessity.

In speaking of the inadequacy of the present depot Mr. Pennington stated that while the general public have suffered some inconvenience thru the crowded conditions, no one has realized the fact more than the railway company themselves, and the reason why the work has been delayed this long is the fact that the building to be erected will be so constructed as to take care of the business for years to come and not only to remedy the conditions as they are just at present.

Prominent Residents Leave.

The families of J. J. Crowe and C. A. Nason departed last Friday afternoon for Rose Lake, Idaho, where they go to join Mr. Crowe and Mr. Nason who had preceeded them to their home. In these this city loses two of its most prominent families and it was with keen regret that our citizens learned of their plans

Teacher's Reception.

A reception was given for the benefit of the teachers of the public schools of this city at the Antlers Club Rooms last Friday evening. An excellent program was arranged and among the numbers were the addresses of [illegible] by Prof. J. H. Hay and Rev. [illegible] of the Presbyterian church. Miss [illegible] very ably rendered a vocal solo which was followed by an instrumental selection by Miss Ruth Godward. Among the other instrumental selections was a duet, by Miss Ramstad and Mr. Kjommo, and a number of Scotch folk songs by Mr. Salvorson.

Among the distinguished guests from out of town who were present, was Ex. Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston who delivered a very charming address.

The address of Dr. Gambell met with an abundance of merit, and brought forth a volley of applause.

After the completion of the program a social dance was given.

Old Timer Here.

Allen W. Clark, "father of the big ditches," was down from his home at Rollis one day last week. Everyone in this part of the country knows Mr. Clark as he is one of the old timers of Minnesota and particularly the northern part of the state, having settled in St. Paul in 1851. He served through the Civil War in Co. "G" Fourth Minnesota Volunteers, under Gen. John B. Sanburn, who had Mr. Clark appointed U. S. Commissioner up in this country through efficient work done while serving in the army.

In commenting on the crop conditions in his part of the country Mr. Clark says he threshed 133¼ bushels of winter rye off less than three acres, and that his flax on the experiment plots, conducted by F. De Hungerford of the state university, will yield more than 15 bushels to the acre.

Mr. Clark says that he has been urged and has been pledged the support of many of his friends and may decide to enter the race for the state legislature at the coming campaign.

SOME BIG YIELDS

Reports From the Country Indicate a Good Crop this Fall.

Frequent Rains Prove a Handicap to Threshing Operations.

Reports from the country are to the effect that the crop yield is taking on a very bright aspect, and is considerably better than it was figured before harvest had begun. While in the early part of the season reports of black rust were circulated it has been found since that it was not black rust at all and where any rust was found a very small percentage of the crop has been affected, and this has been reported only on a very few places in this vicinity.

The frequent rains recently have handicapped the farmers to a great extent in their threshing operations, but with a few days of warm weather the work will be resumed again.

As a whole this year will be a better one for the farmers in this part of the state than any in years past, and inasmuch as the crop conditions in different parts of the state and North Dakota are turning out to be more or less a failure the market, it is expected will keep up high, and the farmer can expect to command a good price for his products.

Mr. Ole Halsa, who resides about 6 miles east and 3 miles north of this city, asserts that after his products have been marketed, he expects to realize from them in the neighborhood of $3,000 and $4,000 off from his 160 acre farm.

Jumped Their Board Bill.

Frank Wagner and Geo. Carpenter, two "chimney sweeps" who had been operating in this city for some time were brought before Judge Bishop last Saturday on a charge of "jumping" their board bill at the Northern Hotel, about the latter part of August.

The two were apprehended by the Canadian authorities at Emerson and were turned over to Sheriff LaBree at Noyes, who brought them to this city. The fine imposed was the court costs and expenses.

70 Pound Squash.

Lars Thorson, who resides north of this city, has a record for raising large vegetables that is hard to beat. While in the city the other day Mr. Thorson brought in a squash that tipped the scale at 70 pounds and which is now on display at Dan Shaw's office.

Last year Mr. Thorson raised a pumpkin that weighed 115 pounds.

These huge specimens go to show the fertility of the soil of northern Minnesota.

Grand Theatre Closed.

The Grand Theatre was closed last Monday and will remain closed for a number of weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Mc Query, who are operating the show, left last Friday evening for Minneapolis where they will remain for some time visiting relatives. Mr. McQuery expects to return to this city in about six weeks and will open his theatre to the public again.

Martin Berg, who resides about three miles east of this city, also reports an excellent crop. From the six or seven acres of flax, which he has threshed, he had a yield of 20 bushels to the acre, and expects the other 35 acres, sown later, to yield in the same neighborhood.

JOHNSON RESIGNS

Agent of Bureau of Indian Affairs Holds Ideas Opposed to Those of Interior Department.

His Activity in Minnesota Caused Enforcement of Old Treaties in Northern Section.

Because his views regarding suppression of the liquor traffic among the Indians did not coincide with those of the officials of the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs, W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, of New York, chief special liquor officer of the bureau, famed from coast to coast and particularly in Minnesota has resigned.

Acting Secretary of the Interior Adams said in Washington that no fault had been found with Mr. Johnson's integrity of administration or of his character. Both the department of the interior and Mr. Johnson himself, said Secretary Adams, thought it would be better that he quit the service because certain views he held regarding the administration of his office did not coincide with those held by the department.

It was through Johnson's activity that the famous prohibition clause of the old Indian treaties was enforced in Northern Minnesota last year, causing a storm of futile protest from citizens.

"In Minnesota he began his actual work in the northern part known as the Indian country, about in March of 1909. At that time he went into the country and investigated conditions surrounding the sale of liquor to the Indians on the Cass Lake, Mahnomen and Red Lake reservations. In June of 1909 his first order went into effect closing many saloons. Through the Indian agent at Mahnomen he gave thirty days time for the saloonkeepers to quit business and when they failed he, in accordance with his order, came to Minneapolis, where he met some of his chief deputies and went north, where he swore in others. In July he had men in every town in the then restricted district and one morning at 10 o'clock in each town the deputies descended and confiscated all liquor, throwing out whiskey, alcohol and like spirits. No beer was spilt because Johnson did not know just where the law stood in the matter of beer, but did know in the matter of spirits.

Then at Mahnomen they arrested Johnson and eight of his deputies. This incident is still fresh in the minds of the people of the state. Johnson and his men had smashed the saloons and dumped the whiskey and they arrested them. He said he was working under the treaty of 1855. The prisoners were taken to Crookston and their case came up before Judge Page Morris at Duluth. They were set free.

Grand Opening, Friday, Sept. 29.

"A NEW DEPARTURE"

Mr. Sanford Dodge, so long indentified with the classic drama has secured "The Right of Way" for this season. This is a dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's beautiful novel by Eugene Presbrey. It was originally produced at Wallack's theatre, New York City by Klaw & Erlange and is one of the most powerful dramas of modern times. The character of Charley Steele, the brilliant criminal lawyer; Joe Portugais his French Canadian friend, Rosalie Eventurel, the rose of the mountain and many of the other roles are already stage classics. Not to have seen this wonderful play is to miss seeing one of the world's greatest modern dramatic creations. Mr. Dodge will present this play at the Auditorium, Sept. 29. The scale of prices will be made such that every one who desires, may attend. Tickets on sale at Peoples Drug Store, Phone No. 211.

Price of Paper.

Editor Wheelock of Fergus Falls announces that on Jan. 1st 1912 he will raise the subscription price of his paper to $1.50 a year. This is a wise move on his part. The great advance in the price of every item that enters into the cost of a weekly paper, makes an advance in subscription price imperative. It is absolutely impossible to publish a readable weekly paper for a dollar a year. It is only by drawing on the advertising and job departments that the publisher can make ends meet. This is not as it should be. The editor of this paper is pleased to follow the example set by Mr. Wheelock, and hereby announces that beginning on Jan. 1, 1912, the price of the NEWS will be $1.50 a year. During the coming months, those who desire to do so may pay in advance at the rate of $1 a year for one or more years.

Dont miss this great dramatic event, even if you do not go to another show for a year.

H. H. Aaker Out for Governor.

The first candidate to make formal announcement of his gubernatorial aspirations for 1912 is H. H. Aaker of Fargo. He is a Progressive Republican and was a candidate at last year's primaries, receiving about 12,000 votes. He is at the head of a business college there and formerly lived in Moorhead, where he was mayor and head of Concordia college.

WHEN HE WOKE UP

It was a surprise to Burchard when he dropped in to call upon Sylvia to find a strange young man occupying his special chair and acting quite as much at home as though he belonged there by right.

Burchard had been calling on Sylvia for months, even years, and had sat in that particular chair innumerable times. A sensation of being ill used and injured surged through his soul as he bowed with stern cordiality to the young man.

"Mr. Gillmyer," Sylvia was saying sweetly, "is a brother of my old school friend, Dot, of whom you've heard me talk so often, Ted. He's come to Chicago to go into business. Isn't that delightful!"

"Lovely!" agreed Burchard. There really was nothing else that he could say. Speech seemed to have been smothered within him by that first wave of surprise which had overwhelmed him.

Try as he might to enter into the conversation, Burchard found himself relapsing painfully into silence every little while.

The more he thought of the situation the more indignant Burchard grew. By the time he said good evening he was able to give Sylvia the frostiest sort of nod and barely to touch the tips of her fingers. The surprise in her eyes was succeeded by a flicker of something else, which was quickly hid by her lowered lids. Burchard would have been a good deal surprised if he had known that instead of dragging herself slowly up the stairs to weep over his cruelty Sylvia dropped down on the bottom step when the front door closed and laughed.

Naturally Burchard called the next evening to atone for the coolness of his good-by. Sylvia was wearing a particularly large bunch of violets, which he eyed malignantly.

"I love violets," Sylvia said absently, patting them. "You can almost smell these!"

"Almost," Burchard repeated, bewildered.

"They're artificial," Sylvia explained. "Did they fool you?"

The bound of relief that Burchard's heart gave when he found Gillmyer had not sent the flowers was perfectly evident, but Burchard was too upset to grasp the fact. He was conscious of an inner triumph when he left at 10:30 that he had had the field to himself. But these triumphs were few, for Gillmyer bobbed up at all sorts of moments.

"He knows so few people in town," Sylvia said once. "And, really, he's awfully nice, don't you think, Ted?"

"Fine chap," agreed Burchard, with a sensation of swallowing red-hot coals.

The worst of it was that Gillmyer really was a fine chap. He broke into the Sunday night chafing dish suppers that Burchard had been wont to enjoy with Sylvia, and he cut up the cheese and beat the eggs as though that had always been his duty.

Between whiles Gillmyer invited Sylvia to go to the theater and brought her books and candy as though there was no reason why he shouldn't. The little rankling jabs attached to this phase of the situation was that there really was no reason. Yet Burchard felt outraged.

The evening he called and found to his dismay that Sylvia had gone out somewhere with Gillmyer without the preliminary of letting him know when it was his regular night to call made Burchard see stars. Women, he said to himself cuttingly as he strode home at a great pace, are fickle, unreliable, frivolous, unworthy and unnecessary cumberers of the earth. He had thought Sylvia different, but that was merely because he was an imbecile.

Burchard sat and stared at the wall for an hour, smoked three cigars and then turned in. At midnight he was still awake. "I suppose they are just about getting home now," he murmured.

It amazed him that Sylvia should show no trace of contrition, shame or concern about the manner in which she was treating him. She acted as though she was perfectly all right and appeared to have no uneasiness over Burchard's acquired gloom. On the contrary, she seemed to be having a decidedly good time. That she actually could enjoy Gillmyer's society was an agonizing blow to Burchard. His mind was such a mixture of unhappiness and bewilderment that he did not even try to figure out a solution.

He was agreeably surprised when he called one evening to find that Gillmyer was not present. He took his old chair, but sat on the extreme edge because it really wasn't all his chair any more.

"Mr. Gillmyer," Sylvia remarked, casually, "has been sent west for a month."

"Thank the Lord for that!" Burchard burst out explosively. "I don't wish him any bad luck, but I hope the train runs off the track!"

"Why, Ted Burchard," said Sylvia, in proper horror. "The idea of your feeling that way!"

"I've just discovered how I feel," said Burchard, grimly. "And now that I know my esteemed friend Gillmyer can't break in on us at any minute and that I actually have your undivided attention, I'd like to go into details and elaborate on the subject!"

"Why, Ted!" said Sylvia again. "You amaze me! But—er—go on, please!"

Caesar's Vengeance

"Ah warns you, nigger, ef Ah cotch you foolin' 'roun' dat gal any moh, Ah gwin' to kill you."

Caesar White paused and gazed at the smaller negro as some tranquil ox might regard a calf that had strayed into its pasture.

The negroes were toiling in the turpentine settlement under the burning rays of the Carolina sun. They sweated and panted as they filled the barrels and rolled the crude rosin up the incline of planks to the roof of the distillery where shone the great lid of the copper still.

Caesar White was a good natured giant in the main, or had been until Jefferson Grant, the quadroon dude, sauntered into the camp with his collar and cuffs, and hair that shone with cocoanut oil. Then trouble arose for Mandy, the superintendent's cook, had succumbed to his fascinations.

Jefferson Grant sniffed disdainfully and resumed his labors. Every week day, except on Mondays, the distillation went on, the crude rosin, dumped into the great still, hissing and bubbling furiously within, though to the watcher on the distillery roof there was no symptom of the commotion of the fluid inside the boiler, where a half ton of rosin simmered like molten steel.

To Caesar White, unimaginative in all other respects, the process possessed a fascination. He had pictured his rival flung into the caldron by the force of his mighty arms. One instant's agony—and flesh, bones, clothing, all traces of the quadroon would be utterly dissolved in that fiery flow.

It was a little incident that precipitated his determination. A Sunday call, a scornful word from Mandy, the sight of a lithe figure skulking through the pine trees behind the girl's hut—and Caesar White, was in the forest alone, rolling upon the ground and biting his clenched fists in a paroxysm of jealousy until the blood flowed.

Next day the two men were alone on the distillery roof. The quadroon, under Caesar's direction, was polishing the copper lid of the still, which had been raised from its position by their united efforts for this work. Deep in the gloom under them Caesar fancied he could see the gleam of the molten mass, placid as still water, but deadly as boiling lava. As Jefferson turned he stretched out his foot lazily. The quadroon tripped and fell; one push, an oath and a scream and a splash far below. Then the giant hastened away.

Shriek upon shriek pursued him. The quadroon was hard in dying. Fear drove out the foreman's anger. Those shrieks pursued him as he hurried toward his quarters. Shriek upon shriek; and now, peering in dreadful terror through his half-opened door, Caesar saw negroes running from all parts toward the still, from which issued those never-ending cries. Would the man never die? Could he live even one moment in that fearful torture? The giant trembled. He cast about him to fly. Where? Anywhere. Beads of perspiration sprang to his brow and the manhood went out from his weak limbs. He had thought to accomplish his deed unseen and unsuspected; and still those fearful cries resounded through the pine trees. He sank down inert and helpless on the dry ground.

But, mingling with the cries, came sounds of laughter. Caesar looked up aghast. From the great still, surrounded by a derisive crowd, a dripping figure emerged and staggered across the camp. Merciful heaven! it was the quadroon, woe-begone, from head to foot one slimy mass of dripping, viscid rosin. And in front of the crowd that danced and jeered and shouted was Mandy, pointing a derisive finger at this crow stripped of his plumage, this humbled dude, her love converted into harsh and bitter mockery.

And suddenly balm came to Caesar's soul. A happy smile irradiated the black's features. He chuckled and slapped his thighs.

"Lawd be praised! Lawd be praised!" he shouted fervently. "I done clean forgot that we don't light no fire under de still on Mondays."

Bird Has Become Real Pet.

"Some persons hold that a bird can not be domesticated like a toy dog but I know a Washington woman who has one that seems almost human in its intelligence," said a visitor from the capital. "The bird is a little green and yellow canary and was purchased for a small sum at an ordinary bird shop. But it has become extraordinarily attached to its owner.

"At night the bird sleeps in a little nest in its owner's pillow and wakens her in the morning by kissing her on the lips. Then during the day it will perch on her shoulder and take naps there, often kissing her. It will follow her about like a dog. The canary is never put in a cage except when its owner is leaving the house, and on one occasion I know of from observation the woman was going out, but the bird when put in its cage actually moaned piteously and its owner refused to leave it. The woman, by the way, has a great fondness for dumb creatures, and the bird seems to recognize and return that feeling."

Scared.

Kicker—They say a lion is as much afraid of a man as a man is of a lion.

Snicker—If that's the case there would be an awful panic if I started out to hunt one.

SHE MEANT WELL

"I've got a beautiful surprise for you, Tommy," said the three-months bride to her husband one morning at breakfast.

"Something to eat?" asked Tom, passing by the plate of forlorn-looking biscuits and helping himself to a piece of toast.

"Piggy-wig!" responded the three-months' bride, contemptuously. 'Yes, it is something to eat, but you're not going to get it until Sunday morning. It's waffles." The three months' bride folded her small hands in her lap and beamed proudly upon her recent acquisition in the matrimonial line.

"Whew!" whistled Tom, who was always properly appreciative. "Did you ever made any, Pudge?'

"No," said the three months' bride. "But I have a perfectly lovely set of waffle irons that one of the girls gave me at my kitchen shower, and I'm just crazy to use them."

The young wife rose half an hour earlier than usual the next Sunday morning. She spread out the cook book on the table.

"'Two eggs,'" she chanted to herself. "It doesn't say whether to beat them separately or not, but I want these to be the finest waffles that ever were, so I'll beat them separately."

She broke the eggs into two dishes, humming a little song as she did so. Then she leaned again over her culinary guide, philosopher and friend.

"'One cup of sour milk,'" she read. "Now, there's your sour milk. 'Half a teaspoonful of salt.' There's your salt. 'Flour to make a good batter.' Oh, dear, I do hate recipes that don't tell exactly how much to put in. 'Half teaspoonful soda.' I'm always afraid to use soda, so I'll just use baking powder instead, for it's so much safer. It doesn't say which thing to put in first, so I'll just put them all in at once. 'Have the waffle irons sizzling hot as soon as your batter is ready.' Why, the batter's all ready and I haven't begun to heat the irons."

She bustled around and presently an odor of well-cooked ironware began to fill the room. The young wife dampened a finger and applied it daintily to the outside of the waffle iron.

"Psst!" the waffle iron remarked.

"I guess you're hot enough," said the young wife, happily. "This batter looks rather queer and bubbly, but I suppose it's all right. Now, here goes."

She carefully opened the irons and deposited a spoonful of batter in each receptacle. Then she closed them and waited a few minutes. An odor of neatly browning waffles and very smelly waffle irons rose to her nostrils and gradually filled the room. A worried crease began to show on her smooth forehead.

She took a hasty peep at the cook book, but it was unrelentingly silent on the subject. An odor of burning drew her back to the stove. She took hold of the handle of the iron on the northeast corner and tried gently to raise it. It refused to move. Then she gave it a little jerk. Still there was no response. She gave it a still more decided jerk and the iron opened with a suddenness that can be ascribed only to the total depravity of inanimate things.

It opened its jaws with a vicious pop and then shut them again with a clap that made the young wife dance away from the stove and cover both eyes with her hands under the impression that they were full of red hot batter. In the rebound she came up against the pan of batter and it fell to the floor with a crash. By this time the room was filled with the pungent smell of burning waffles. With the one idea in her mind of avoiding the catastrophe of having her living room curtains permeated with the awful odor, the young wife seized the hot iron with her bare hand.

At this crucial moment the little demons that preside over such annoying affairs moved Tom, the large and innocent, to open the door. Ignorant that the situation was explosive in a high degree, he called, jovially:

"Breakfast ready, Pudge?"

Driven to frenzy by the sight of the immaculate and self-satisfied looking masculine thing, the young wife gave a wild, unhuman bellow. Then she deliberately kicked the offending waffle iron to the other side of the room.

In terrible crises we sometimes have almost preternatural intuitions. Tom's behavior upon this occasion was almost uncanny in its intelligence. He spoke no word, he made no offer of resistance. He beat a hasty retreat, while the once happy bride flung furious words after him.

"I hate you," she cried, "and I hate and loathe being married. I despise you and everything in this house and I wish I had died before I saw you!"

Then with a final little squeal she threw the spoon which she held in her hand at Tom's retreating back, but it merely crashed into the wall and fell upon the floor with a clatter. She gave it a parting kick which sent it under the sink, then she fled out of the kitchen into her own room and slammed and locked the door.

Tom, like the really lovely creature that he was, softly returned to the kitchen, cleaned it up after his own peculiar though sincere fashion, made himself some toast, and an hour later was furnishing a stalwart shoulder for a repentant young wife to shed tears copiously upon.

Very Special

"Lamprett told me about it," explained Beaver, as he put a small drug store package down on the table. "He said it cured his indigestion and was the finest thing out. It's none of your patent medicines, either, but a good, plain, old-fashioned remedy that our grandmothers used—it's boneset! Ever hear of boneset tea?"

Mrs. Beaver shuddered. "I can taste it now," she moaned. "They fed it to me when I was an innocent, helpless child too young to hurl the stuff through the window and smash the furniture in protest! I think I had ague or something. Just as I would begin to feel a little bit comfortable and less achy my mother or my Aunt Amelia would appear through the kitchen door with a white apron tied about her waist and bearing carefully a steaming bowl that contained a quart or more. The deadly black fluid within gave off a noxious vapor, and I would begin cringing.

"'Now, now!' the cupbearer would say, in the comfortable tone of the surgeon who assures you it is not going to hurt very much, 'it's only your boneset tea! Drink it down right quick and you won't mind it!' Mind it! Why, John Henry Beaver, boneset tea is the quintessence of all the bitterness in the whole world. And you are deliberately planning to take it—"

"Nonsense!" said Beaver. "You women are all nerves! I guess it isn't very bad, and it certainly looks harmless—just little dried leaves! Lamprett said it cured his indigestion!"

"It would cure anything!" asserted Mrs. Beaver, resignedly, as she took the package and obediently prepared to make the required dose. "That is, after you get the taste of it in your mouth you haven't time to fuss much with typhoid or smallpox or leprosy, or whatever it is ails you! All your energy is required in your efforts to forget the boneset! Mere indigestion is a happy little picnic compared to what you'll experience when you try to drink this stuff! Oh, I'll make it for you! Don't you worry!"

Beaver, compelled to demonstate man's superiority to unpleasantness of that sort, drank the tea to the last drop. "That was fine!" he said with chattering teeth, as he finished. "I believe I'll lie down a bit!"

He huddled in a shrinking heap, with his face buried in the sofa cushions. Mrs. Beaver heartlessly laughed. Then she put the package of boneset on a shelf where reposed supplies not in daily use. She was quite sure Beaver would not want it again very soon.

Quite a large number of callers dropped into the Beavers' house the next Sunday afternoon and at dusk the tea cart was trundled in by the maid bearing things to drink and various delightful edibles. Everybody gathered around the open fire and Mrs. Beaver began to pass plates and napkins.

"You'll all have tea, of course?" she inquired, amiably, proceeding to pour it without waiting for an answer. "You really must have tea, whether you care for it or not, because I pride myself on my tea—I get a special brand and I insist on people drinking it and liking it! This was three dollars a pound, I'd have you good people know, and it has the fragrance of the flowers and the fields and fresh air. I call it nectar!"

Everybody took tea, naturally.

"It's a little darker than usual," commented Mrs. Beaver, as she poured. "Oh, Doctor Biggs! You never—"

Doctor Biggs hastily took up the cup he had set down. "Perhaps if I could have some more sugar," he suggested, resignedly. He put five lumps more into his cup.

"Don't be so greedy," said the banker, seizing upon the sugar bowl. "Other people'd like some of that sugar."

"I never saw people use so much sugar!" commented Mrs. Beaver, frowning. "You'll simply spoil the flavor of the tea. Why, Mrs. Biggs, don't you—"

"I rarely drink tea!" said Mrs. Biggs firmly, as she set down her cup as far as possible from herself. "You must excuse me!" She looked pale.

Gazing around the room, Mrs. Beaver saw to her amazement that all the company had set down their cups, and were feverishly eating cake. In a far corner her husband was twining himself over a bookcase and muttering [illegible] sounded like "Fragrance [illegible]—and fields—oh, lordy!"

TO BE ERECTED SOON

Pres. Pennington Gives Reassurance of New Soo Depot in the Near Future.

Structure to be Large Enough to Care For Business For all Time.

While in Minneapolis last week several local parties were in consultation with President Pennington of the Soo Line regarding the spur track which is to be built from the main track to the site of the proposed new auxiliary steam plant and fire hall, and which will be constructed if the city secures a right-of-way.

In speaking of the proposed new depot for this city Mr. Pennington is cited as stating that the depot will be constructed in the near future but did not definitely give out the time the work will be commenced, but that it has been under consideration for some time, and that with the present increase in business it is just a matter of a short time when larger quarters will become an absolute necessity.

In speaking of the inadequacy of the present depot Mr. Pennington stated that while the general public have suffered some inconvenience thru the crowded conditions, no one has realized the fact more than the railway company themselves, and the reason why the work has been delayed this long is the fact that the building to be erected will be so constructed as to take care of the business for years to come and not only to remedy the conditions as they are just at present.

Prominent Residents Leave.

The families of J. J. Crowe and C. A. Nason departed last Friday afternoon for Rose Lake, Idaho, where they go to join Mr. Crowe and Mr. Nason who had preceeded them to their home. In these this city loses two of its most prominent families and it was with keen regret that our citizens learned of their plans to leave our midst.

Mr. Crowe has been manager of the local saw mill for a number of years and has been numbered among the city's foremost business men. Mr. Nason, who has held a responsible and lucerative position in the lumber offices, has also been a resident in this city for years. Among Mr. Nasons numerous activities where he will be missed most will be his absence on the ball team, on which his assistance has more than once turned the tables on the enemy and won for the locals the game and fame.

These families have been active, as well, in the social circles from which they will be greatly missed.

Quite a number of the residents gathered at the depot to wish them safety on their journey and success and happiness in their new home.

Mileage Good After Sept. 15.

The cost of traveling in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and North Dakota was reduced by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads Sept. 15 to all persons who are users of mileage books. These two railroads have put on sale mileage books the rates for which in any one of the states went into effect on that date, while for interstate traffic they will go into effect on Oct. 10.

A book for 1,000 miles good in Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota is sold for $25, making the rate per mile 2½ cents. Books for 3,000 miles in three states is sold for $60, or 2 cents per mile. Books of 3,000 miles, interchangeable, will be sold for $75. These books will be good on any road in the Northwest, west of the Mississippi, excepting the Soo Line and the Canadian railroads.

Teacher's Reception.

A reception was given for the benefit of the teachers of the public schools of this city at the Antlers Club Rooms last Friday evening. An excellent program was arranged and among the numbers were the addresses of welcome by Prof. J. H. Hay and Rev. [illegible] of the Presbyterian church. Miss [illegible] very ably rendered a vocal solo which was followed by an instrumental selection by Miss Ruth Godward. Among the other instrumental selections was a duet, by Miss Ramstad and Mr. Kjomme, and a number of Scotch folk songs by Mr. Salverson.

Among the distinguished guests from out of town who were present, was Ex. Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston who delivered a very charming address.

The address of Dr. Gambell met with an abundance of merit and brought forth a volley of applause.

After the completion of the program a social dance was given.

Old Timer Here.

Allen W. Clark, "father of the big ditches," was down from his home at Rollis one day last week. Everyone in this part of the country knows Mr. Clark as he is one of the old timers of Minnesota and particularly the northern part of the state, having settled in St. Paul in 1851. He served through the Civil War in Co. "G" Fourth Minnesota Volunteers, under Gen. John B. Sanburn, who had Mr. Clark appointed U. S. Commissioner up in this country through efficient work done while serving in the army.

In commenting on the crop conditions in his part of the country Mr. Clark says he threshed 133½ bushels of winter rye off less than three acres, and that his flax on the experiment plots, conducted by F. De Hungerford of the state university, will yield more than 15 bushels to the acre.

Mr. Clark says that he has been urged and has been pledged the support of many of his friends and may decide to enter the race for the state legislature at the coming campaign.

Protection to Gardens.

Vine products, such as tomatoes and cucumbers should be protected by covering, or should be gathered immediately if they are ripe, in order to insure against loss by frost, according to agricultural authorities.

A frost may occur in the country around Thief River Falls at any time now. The temperature early yesterday morning was 36 deg., which temperature with calm, clear atmosphere, will produce a frost. A comparatively light frost will damage tomatoes and cucumbers and the careful gardener will watch conditions from now on and will cover his garden products at the least intimation that a frost may occur.

Roots will not be injured by a frost which will kill the surface vegetation, so that no precautions are necessary against damage to products that are still in the ground.

Potatoes should be allowed to remain in the ground for about two weeks longer, according to A. B. Hostetter, superintendent of agriculture of the Duluth Commercial club. Mr. Hostetter says that farmers should be careful not to place immature potatoes on the market, as they will not bring as good a price as potatoes fully matured and the quality will be such as to damage the market.

"Late varieties of potatoes should be allowed to remain in the ground until they are fully ripened and matured," said Mr. Hostetter. "Prematurely digging of potatoes is a mistake that should be avoided and the farmers will find that by holding off a little longer, they will get much more satisfactory results."

The Cigar Test is the Cigar Flavor.

A strong cigar is a wrong cigar. The "nervousness" has been left out of the [illegible] Arthur Ro. cigar.

SOME BIG YIELDS

Reports From the Country Indicate a Good Crop this Fall.

Frequent Rains Prove a Handicap to Threshing Operations.

Reports from the country are to the effect that the crop yield is taking on a very bright aspect, and is considerably better than it was figured before harvest had begun. While in the early part of the season reports of black rust were circulated it has been found since that it was not black rust at all and where any rust was found a very small percentage of the crop has been affected, and this has been reported only on a very few places in this vicinity.

The frequent rains recently have handicapped the farmers to a great extent in their threshing operations, but with a few days of warm weather the work will be resumed again.

As a whole this year will be a better one for the farmers in this part of the state than any in years past, and inasmuch as the crop conditions in different parts of the state and North Dakota are turning out to be more or less a failure the market, it is expected will keep up high, and the farmer can expect to command a good price for his products.

Mr. Ole Halos, who resides about 6 miles east and 3 miles north of this city, asserts that after his products have been marketed, he expects to realize from them in the neighborhood of $3,000 and $4,000 off from his 160 acre farm.

Jumped Their Board Bill.

Frank Wagner and Geo. Carpenter, two "chimney sweeps" who had been operating in this city for some time were brought before Judge Bishop last Saturday on a charge of "jumping" their board bill at the Northern Hotel, about the latter part of August.

The two were apprehended by the Canadian authorities at Emerson and were turned over to Sheriff LaBree at Noyes, who brought them to this city. The fine imposed was the court costs and expenses.

70 Pound Squash.

Lars Thorson, who resides north of this city, has a record for raising large vegetables that is hard to beat. While in the city the other day Mr. Thorson brought in a squash that tipped the scale at 70 pounds, and which is now on display at Dan Shaw's office.

Last year Mr. Thorson raised a pumpkin that weighed 115 pounds.

These huge specimens go to show the fertility of the soil of northern Minnesota.

Grand Theatre Closed.

The Grand Theatre was closed last Monday and will remain closed for a number of weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Mc Query, who are operating the show, left last Friday evening for Minneapolis where they will remain for some time visiting relatives. Mr. McQuery expects to return to this city in about six weeks and will open his theatre to the public again.

Martin Berg, who resides about three miles east of this city, also reports an excellent crop. From the six or seven acres of flax, which he has threshed, he had a yield of 20 bushels to the acre, and expects the other 35 acres, sown later, to yield in that neighborhood.

JOHNSON RESIGNS

Agent of Bureau of Indian Affairs Holds Ideas Opposed to Those of Interior Department.

His Activity in Minnesota Caused Enforcement of Old Treaties in Northern Section.

Because his views regarding suppression of the liquor traffic among the Indians did not coincide with those of the officials of the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs, W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, of New York, chief special liquor officer of the bureau, famed from coast to coast and particularly in Minnesota has resigned.

Acting Secretary of the Interior Adams said in Washington that no fault had been found with Mr. Johnson's integrity of administration or of his character. Both the department of the interior and Mr. Johnson himself, said Secretary Adams, thought it would be better that he quit the service because certain views he held regarding the administration of his office did not coincide with those held by the department.

It was through Johnson's activity that the famous prohibition clause of the old Indian treaties was enforced in Northern Minnesota last year, causing a storm of futile protest from citizens.

"In Minnesota he began his actual work in the northern part known as the Indian country, about in March of 1909. At that time he went into the country and investigated conditions surrounding the sale of liquor to the Indians on the Cass Lake, Mahnomen and Red Lake reservations. In June of 1909 his first order went into effect closing many saloons. Through the Indian agent at Mahnomen he gave thirty days time for the saloonkeepers to quit business and when they failed he, in accordance with his order, came to Minneapolis, where he met some of his chief deputies and went north, where he swore in others. In July he had men in every town in the then restricted district and one morning at 10 o'clock in each town the deputies descended and confiscated all liquor; throwing out whiskey, alcohol and like spirits. No beer was spilt because Johnson did not know just where the law stood in the matter of beer, but did know in the matter of spirits.

Then at Mahnomen they arrested Johnson and eight of his deputies. This incident is still fresh in the minds of the people of the state. Johnson and his men had smashed the saloons and dumped the whiskey and they arrested them. He said he was working under the treaty of 1885. The prisoners were taken to Crookston and their case came up before Judge Page Morris at Duluth. They were set free.

Grand Opening, Friday, Sept. 29.

"A NEW DEPARTURE"

Mr. Sanford Dodge, so long indentified with the classic drama has secured "The Right of Way" for this season. This is a dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's beautiful novel by Eugene Presbrey. It was originally produced at Wallack's theatre, New York City by Klaw & Erlange and is one of the most powerful dramas of modern times. The character of Charley Steele, the brilliant criminal lawyer; Joe Portugais his French Canadian friend, Rosalie Evanturel, the rose of the mountain and many of the other roles are already stage classics. Not to have seen this wonderful play is to miss seeing one of the world's greatest modern dramatic creations. Mr. Dodge will present this play at the Auditorium, Sept. 29. The scale of prices will be made such that everyone who desires, may attend. Tickets on sale at Peoples Drug Store, Phone No. 211.

Price of Paper.

Editor Wheelock of Fergus Falls announces that on Jan. 1st 1912 he will raise the subscription price of his paper to $1.50 a year. This is a wise move on his part. The great advance in the price of every item that enters into the cost of a weekly paper, makes an advance in subscription price imperative. It is absolutely impossible to publish a readable weekly paper for a dollar a year. It is only by drawing on the advertising and job departments that the publisher can make ends meet. This is not as it should be. The editor of this paper is pleased to follow the example set by Mr. Wheelock, and hereby announces that beginning on Jan. 1, 1912, the price of the News will be $1.50 a year. During the coming months, those who desire to do so may pay in advance at the rate of $1 a year for one or more years.
